50,000 MILE WORLD TRIP

Sigh for More Worlds to Conquer—Visit Japan, Colombo — Wonderful Sights.

Mrs. William C. Grant and her sister, Miss Catherine A. Baker, of New York, returned recently from a 30,000 mile trip around the world, and though they are seventy-five and seventy-three years old respectively, they said they felt spry enough to start again if there was anything left worth seeing in the world that had not been seen.

EVER ACTIVE JAPANESE

"We are tanned to the bone," said Mrs. Grant to the reporter who interviewed her, "but the trip was beneficial in many ways. We left San Francisco eight months ago for Yokohama, stopping off at Honolulu to take in the diversion of surf boat riding and visiting the volcanic region. We enjoyed the stay, but were glad to get to Japan. That is the country where they do things. At Kioto we saw boys of nine years old and less learning military drills and wrestling; everywhere breathed a spirit of intense enthusiasm and patriotism, and as it was our first visit to the land of Cherry Blossoms we spent eight weeks taking in the sights.

"Oh, Colombo!" interpolated Miss Baker; "that is a delightful place. The Cingalese are a wonderful people. The men dress like women and the women like men. The men wear beautiful tortoise shell combs in their hair, and I certainly got one."

"Kandy is not at all what I had imagined," said Mrs. Grant. "We went there to see Adam's mountain, which is reputed to have his footprints marked in the rocks. Some one told us that Kandy was the real site of the Garden of Eden. Buddha's tooth is exhibited there, and of all dental monstrosities it is the worst. Think of a Buddhas tooth. Yet thousands of Buddhists and converts come there to do the relic reverence and I saw English believers in Buddhism gaze upon the age-worn piece of ivory with awe. In Darjhing we ascended to Ghoom and saw the sun rise at 3 o'clock in the morning on Mount Everest.

BLACK HOLE CALCUTTA

"We will never forget that sight as long as we live. Thirty miles away as the crow flies we could see the white capped top of the highest mountain in the world weeping behind.

Then we came down to Calcutta, visited the Black Hole, saw the Maidan and Fort William, and after a couple of day's shopping in Chowringee and Bentinck street took a steamer for the Red Sea and Northern Africa. We spent a few days in Cairo and then came up the Mediterranean, stopping at Algiers and running over to Messina, but we were not allowed to land."

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Crazed With Toothache Tries to Drown.

Brockville, Aug. 8.—Miss Minnie Cassidy, aged twenty-five years, employed as a waitress at Alexandria Bay attempted to drown herself at that place. Crazed with a toothache for which she could get no relief, the young woman went to the Cornwall dock and in full view of scores of people threw herself into the river. She went down once and when she came up Henry Dodge jumped into the water, swam out and rescued her. He had a struggle with the women but managed to get her ashore safely. Miss Cassidy resides in Prescott, Ont., and her relatives were notified

TO RESTRICT IMMIGRATION.

Bill Would Bar Asiatics, Illeterates and Criminals from States

Washington Aug. 9.—A bill providing for very stringent exclusion of immigrants was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Austin (Tennessee). It provides that all Asiatics, except public officials, merchants, students and travellers, shall be prohibited from coming into the United States, Porto Rico, Hawaii or the Philippines. It also excludes European adults who cannot read or write, who are not industrious, and who have criminal records as well as all members of the socalled "Black Hand" or similar organizations.

PLAGUE OF GRASSHOPPERS.

Pests Play Havoc in Many Parts of North Brace.

Wiarton, Aug. 9.—Reports from the surrounding territory would indicate that very few sections in North Bruce have been overlooked by the grasshopper during the past week or ten. Correspondents invariably state that the plague has visited their locality and played havoc with everything green. In the Township of Keppel they are perhaps worse than on this side of the county line. In town on Tuesday the streets were literally covered, but the pests have moved along to other parts.

FIGHTING LIQUIDATOR

Canada Mutual Fire Assurance Company wants to Live.

Montreal, Aug. 8.—The Canada Fire Assurance Company is now fighting before the civil courts a demand of liquidation presented by Mr. A. O. Bostaler, in his official quality of insurance inspector for the Government of this Province. The petitioner was represented in the Court of Practice this morning by Mr. Bissonnette, who asks that a liquidator be appointed by the tribunal and suggested the name of Mr. H. Ladreneelle. Through its attorney, Mr. J. A. Bernard, the company asked delay to prepare its plea in writing, which request was granted by Mr. Justice Mattineau, who postponed the case till Tuesday next.

NEGRO BECOMES WHITE

Peculiar Case Which has no Parallel

Le Roy, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Mr. Thomas, during the last twelve years of his life, underwent the remarkable change in color from a negro of the darkest hue to one almost white, so much that he would pass for a white man on the street by those who did not know him. Mr. Thomas first noticed small spots of white appearing on his hands, and these spots continued to spread until his entire body took on the color shown in the first spots which appeared on his hands. Such cases are very rare. It is believed that Mr. Thomas's health was impaired by the change.

Mr. Thomas was a veteran of the Civil War and a member of Staunton Post, G. A. R., of this village. His wife died about two months ago. He is survived by four children. He died here a few days ago.

GYPSIES DO WORK FOR GOVERNMENT.

Under Bond They Are Repairing Government House Utensils.

The Ottawa gypsies in the interim between police court hearings are peacefully working at their camp on Wellingtoon street west at the trade of mending and manufacturing copper and brass materials. The men today are engaged repairing a number of copper kettles and pans, the property of Government House, for the safe return of which they have deposited large sum of money.

They have at the camp an outfit of pans, kettles and other copper vessels, the property of the House of Commons. These hape been repaired and made over. The work was given them to do upon placing in the hands of the Government officials a bond for $200. The gypsies, judging from the industry shown this morning are hard working people. John and Eli Stoke are masters at the coppersmithing trade.

Montreal, Aug. 8.—Amede Lamarre a bricklayer, fell from a scaffold in the east end just as he was knocking off work for the day. Falling 25 feet he landed squarely on his feet and would probably have escaped with but slight injuries had it not been for the fact that he was wearing a long crucifix next to his body. By the force of the fall the point of the crucifix was forced into his heart, killing him instantly.

What Every Woman Requires for Headache Languor

Has your strength given out? Do you feel languid and tired this spring?

Are you pale, somewhat nervous, finding it hard to do your housework?

Thousands feel just the same. — one simply does not realize the enervating influence of silent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flannigan of Essex Junction—here is her experience. "I will never again suffer the torture of deadening spring laziness—never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I suffered through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, listless,— Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite— I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually page, blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, "aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that sorely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c at all dealers.

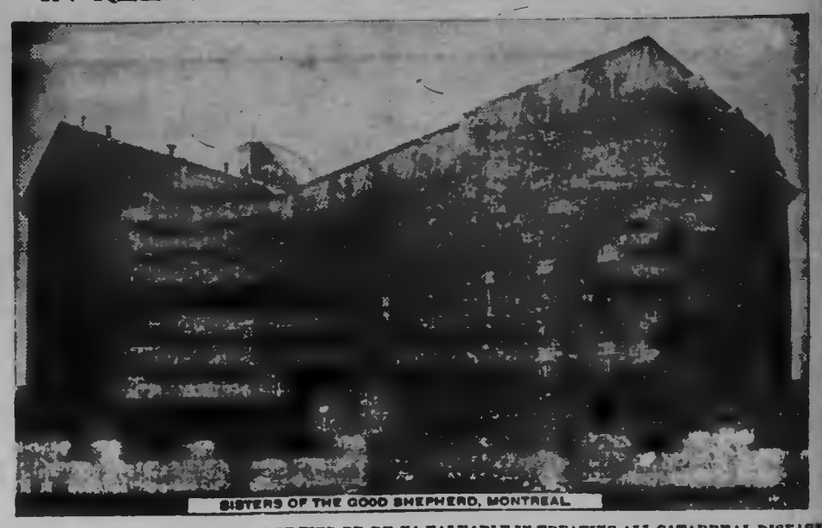
PROMINENT HOSPITALS SAY

PE-RU-NA IS EFFICIENT

IN RELIEVING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES.



SISTERS OF THE GOOD SHEPHERD, MONTREAL

HOSPITALS ALL OVER THE CONTINENT FIND PE-RU-NA VALUABLE IN TREATING ALL CATARRHAL DISEASES

Therefore, when Peruna was discovered by Canadian people to be a reliable remedy for these catarrhal diseases, it at once became a popular medicine, not only among individuals and in families, but in the great hospitals, where it was used as a preventive and relief in hundreds of cases.

These institutions do not hesitate to give their endorsement of the remedy which has been so helpful in the treatment of their poor and sick.

Among these institutions is that of the Sisters of Good Shepherd, who gave the following endorsement:

The Peruna Company,
Columbus, Ohio,

Having used Peruna for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction.

The Sisters of the Good Shepherd,
August 20, 1903. Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

Montreal, Nov. 7, 1903.

We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful.

Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

When catarrh once fastens itself upon the system it becomes an obstinate disease to eradicate.

A systemic remedy—one that reaches every internal organ of the body—is an absolute necessity.

Peruna is just such a remedy. It searches out the cause of the disease, healing and strengthening the mucous membranes, and thus giving Nature an opportunity to perform her part of the restorative process.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peruna of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital St. John, who write as follows:

"We are happy to tell you that your Peruna has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old Rascal Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peruna caused to disappear.

"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peruna is magnificent as a tonic.

"Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."

Hospital St. John, of St. Johns, Province of Quebec.

"Three weeks ago I wrote to tell you how satisfactory we found Peruna. We recommend it highly for colds, coughs, catarrh and neuralgia.

"I have used it myself as a tonic with the best results, taken as directed, half a teaspoonful every half hour."

Mrs. Etta Booker, Dundurn, Sask., N. W. T., Canada, writes:

"I suffered with internal catarrh until I wrote to Dr. Hartman, and after taking treatment as he advised, I can say I am now cured of this most trying affliction, for which I am truly thankful. I think Peruna the best medicine for catarrh. I never felt better in my life than I do at present."

Peruna not only promptly relieves coughs and colds in their first stages, but is equally prompt and efficient for catarrhal diseases in the chronic stage.

Of course, it is only reasonable to suppose that a great deal less medicine will be necessary to cure a slight attack of catarrh than would be required to relieve the ailment after it had been allowed to become chronic.

British Engineers in Peterboro' Yesterday

The British engineers, representing the British Universities' engineering trip to Canada, consisting of Messrs. N. M. Clougher and E. V. Reeves Smith, of London; H. Holcroft, of Swinton, J. T. W. Wrigg, Sheffield; and J. W. Mason, and A. J. Daish, of Tunbridge, Wells, arrived in the city yesterday morning. They are touring Canada. They were met at the station by his worship, Mayor Rush and Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Canal. A visit was made to the Canadian General Electric Works. Luncheon was partaken of at the Oriental. after which they took the Bessie Butler at the Wolfe street wharf and left for a trip over the lift lock and on up through the Trent waterway to Lake Simsoe. From there they go to Toronto and then to Cobalt.

Printers' Picnic was a Splendid Outing

The Printers picnic is once more a thing of the past and it will be a long time before it is forgotten by the 500 or more who went down on the Steamers Otonabee and Monarch One boat was not large enough to carry all and the second boat had to be made use of. The Otonabee left the wharf on time and arrived at Idyl Wyld about noon after a pleasant trip. Naturally the first thing on the program after landing was the lunch baskets and the hotel dining room. Every one had a first-class petite and the way they went after the good things would made a dispeptic hungry.

Immediately after dinner the historic ball game was called and the Examiner nine in all their regalia went out into the field followed by the pompous bunch from the Review and Times. As per usual the latter aggregation won by a score of 5-4. It was a classy exhibition, being in a class all by itself. The least said the easiest mended.

Boys' race, 12 to 15—Herb Dennie. Gir,s' race, 12 to 15—Alice Lundy Gladys Healey.

Boot race—C. Wolfe.

100 yards dash—Dick Evans, Frank Halpenny.

Young ladies' race—Lillie Herren, Eva Outram.

Sack race—Jas. Heffernan.

Pie-eating contest—Jas. Heffernan.

A special race was put on between Miss Herren and an American girl who was staying at the hotel. Miss Herren won.

The set of dishes donated by Mr. Stratton, was won by Mrs. J. Hardwicke.

The nippon pitcher donated by Mr. Dobbin, was won by Miss J. Yeates.

To the committee in charge of the excursion is due all kinds of credit. They worked without ceasing for weeks past, and it was due to their efforts that the picnic of 1909 was the greatest on record. Everyone was delighted and large numbers have already told the Times that it was the most enjoyable picnic they were ever on. Everything went off according to schedule and everything was orderly. The half thousand people were out for a good time and they had it.

Peterborough's Civic Holiday was Grand

Peterborough's civic holiday was an ideal holiday. It is safe to say that two thirds of the population or more spent the day on the water, at some quiet shaded park or visiting friends and relatives out of the city. The day was perfect for an outing. The sun was hot, the roads were good, the water was delightful and a slight breeze blew over all and made pleasant the strong rays of Old Sol. From the first break of day, the people were up and getting ready for the picnic or the trip, and every train, every boat that left the city was heavily loaded while not a bus or a livery rig could be secured by noon. Besides the half dozen main attractions called for civic holiday there were scores of private picnics down the river, out to Chemong or to some other beauty spot. Those who remained in the city were at Riverside Park or at the race matinee or else they kept in the shade of their own apple tree. Every one was happy and all are glad that civic holiday comes every year.

About two hundred paid admission to the Riverside grounds Saturday afternoon to see the Victoria Harriers athletic meet. Considering the number of other attractions in and out of the city, there was a good crowd and the men behind the venture were well pleased with the patronage handed out. The day was a little warm for the making of good time, but otherwise it could not have been better. The weather man certainly was very decient to the promoters, as even the lightest downfall of rain would have completely spoiled the track. Thanks to this good behaviour, however, it was in excellent shape. The track was laid out in the form of an oval just in front of the grand stand and was fixed by a circle of bright colored flags, which showed up very prettily against the green sward. A straightaway track of one hundred yards was obtained by cutting diagonally with another track, and this, too, was marked out by the colored bunting. The track being six laps to the mile, it was not too big to prevent the audience from following the runners throughout the whole distance and besides allowed the officials to both start and finish the races in front of the grand stand. A section of the 57th Regiment's band was present and enlivened the proceedings with rag-time favorites.

Spent Civic Holiday at Jubilee Point and Had a Big Day.

The Catholic Order of Foresters and Hibernians held their annual outing to Jubilee Point on Civic Holiday. They took down about 400 on the steamer Rainbow and the Palace show. A feature of the day was the baseball match between the two bodies which resulted in a win for the Hibernians by a score of 14-5 The following is a list of the sports:

Girls' Race, 16 and under—M. O'Dette, Sada Kelly, M. Allen.

Boys' Race under 12—Thompson, Ed. Murty, M. Murty.

Married Men's Race—J. Jones, W. Whalen.

GIVE UP IT.

Until Coffee Hits You Hard.

It is best as well to advise people to quit to coffee until they get hit hard enough so that they will never forget their experience, although it is rather unpleasant to have to look back to a half dozen years of invalidism, money and opportunity thrown away, which is really the terrible price paid for the weakest kind of a "mess of pottage."

A woman writes and her letter is condensed to give the facts in a short space:

"I was a coffee slave and stuck to it like a toper to his 'cups,' notwithstanding I had headaches every day and frequently severe attacks of sick headaches, then I used more coffee to relieve the headaches, and this was well enough until the coffee effect wore off, then I would have sick spells.

"Finally my digestion was ruined, severe attacks of rheumatism began to appear, and ultimately the whole nervous system began to break down and I was fast becoming a wreck.

"After a time I was induced to quit coffee and take up Postum. This was half a year ago. The result has been most satisfactory.

"The rheumatism is gone entirely, blood is pure, nerves practically well and steady, digestion almost perfect never have any more sick headaches and am gaining steadily in weight and strength."

"There's a Reason."

Mayor to Call a Meeting Re Burleigh Falls Power

The Times has been informed that the mayor and Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Special Power Committee, have decided to call a special council meeting at once to decide upon what action ought to be taken in reference to Burleigh Falls Power. It is several weeks now since the council succeeded, after much coaxing, in getting a month's extension of their option to enable them to engage an engineer to report on Burleigh Falls. The committee of the whole council, it will be remembered, recommended the appointment of Mr. R. B. Rogers. Since then nothing has been done. There was one council meeting since but the matter was shelved for some reason. The recommendation of the committee of the whole requires to be ratified by the whole council, and it is for this reason that the mayor and Ald. McIntyre propose to call the meeting. It is time something was done as the option will soon have expired again, and then the aldermen will once more have to go down on their knees to the company and plead for another option, which would indeed be most regrettable. If the aldermen do not want Burleigh Falls power they should say so and tell the people why they do not want it. The people want it and they also want to see the reasons why it should not be purchased. No doubt the mayor and aldermen will be successful in getting a full attendance at the council meeting.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

(Special to The Times.)

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Hanlan's Point with all its amusements is a mass of ruins, and Clara Andrews, a Cobourg young lady, who was cashier at the Figure 8, is dead as the result of an experiment with sulphur, which was carried on in a tent just in front of the theater. The total damage is estimated at $205,000, all due to the lack of care of the experimenters.

It was about a quarter to three o'clock, when some of the employes of the Gem theater, tried an experiment with a new lot of sulphur they had mixed. This sulphur is used for throwing colored lights on the ballet dancers. A portion was put on a piece of glass inside the tent and a lighted match was touched to it. After the slight explosion, it was found that the tent was on fire and the wind soon carried it to the theater, and then the big fire began, and gained in force until the whole Point was wiped out of existence. All the buildings were constructed of extremely combustible material and the efforts of the fire fighters were not noticeable. The flames gained headway so rapidly that it was impossible to save the contents of the buildings and everything was lost.

The loss includes the Hotel Hanlan, the restaurant and pavilion, which was modern, Toronto Rowing Club's house, Island bar, Picnic shelter, ice house, shooting gallery, Amusement Hall, School of Fun, grand Stand at the Athletic grounds Athletic Club house, figure 8, Dip the Dips, Gem Theater, Ye Old Mill, Giant Boat Swing, Penny Arcade. As a matter of fact the only things that did not burn were the merry-go-round and the Ferry Company's docks.

Fortunately there was not a very big crowd at Hanlan's today as the air was cool. Had it been a warm day there would have been between 30,000 and 60,000 people, and the results would have been too horrible to contemplate. The flames gained such force and were so hot that the Ferry Company had to stop their boats landing.

The fire burned itself out at the Lake Shore Hotel which was between 400 and 500 feet back from the Point. The low water pressure on the island made the streams almost useless, and the city department could do nothing when they arrived. The only effective apparatus was the fire tug, and it is only a one-horse affair.

CLARA ANDREWS DEAD.

Clara Andrews, who was cashier

Clara Andrews of Cobourg, who was cashier at the Figure 8, was burned to death. At the first alarm of fire she ran out but suddenly remembered that her cash box was still in the office. She went back for it but she was too late. The flames ate up the canvas and wooden walls of the structure so fast that she was caught and no assistance could reach her, and her charred remains were found later.

Another girl who was employed in the theater, fainted when the alarm was given, and she was carried out by a young man. He was, however, slightly burned.

Local Golfers Woo.

Fifteen golf enthusiasts from Lindsay, were in the city on Monday, and played in the afternoon with fifteen local followers of the game, with the result that 13 of the local players were victorious. Only two visitors won. The afternoon was, however, very pleasantly spent, and the return game is looked forward to. The visitors were entertained to luncheon at the Oriental Hotel.

Coroner's Jury Brought in a Verdict of Murder Against Hunter

Bobcaygeon, Aug. 10.—In the presence of a crowded Town Hall, Dr. Blanchard of Lindsay, coroner, and the jury, with A. E. Bottum as foreman, began the inquest into the death of Mrs. Joseph Hunter, who was fatally shot on Saturday, her husband being held as the guilty party. Only two witnesses were examined. Mrs. Coulter, mother of the deceased, and Mr. George Mitchell, guest in the hotel. Neither saw the actual shooting, but Mrs. Coulter heard the shot, and entering the bedroom found Hunter with the rifle in his hand and accused him of murdering his wife. To this he answered nothing. Neither did he say anything of the occurrence to Mitchell, nor when being placed under arrest.

The testimony of the mother was dramatic. She was evidently deeply affected by the occurrence and found it difficult to speak calmly, but she told a coherent story to Mr. A. T. Devlin, acting for the Crown, and in her cross-examination by Mr. Thomas Stewart, for the prisoner.

Mrs. Coulter slept in the room off that of Hunter and his wife. She was awakened early Saturday morning by the shot. She at once left her room and entered that of her daughter where the noise had come from.

WITH GUN IN HANDB.

"There I saw Hunter standing by the bed with the gun in his hands. I went over to my daughter's side.

"Then what."

"I cried 'Oh, Rose, speak to me, speak to me.' Then I turned to Hunter, and said, 'You've shot my daughter! You've killed your wife!' G "What did Hunter say?"

"He said nithing at all."

Then according to the witness Hunter went over to the bed and felt his wife with his left hand as if to see if she were dead. He then backed out into the hall without uttering a word.

In the meantime Mrs. Coulter had been screaming and the guests were aroused and Hunter was taken into custody.

In his cross-examination Mr. Stewart devoted some time to dewing out the fact that Hunter had been subject to fits of fainting spells during the last year. It is expected that the defence will be based on some plea of insanity.

THE QUEBT'S EVIDENCE.

Thomas Mitchell in his evidence told of having been awakened by the noise in the next room, and going out to the hall where he found Hunter. He asked him: "What have you done, for God's sake?"

To this there was no reply whatever. Mrs. Coulter's screams had thoroughly aroused the household and the portar was sent for the police. Hunter offered no resistance when placed under arrest or when being taken away.

Milton Hutchinson, hostler at the hotel, said he heard the shots and coming down stairs saw Hunter in the hall. He walked him out to the verandah and waited with him till the constable came, noting nothing unusual in his manner. Some time before this Mrs. Hunter had told him that Joe (Mr. Hunter) had told her "that she had too much to do with R. A. Kennedy," who was a boarder.

John Mitchell, when he heard the shot, came out of his room, and seeing Hunter, asked him what was the matter. To this he received no reply and he went back to his room to dress.

6PerceyVickers, the hotel porter, who went for the police, told of a dispute between Hunter and Kennedy about a week before the shooting. Kennedy had come in with a bill for collection to some of the items in which Hunter took exception. There were some words about it and then Kennedy remarked that he understood Hunter was talking of him as being too intimate with his wife. Hunter told Kennedy to look for another lodging room and get out.

Grace, the six-year-old daughter who slept in the room with her parents, was awakened by the shots. She said she saw her papa with the rifle in his hand and began screaming for her grandmother. Her papa told her to shut up and she ran out.

In the forecoon's evidence the grandmother had testified that the child had called out: "Grandma, mamma's shot."

Dr. Boyd, who with Dr. Thorn, conducted the postmortem said the shot had been fired at a distance of two feet and death was instantaneous. Dr. Thorn told how Hunter was killing himself with liquor, tobacco and loss of sleep. Once he took him to Toronto to have his eyes examined and while there the Toronto specialist told him to give up liquor and tobacco or he would go blind.

BOY DROWNED.

At Lakefield While Playing Around the Wharf.

Dulmer Northey, five years of age, the youngest son of Mr. Asor Northey, of Lakefield, was drowned on Saturday, while playing at the Lake field wharf at noon. A dog was largely instrumental in the finding of the body. The dog, which belongs to the boy's uncle, Mr. William Nixon, ran up to Mr. Nixon's house and noticing that the animal was particularly agitated and trying to get his attention, Mr. Nixon followed the animal to the wharf. The dog jumped in to indicate where the boy had fallen in.

Thebody was found by Mr. Northey, the boy's father, at about three o'clock Sunday morning.

Burial will take place in Bobcaygeon.

WARKWORTH WON.

Local Cricket Team Defeated on the Holiday.

The Peterborough Cricket team spent the holiday at Warkworth, and had a most enjoyable time, though they were defeated by an innings and 48 runs. Peterborough went to bat first, and the score showed at the conclusion of the innings 48 runs, Gibson having contributed 30. In the second innings they made only 39. Warkworth was there with the willow and compiled 135, and there is no need to mention any of their players as they all played magnificently, especially in the field.

A return game is expected here on the 19th, when lunch will be served on the grounds by the Coleman Bros.

Board of Works Met Yesterday Afternoon

Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, was authorized yesterday afternoon by his committee to advertise for tenders for the construction of the Smith street bridge. The tenders must be in by August 30th, and the work will be proceeded with at once thereafter.

The Board of Works met yesterday afternoon at four o'clock when several matters were put through. Those present were Ald. Phelan, McIntyre, Buller, Gillespie and Turner.

A letter complaining of the northeast corner of Stewart and Wolfe streets, was received from Mr. Lendrum. A new walk had been laid this summer and a hole was left between the walk and the street line. The engineer will look after it.

Ald. Buller moved that the stand pipe on the north side af Sherbrooke and East of George street be moved further east on Sherbrooke street. Ald. McIntyre seconded it and it carried. The water commissioners will be notified to move it 20 feet east.

SMITH STREET BRIDGE.

On motion of Aldermen McIntyre and Gillespie that the chairman be authorized to advertise for tenders for the construction of the Smith street bridge.

The committee then figured on what length of time it would require for the contractors to figure on the specifications. It was thought that two weeks after the advertisement appeared would be long enough.

A contractor will be allowed to furnish any brand of cement and get wherever he likes providing it comes up to the standard test and pass the city engineers' inspection.

Ald. Gillespie suggested that the contractors be asked to tender with the city supplying the cement and with the contractor supplying the cement.

Ald. McIntyre moved that tenders be asked straight, specifying that the cement is up to standard test of the board of works tester, and that the chairman and the engineer look after the inspector.

NEW SEWER.

Rev. Father McColl put in an application for a sewer between Rubidge and Reid St. This is part the convent and Mrs. Aaron Cox property.

Mrs. Cox refused to sign the petition and Father McColl agreed to pay Mrs. Cox frontage assessment on that sewer.

Ald. Buller and McIntyre moved that the sewer on Scott St. between Rubidge and Reid Streets be build.

A NEW WALK

Ald McIntyre and Ald Turner moved that the walk on the south side of Charlotte St. from Maitland Ave to Park St., be built.

The chairman stated that it would be impossible to get to that street for a while yet as they had the plant an another part of the city and that there were other walks which needed building first.

Ald McIntyre was very anxious and put up a big fight. Finally he said if it could not be done now to cut it out entirely.

The chairman said he would build it if at all possible and this satisfied Ald McIntyre.

CLEAN Up INSIDE

In spite of all your careful habits it is safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is pasty or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely billious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years, says W. B. daughter of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite, suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvelous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They suited me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect prmg medicine, they destroy germs and poisons of every description and trength whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today—25c. Per sale at all dealers.

Publish My Letter the World Over

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business in Portland.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that racking pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments, not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in The Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently, and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating, pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

THE BRITISH NAVY.

The recent naval demonstration in the River Thames is remarkable both from its unique character and the immense naval strength displayed in the 148 war vessels that are gathered there. There have been one or two previous occasions on which the actual number of vessels passed in review by the Sovereign exceeded that on the present occasion. But never before has there been such an aggregation seen of vessels and armaments of modern type and ready to engage in battle at a moment's notice. Another important detail is that all the vessels in the long line, stretching from Westminster Bridge to the Nore, have their full complement of men, whereas at former naval demonstrations not a few of the vessels included in them had only skeleton crews and were not equiped for action.

Notwithstanding the immense display of naval power which is now spread out before the citizens of the Capital of the Empire, the British fleets on the Mediterranean and other stations have not had their strength reduced by the withdrawal from them of ships to add to the home Fleet now in review in the Thames. The latter cannot fail to be an object lesson to the British public, and may serve to lessen the feeling of anxiety which has undoubtedly arisen in the minds of a very large section of the people as to the condition of the Navy and its ability to hold its own against any probable foreign combination. But we are inclined to think gatherings. Can the present Government be relied on to see that the supreme in Parliament and at public It is not so much the present situation, but the position of things two or three years hence, that has caused so much anxiety to be known in the Seriority of Great Britain's navy is maintained, whatever the additions that foreign Powers may make to their fleets? The coming conference between representatives of the Imperial and the Colonial governments is of great importance in regard to that aspect of the matter, since any substantial relief that co-operation by the Colonies may afford will proportionately enlarge the financial resources of the Imperial Government available for naval purposes. While this question of naval power concerns very closely every part of the Empire, it enters very greatly into the international situation and into the value of a British alliance with any other Power.

THE DEFENCE CONFERENCE.

The Conference on the defence of the Empire, which was held in London, was one of the most important gatherings that has been held in the present reign—remarkable as that reign has been for meetings concerned with the many and vast problems which the rulers and people of this great Empire have to solve. Although from its very nature, and from the reasons for which it has been summoned to meet, the Conference is concerned with warlike matters, with both land and sea armaments, its aim will be as far as possible to prevent circumstances arising that would cause either the Army or the Navy of Great Britain to fire a shot in anger. In a sense which admits of no qualification or reservation, the Conference is really and truly one of a defensive character only. The greatest interest of the British Empire; of all the various and widely scattered communities comprised within it, is peace. There is no desire for aggression; the British people view with no covetous eye the possessions of their neighbors. Br Their earnest desire is that they may live in peace with every other nation and their influence will always be thrown on the side of peace throughout the world.

This being the real situation it may seem to be remarkable that so much thought, so much attention should be given at the present time to the question of armaments, the increase of our Navy, the reorganisation of the British army and the establishment or creation in the different overseas dominions of what are designed to be the nuclei of Colonial naval or military forces. For an explanation of what a large majority of the British people deplore as an unfortunate necessity, we must look abroad beyond our own borders. In other lands, particularly in Europe, we find a feverish anxiety existing among both rulers and peoples for great additions to their armies—already in many instances much larger than in any previous periods—and for the creation or increase of their navies. As a British statesman said the other day, the situation is an armed peace, scarcely less burdensome on the people than a state of war, and fraught with great anxiety and danger lest some untoward incident should atart a conflagation among so much combustible material.

As a result of such a state of affairs Great Britain is forced to increase her armaments. The geographical position of the British Isles; the economic conditions that prevail there, whereby their people depend on foreign supplies for their food, and an empire the parts of which are scattered over the face of the globe, make it imperative that British armaments should be strong enough to defend every part of the Empire from attack from whatever quarter it may come. Great as the cost may be, it is the price of an insurance of our national existence; of the enjoyment of our possessions and of the freedom and liberty found everywhere under the British flag. The only alternative to immense armaments is a scheme of disarmament by all the leading Powers of the world. But Great Britain's proposals for such a movement were rejected at the Hague Conference and nothing remains for us to do but to see that the Empire is in a proper state of defence.

It was for this purpose that the Defence Conference was called together. In the past there has been no general system of Imperial defence, and experience has shown both the difficulty and the extravagant cost of improvising defensive forces on a sudden emergency. The people of the overseas parts of the Empire realise the importance of establishing proper defensive forces equally with those of the British Isles. How the common interests shall be safeguarded and protection afforded to every part of the Empire, is the problem which the Conference has to solve. The moral effect of such a notable gathering will not be inconsiderable. It will show to outsiders that in any conflict the aggressor will have to deal with the whole Empire which, if the plans to be considered by the Conference are carried out, will be found defended at every point. As has been already suggested, British interests require such a complete scheme of Imperial defence that the people of every part of the Empire can be enabled to pursue their ordinary avocations without fear of molestation or aggression from any quarter. That is what they seek for themselves; that is what they are ready to do their part to secure for every other nation. In all the vast sums annually exuended on the forces of the Empire in any part of it there is no thought of aggression on other nations. Its aims and objects are all summed up in the one word—Defence.

THE PORT OF MONTREAL.

The annual report of the Board of Harbor Commissioners of Montreal gives some interesting details of the progress of Canada's chief port and of the efforts made by the Board to keep its equipment fully abreast of those in any of the world's great maritime cities. The report states that the average time taken in European ports to load and discharge 10,000 tons is fourteen days. At Montreal 13,750 tons have been handled in less than three days.

That the efforts made by the Harbor Board to meet the requirements of an increasing trade have not been ineffective is shown by the above statement, and it is stated that at no previous period in the history of Montreal was the equipment of the port as good as it is at the present time. That is a matter of importance to the whole of the Dominion and not in Montreal only, but in other Canadian ports, no effort should be spared to make the facilities for shipping equal to those found elsewhere. A very small advantage to shipping in port charges, or better facilities for handling freight, will bring trade from other places and that means more employment and the circulation of more money in the community.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean, just exactly that.
I am the one physician who says to the sick "I will out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!"
And for 25 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively standard in every community—and everywhere. Then why pay the risk and all your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines?
Thousands upon thousands have to the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the Stomach nerves, or the Liver, or Kidney nerves fail, those sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when Then health fails to return, Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the drug-gist for that first test. And by that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted. Just write me first for an order.
This will save delay and disappointment.
All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line please—for I have appointed an honest and responsible druggist in almost every community, so if none by me. Tell me also which book you need. The books below will surely open up new and helpful hopes to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.
Perhaps a word or two from me will show us those serious ailments I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private correspondence or by mail. My best effort is surely worth your simple note, while you have it ready, to send, for to-morrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 81, Racine, Wis.

TRANSFORMATION OF SEOUL.

Japanese Turning Corean Capital Into a Modern City.

In writing about what the Japanese are doing in Corea, Frank G. Carpenter says: They have taken the hermit kingdom by the neck and are shaking its dry bones into action. They are establishing courts, abolishing squeezing and reorganizing the finances. They propose to build roads, to reforest the mountains, to open the mines and to turn this half-barren country into a garden. All those things are in their beginnings, but a start has been made and signs of progress are everywhere to be seen.

The capital, Seoul, is fast becoming a new city. When I came here twenty years ago the trip from the seaport, Chemulpo, took over 12 hours, and I had to have a pony and eight men to bring myself and wife to the walls. I rode the pony and the madam came in a chair, borne on the shoulders of four coolies, with a relay of four others to help them. Toward the end of the journey we had to push on for fear we might not get to Seoul before the gates closed. The city is surrounded by a massive wall nine miles in length and 30 feet high. At that time this wall was entered only by gates, and these were closed at night by heavy doors plated with iron, which were not opened again until the next day. We got in just in time to see the gates close. There was no hotel, and we had to be met by the soldiers of our legation, and were quartered there during our stay.

The city still has its walls, but the gates now stand open day and night, and an electric street car line runs through two of them and on out into the country. An electric light globe prevents the closing of the one which we entered, and another gate has proved too small to accommodate the traffic and has been cut out by the Japanese, wide roads being made through the walls on each side. The gate itself, which is a temple-like structure with a double roof of heavy tiles, has been faced with stone; and it is now proposed to put a commercial museum in the soldiers' guard-room above it. In that old gate all the industries of the new Corea will be shown side by side with those of other nations, and the people will thus be taught the various methods of manufacture and sale.

"All the Winners!"

One gets so accustomed to accepting things as they come that very few of us, when we take up our favorite paper at the breakfast-table, think anything of the number of papers published daily in the world, or of the many singular languages in which some of them are printed. The Imperial Press Conference, which is now being held in London, calls to mind some remarkable newspaper facts.

The entire number of newspapers printed all over the world is somewhere between 5,500 and 6,000, to which America contributes 1,500, Germany 900, and Great Britain 250. In Persia they have six periodicals, and Austria possesses news-sheets printed in no fewer than ten different languages—German, Italian, French Hungarian, Greek, Latin, Polish, Servian, Slavic, and Hebrew to be precise. The "Esculmo Bulletin," published in the Arctic circle, is an Alaskan paper that appears once a year. It is very "newsy."

China, despite its vast population, boasts only two dozen "dailies," but among these is the oldest paper in the world. This is the "Tsing-Pao," or "Pekin News," which was started 500 years before the Norman Conquest, and is now more than 1,300 years old. They are careful on the "Tsing Pao." In former days, an error in printing was punished with instant death.

THE WITCHES' TREE.

Superstitions Regarding the Influence of the Elder.

Country people speak of the elder tree as "the witches' tree" and planted it near farm buildings and dairies to keep off witches. They also say that the roots should never come near a well, still less grow into it, or the water will be spoiled. Evelyn's opinion was also unfavorable. The diarist says: "I do by no means commend the scent of it, which is very noxious to the air.

"We learn from Blenius that a certain house in Spain, seated among many elder trees, diseased and killed nearly all its inhabitants, which, when at last they were grubbed up, became a very healthy and wholesome place."

Cattle scarcely touch the elder, and the mole is driven away by the scent. Carters often placed branches on their horses' heads to keep off flies. Nothing will grow well in the company of the elder, and when it has been removed and all its roots carefully grubbed up it is some few years before the ground becomes perfectly sweet and good for anything.

The berries, besides feeding the birds, make excellent country wine, delicious with soda water in summer or taken hot in winter. The wood is particularly good for skewers, and a curious red fungus grows on elder stumps. A species of elder in the Tyrol is covered with beautiful scarlet berries.—Melbourne's Magazine.

Smart Electors.

At an open air political meeting in the north of England a man cried, "Hurrah for Jackson!" to which a bystander replied sarcastically, "Hurrah for a jackass!" "All right, my friend," exclaimed the first speaker. "You can hurrah for your candidate, and I'll do the same for mine."

All electors are not so gifted, as the following experience of a canvasser in Devonshire clearly indicates:

"Whom are you voting for, my good fellow?" he asked.

"I votes for the lady."

"But there is no lady candidate standing."

"Well," replied Hodge, "Poll Early comes on my voting paper before the names of the two men, and I thought I'd vote for her. See?"

THE BETH DIN.

Where Law Comes Cheaper to Jews of the London Ghetto.

In a small turning out of "Petticoat Lane" in the heart of the Jewish quarter of London, or "Ghetto," is situated the Beth Din. It may well be termed the "Poor Jew's Law Court," for not only can disputes of all kinds be settled here, but no charge whatever is made for the use of its services, the expenses of carrying it on being borne by the Jewish community. Its sittings are usually presided over by the Chief Rabbi.

Here resort Jews of all classes and nationalities to adjust differences, and obtain advice—the Russian refugee and the Roumanian outcast, the Polish fugitive and the Portuguese emigrant, old Jews with hooked noses and straggling beards, young Jewesses with glittering eyes and coal-black hair. Here sits an aged Israelite, his small skull-cap stuck far back upon his few remaining hairs. Two long curls, or "peahs," fall on either side of his face. These are regarded by orthodox Jews as evidence of piety and learning, and are never cut. His clawlike nose, his long, matted beard, his olive-tinted skin, complete the picture. You almost expect to hear him claim his "pound of flesh."

His claim is, however, of a less inhuman kind. His friend has called him a "Shabsel Tairnick"—about the grossest insult one Jew can offer to another, implying he is a follower of the impostor Messiah of that name. The rabbi elicits the fact that the complainant only received this insult after himself calling his friend a "Terdeganov," or horse thief. Oil is poured on the troubled waters, apologies are exchanged, and both parties leave the court friends.

Then follows a claim by "Minyan" men for extra payment. According to Jewish custom, on the "Jahrseit," or anniversary, of the death of a parent, a special prayer, called the "Keddish," is offered up for the soul of the departed. At least thirteen male Jews over thirteen years of age must be present, thirteen being regarded by Jews as a lucky number. This is called the "Minyan." Certain of the poorer Jews attend these services to make up the full complement of thirteen, and are paid for their attendance. This dispute is about what amount is to be paid. After much argument, a compromise is arranged.

Now come cases of all kinds. A Jew unsuccessfully seeks damages from a fried-fish vendor, because, he alleges, the oil in which the fish he purchased was fried was not "kosher"—i.e., prepared in accordance with the Jewish law. A servant sues her mistress for wages due. Various money-lending cases, disputes between landlord and tenant, etc., follow.

In the Beth Din no oath is taken. Each party is expected to tell the truth, and generally does. When, however, there is a very distinct and direct conflict of evidence, statements can be repeated on oath.

It must not be supposed that the sole function of the Beth Din is judicial. It also decides questions of ritual, appoints officers for the performance of Jewish rites and ceremonies, and examines converts to Judaism. Questions relating to the Jewish dietary laws are also decided here. There is still in existence a law, although it is obsolete by now, by which water left overnight should not be drunk, for fear lest there might be a serpent's sting in it.

A Cosmopolitan R.A.

The son of American parents, born in Florence, trained in Paris, living in London, a citizen of the United States, speaking Italian, French, German, and Spanish almost as fluently as he speaks English." Thus has Mr. Sargent, R.A., whose pictures are again amongst the most notable at Burlington House, been described. Mr. Sargeant also pleads guilty to a taste for hunting. There is a story told of a visit he once paid to Fairford, the residence of his compatriot and brother Academician, Edwin Abbey. They had had a long day's hunting, and his host was changing his clothes when he heard cries of "Horrible! Horrible!" preceding from Sargent's bedroom. Alarmed, he rushed in, only to find his friend woefully surveying the ruins of a new top-hat. "My dear fellow," he cried, "what's the matter?" "You see that hat," said Sargent. "My horse put his foot through it to-day. I was thinking how terrible it would have been if my head had been inside it."

Flower Trade of the Scilly Isles.

The Scilly Isles, five in all, lie out in the Atlantic forty miles off the Cornish coast. The development of their flower trade has changed them from poverty stricken spots into islands of the blessed. Not many years ago the inhabitants eked out a precarious and scanty living by potato culture, but one day a man of wise forethought named Trevelick came to the conclusion that flowers would bring a richer harvest. He could see them growing riotously in the little gardens, and he collected a few bulbs here and a few there until he had enough to start business with, and the first consignment he sent to Covent Gardens brought prices that are now spoken of with something like reverence. With the passing of the years flower culture has settled into a well organized trade, providing occupation for everybody who wants to work on the islands.

Lord Marcus Beresford's Advice.

At the time when Lord Marcus Beresford took over the King's horses His Majesty had only a very moderate lot of animals in training. "Well, what do you think of them, and what would you do with them if they were yours?" he asked Lord Marcus one morning as they were watching the royal string at work on Newmarket Heath. Beresford looked the horses over reflectively for a moment and then said bluntly, "Shoot most of them, I think." "Shoot them by all means, then," retorted the King.

Ingenious Paupers.

TRAINLOAD OF CHINAMEN.

And Four Cars of Silk Valued at a Quarter of a Million.

Sudbury, Aug. 6.—A special train carrying 250 Chinamen routed from Hong Kong to Boston and other eastern cities, passed through here for the east today. There was also included in the train four car loads of silk valued at upwards of a quarter of a million dollars. The Chinamen were all in bond and locked in the cars with guards stationed at all the doors so that they could not disembark.

CHILDREN AND DRINK.

The Working of the New Liquor Act in England.

A recent public holiday in England on which the masses in London are wont to disport themselves on Hampstead Heath, in Epping Forest and other open spaces within easy reach of the city, offered an opportunity to study the effect of the new Children's Act, especially that part which excludes children from drinking saloons and bars.

The day turned out wet and both the police and saloonkeepers had to be on the alert, especially at night, when the crowds returned from their day's outing, weary and drenched and with stimulated appetites for drink. The spectacle of scores of little children left in groups on the pavement in charge of one parent while the other entered a gorgeously illuminated bar, furnished food for reflection.

Perhaps the most pathetic circumstance was the various devices by which loafers, both men and women, sought to earn pence by taking charge of the tired children while their parents sat in warmth and comparative comfort, regardless of the whimperings of the little ones outside. An eye-witness noticed during the afternoon a little girl waiting outside a saloon in the rain. Two hours later he passed the house again and saw the same child shivering in her thin dress.

"Why don't you go home?" he asked her.

"I don't know my way home without father," she said.

That the new profession which has sprung up of minding children outside saloons by loafers of the worst type is dangerous needs no argument. Some saloonkeepers now provide their own nurses in uniform who attend to the children of customers.

In the East End bands of boys have discovered a new source of income by "minding kids at a penny a head." On Easter Monday a cab driver on his route, eager not to miss an opportunity furnished by the downpour of rain accepted the offer of a party of holiday makers and turned his vehicle into a miniature creche while the parents passed a convivial hour in the nearest tavern.

In another case an hostler cleared out a water trough, line it with hay and use it as a cot for infants whose parents were away drinking.

The Prison of Sark.

Sark, the loveliest of the Channel Islands, possesses a quaint old prison of two cells more as a matter of form than of necessity, for serious crime is almost unknown in the island, which has no paid police, but simply elected constable. It is some years since the prison was called into requisition, and on the last occasion the bolt was found to be so rusty that it had to be broken before the door could be opened. The prisoner was then put in, left all night with the door open and made no attempt to escape.

On another occasion a young English servant who had stolen some clothes was sentenced to three days' imprisonment. The prospect so terrified her that the authorities took pity on her loneliness and considerately left the cell open. The little maid sat in the doorway and was consoled by kind-hearted Sark women, who came to keep her company. A still more curious incident is told of a man who was convicted for neglecting his wife and children. He was ordered to betake himself to the prison and there wait for the arrival of the constable. This he did, sitting outside until the door was opened.—Strand Magazine.

Kitchener as an Orchid Grower.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Indian forces has been described as one whose work is his hobby—a man with no recreation. This, however, is a mistake. For many years past Lord Kitchener has devoted his spare time to gardening, and takes special interest in orchid culture. There is no more enthusiastic amateur than his lordship, and it is said to be his intention, when he settles down to England after August, when he resigns his command, to purchase a small estate somewhere within easy reach of London, where there is space to collect orchids on a rather large scale. He will then devote his special attention to the cultivation of many rare Indian specimens but little known in the old country at the present time.

The Sneezewood Tree.

The remarkable sneezewood tree is a native of Natal and other parts of South Africa. Its funny name was given to it because one cannot cut it without sneezing violently. The dust of the wood has just the same effect as the strongest snuff and is so irritating to the nose that workmen are obliged to sneeze even when they are planting it. If a piece of the wood of this tree is put in the mouth it is found to have a very bitter taste, and no doubt it is this bitterness which prevents insects of any kind from attacking the timber of the sneezewood tree. The fact that insects find it so disagreeable makes the wood very valuable for work that is required to last a long time.

Clergymen in Church Pageant.

The allotment of parts in a church pageant in England has now practically been completed. An interesting scene is promised in "the coronation procession of King Edward VI.," in which the mayor of Fulham will represent the lord mayor of London of the period, Rev. P. B. G. Power will participate as the Earl of Rutland, Rev. E. H Gallop will appear as the Bishop of Durham, and Rev. W. L. Marshall will represent Bishop Latimer.

"I am," answered the solicitous agent.

"Well, I wants to talk business. I ain' got nuffin' to say agin my neighbors, but I's had a lot of unexpected occurrences. I wants to see if I can arrange to get some accident insurance on my chickens coop."

A MUTUAL SURPRISE.

The Meeting Between an Ambitious Hunter and His First Grizzly.

In "Sketches of Life in the Golden State" Colonel Albert S Evans tells an amusing anecdote of an ambitious hunter who met his first grizzly bear in procession. The incident occurred in the woods near the site of the present town of Monterey.

The hunter sat down to rest in the shade of a tree and unwittingly went to sleep. When he woke it was near sunset, and he sat up, rubbing his eyes and contemplating a return to his hotel, several miles distant.

Just then a rustling and crackling noise from a clump of chaparral about 100 yards away attracted his attention. Out walked a grizzly bear, a monarch of his kind. He yawned, licked his jaws and then advanced toward the tree where our hunter sat, but evidently was unconscious of his presence.

His grizzly majesty had proceeded about twenty paces when a female bear followed him, and an instant later a third grizzly followed her at a slow, shambling pace.

The hunter sat spellbound with terror as the procession came toward him until the forward grizzly was within thirty yards. Then, scarcely realizing what he did, he sprang to his feet and uttered a frenzied yell—yell upon yell!

The effect was magical. The foremost bear sprang into the air, turned sharply about, knocked the female down, rolled over her, gathered himself up and bolted "like forty cart loads of rock going down a chute" straight for the chaparral again, the other two bears close at his heels and never turning to see what had frightened them.

The hunter, seeing the enemy retreating, sprang to his feet and fled at top speed for the hotel, leaving hat and gun behind. The truth of his wild and startling tale was proved the next day by the numerous bear tracks of different sizes found in the marshy ground near by. But the three bears had gone off beyond pursuit.

Signs of Storms.

As stormy weather comes on, sea birds fly inland in search of food, wild fowl leave the marshy grounds for higher localities; swallows and rooks fly low before and during bad weather; frogs are unusually noisy before rain; sheep huddle together near bushes and trees.

Rat Bites.

Circassian Seeds.

The bright scarlet seeds of Adenanthera pavonina are used as jewelers' weights in India, each being about four grains. They are also strung and made into necklaces. In the West Indies they are known as Circassian seeds.

The Turkish Empire.

The total area of the Turkish empire is 1,602,280 square miles and the total population over 38,000,000.

Siberian Urmans.

The Siberian "urmans" or "targas" are vast woods of pine, larch and cedar at least 3,000 miles from east to west and 1,000 miles from north to south. They are so thick and gloomy that the natives call them "places where the mind is lost."

Angleworms.

Angleworms may live fully ten years, as has been shown by experiments made in Marburg, Germany.

Camphor.

Into a basin of clear water put a few pieces of camphor. They will commence a peculiar motion, traversing every part of the surface of the water, but may instantly be stopped by dropping into the water the minutest quantity of an oily substance.

English Politeness.

The expression "Thank you" is much more current in England than in America. It is also used with much wider significance, often as the equivalent of "I beg your pardon." For instance, an English person passing before another or perhaps jostling one or even treading on his foot will say in apology, "Thank you." The phrase is heard constantly. If a salesman in a shop or a newsboy on the streets solicits your custom and you refuse it he will say "Thank you" quite as cheerfully as if you made a purchase. There is a difference in the utterance too. The English emphasize the second word very strongly and finish with a rising inflection, as if asking a question. An American is recognized at once by his assenting the word "thank" and closing with the falling inflection.

Her Proposals.

Talking of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Lord Houghton said: "Miss Coutts likes me because I never proposed to her. Almost all the young men of good family did. Those who did their duty by their family always did. Mrs. Browne (Miss Coutts' companion) used to see it coming and took herself out of the way for ten minutes, but she only went into the next room and left the door open, and then the proposal took place, and immediately it was done Miss Coutts coughed, and Mrs. Browne came in again."—Augustus J. C. Hare's Recollections.

STIRRING CAREER

London Man Came of a Long Lived Scotch Family.

London, Ont., Aug. 5.—Alex. M. Scott died here tonight aged 100 years and 3 months. He served under Papineau in 1837, was in California during the gold rush and was a veteran of the American Civil War. He lived here 40 years. His father lived to be 107 and a sister died in Scotland three years ago aged 102. Of a family of six, the youngest to die was 94.

Courteous Cabby.

A pompous looking lawyer once chartered a hansom cab, and on reaching his destination he only gave his driver the shilling required by law.

The driver looked at the coin and bit his lip. Then in the most courteous manner he motioned to his fare to get in again.

"Do step in again, sir," he said. "I could ha' druv ye a yard or two further for this 'ere."

Looking Forward.

"Johnny," said Mr. Bliggens, "I want you to study hard and learn all you possibly can."

"Did you do that?"

"No, my son, I did not. But I want you to escape the trouble my inattention has caused me. When you grow up and have a son I don't want you to be humiliated by being unable to answer your boy's questions."

Advantageous Promptitude.

Henry IV. of France particularly liked answers to his questions given quickly and without preparation. On one occasion, meeting an ecclesiastic, he said to him: "Where do you come from? Where are you going? What do you want?"

"From Bourges; to Paris; a living," replied the cleric promptly.

"You shall have it!" cried the prince.

An Oversight.

"Look here," exclaimed the angry man as he rushed into the real estate agent's office, "that plot I bought from you yesterday is thirty feet under water!"

"Pardon my oversight," apologized the gentlemanly agent. "We give a diving suit with each plot. I will send yours to you today."

Oddly Expressed.

The following letter of gratitude for services rendered appears in a London publication: "Mr and Mrs. Blank wish to express thanks to their friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted at the burning of their residence last night."

A Dinner in Mexico.

The dinner began with soup, followed by an array of courses, mostly compounds of things I did not recognise and nearly all very hot with chili peppers, but on the whole palatable. Frijoles (beans) were served just before the dulces. That is a warning that you have had all you are going to get and to satisfy yourself upon them if you have not had enough of the other things. They were well cooked and good. The bread was in the form of rolls, sweetened and of poor quality—"pan blanco" it is called. It is the characteristic bread, however, of Mexico—when bread is to be had at all. The coffee was of good quality, but, like all Mexican coffee, muddy and very strong. It is burned black in roasting, ground to a powder, boiled and served, grounds and all. You are supposed to drink the grounds.—Outing.

Runs in the Family.

Rev. W. E. A. Lewis, rector of Mt. Clemens, Mich., was born and bred in Wellington County, Ontario, and while loyal to the country of his adoption will not let the land of his birth be maligned. Righting some gross misstatements regarding Canada while at the summer camp of a number of youthful Yankees last year, his quick wit and the laugh which followed extricated him from what bade fair to be a heated argument.

"If you have such a high opinion of Canada why did you leave there?" questioned one lad hotly.

"I came to this country, my boy," said the rector with a smile, "as a missionary."

Mrs. Lewis, his mother, is a staunch Canadian, and from her he has inherited both his wit and his love for the land of the maple. Mrs. Lewis' eldest daughter is the wife of Rev. R. T. W. Webb of St. John's Church, Detroit. Some of the ladies of the parish were particularly anxious to enroll Mrs. Webb as a Daughter of the Revolution. Mrs. Webb protesting she was not eligible, they appealed to her mother, asking if she could not think of some way in which her daughter could trace back a connection with 1776.

The Memorial Tower.

The finances in regard to the erection of the Memorial Tower at the Northwest Arm, Halifax, to commemorate the establishment of representative government in Overseas Britain are progressing satisfactorily. The Dominion Government will give $5,000 towards the erection of the tower, and the Nova Scotian Government is expected to contribute generously. The Quebec and British Columbia Government will make donations, and it is expected that all the Provincial Governments in Canada will contribute something. Pending the erection of the tower, the property in the vicinity, given by Sir Sandford Fleming for a public park for the citizens, has been transferred by Sir Sandford to Lieutenant-Governor Fraser in trust, and will be handed over to the city on the completion of the tower.

Rossland Ore Find.

After being conceded to have been practically worked out by former owners, the Canadian Consolidated Co. has uncovered an ore body in the War Eagle that contains a million dollars. It is on the ninth level, and is the most important discovery in the history of Rossland. It is 400 feet long and 80 feet wide, and the 5,000 tons thus far taken from it have averaged $30 per ton. A downward continuation of this body has been located on the tenth level, and it is supposed to continue above the ninth level to the surface. The south belt, on which hundreds of thousands were spent in the early days of the camp, is experiencing a new era of development with rich results in silver and gold, to compared with the copper-gold ores of the other portions of the camp.

Must Boost Goods.

W. T. R. Preston reports to the Department of Trade and Commerce that the chief need of this country to develop trade with Japan is more active boosting of Canadian products. This, he says, can be done by direct representations of the firms. Correspondence is comparatively little use.

ARREST AN ARCH FIEND.

How the British Troops Followed and Caught Surajah Dowlah.

The loss of Calcutta and the hideous tragedy of the Black Hole were no sooner reported in Madras than an English expedition was despatched under Colonel Clive to recover the captured fortress and avenge the crime perpetrated on the unfortunate garrison. In the hostilities that followed, Clive defeated the forces of the guilty nabob, Surajah Dowlah, on the plains of Plassy, and regained Calcutta, while the conquered prince fled in trepidation back to his capital of Moorshedabad, being the first to bear to his subjects there the news of his own disgrace. The royal fugitive was, however, followed up by the English in conjunction with Meer Jaffier, a native chief, who now became the recognized nabob in place of the fallen ruler of Bengal. The deposed prince held a council with his advisers about midnight after the battle, and there refused all advice to surrender, expressing his determination to proceed further up the river to Patna, where, through the fidelity of the governor, he expected to find safety.

Accordingly, he disguised himself in humble garb, and with a favorite wife and one attendant, who carried a casket of his most precious jewels, he boarded a barge and set out. Arriving at Rajemahl, a good distance from the starting-point, his boatmen insisted upon resting for the night after their exertions, and the exnabob sought concealment in a deserted garden. In the morning, however, a man of low caste, whose ears the prince, in a fit of rage, had formerly caused to be cut off, discovered him, and in revenge betrayed the presence of the enemy to a brother of Meer Jaffier.

A band of the new nabob's soldiers at once hastened to the vicinity to seize their prey, and surrounded and arrested Surajah Dowlah while still in the garden. The captors then conveyed their prisoner back to the capital, subjecting him during the passage to every species of indignity. Arriving there, the wretched prince was dragged like a felon into the palace he had so lately occupied with all the pomp of eastern royalty, and Meer Jaffier at once gave orders that the captive be withdrawn while the council deliberated on his fate.

Some recommended clemency, others, among them his son Meeran, a mere youth, urged the safe expedient of instant death. The new nabob hesitated, and in the meantime, Meeran persuaded him to retire and leave the care of the prisoner to his hands. With some presentiment of what would follow, the nabob yielded, and Meeran lost no time in sending a band of assassins to the apartments of the captive. The latter met his fate with weak and abject lamentations, and his remains were a little later borne through the streets upon an elephant, an act which served to reduce his servile followers to implicit obedience to Meer Jaffier, behind whom was the might of a power which later established the Indian Empire under British rule.

The Prize Puzzle of the Healthe.

So Sir John Gorst, who recently surrendered a pension of $6,000, has been described, on account of his independent political views. In fact, it was said, when he cut himself off from the Primrose League, of which he was a trustee, no one but himself could understand them. Be that as it may, Sir John has proved himself a clever and successful politician, and has filled many offices. At one time it appeared as though he would some day be a bishop in New Zealand; he was one of several young Cambridge graduates who enlisted with Bishop Selwyn and went out to New Zealand to help in the evangelization of the Maoris. He edited a paper in the interests of the natives called "The Lone Sparrow on the Housetop," but it only ran for six numbers. The Maoris wanted bullets. They had no lead, so they raided the office, stole the type, and melted it down.

When Bathing Was Rare.

In some old English court memoirs of the eighteenth century it is stated that when George IV. was a baby he was bathed only once a fortnight. That was thought to be plenty often enough in those days for a child to be washed. When one of George's little sisters had measles the royal mother gave most careful instructions that the child's linen was not to be changed too soon, as she feared that some careless attendant would clothe it in garments insufficiently aired and so "drive in the rash." In those days people were much afraid of clean linen and bathing. It was believed the complete bodily ablutions were weakening, yet prince, peer and peasant alike called in at every alternate visit the doctors of the period, who bled them into a state of weakness and sometimes death.

"The Surrey Poet."

At the moment thousands of cricket followers are watching Mr. Walter Craig, "the Surrey Poet," a speedy recovery from a serious illness. Craig is the man whose rhymes on cricket and football, and the men who play the games, have sold by the million. His witticisms are famous. At Lord's one day, after a short speech to a group of spectators, who were being told of the literary gems he was willing to dispose of for one penny, a coarse-featured listener shouted out "Liar!" "Yes," said Craig, "there are two of us, and the man who lies for nothing is a fool. I make nineteen by it." "Good old Craig!" remarked a listener; "he always gets his own back."

So It Would Seem.

They were talking about silverware down at the general store the other day. Farmer Jones said he thought this firm turned out more silverware than any other, and some of the rest disagreed with him. It was Farmer Stubbs settled it.

"Seems teh me," said Farmer Stubbs "those here Sterling people do a lot o' business. Yeh see their name on most everything."

Cities Cannot Grow without good Roads

Cities and towns, in their eagerness for great railway depots and terminals, have forgotten their interest in country roads. The city is the produce of the city. The first roads on the continent were country roads, not city streets. As country roads were first in origin, so they are first in importance. There is too great a tendency among townspeople to overlook the wider application of the question of roads in general. With city paving there is certainly a greater demand for engineering skill, and the engineering difficulties appear to be farther from solution than is the case with country roads. At the same time, simplicity of country road construction is not always so real as it appears, and the difficulties are greatly increased by the defiency or funds with which to overcome them. The same obstacle, it is true, is met with in city paving, and the question becomes in each case one of obtaining the best results with a minimum or within a limited cost. In view of the strict economy demanded, the construction of country roads, in selection of materials, location, drainage, grading, bridge and culvert building and the lesser details, becomes a matter in which the greatest skill is not wasted.

People in the cities are very apt to urge that because their pavements cost so much per foot more, because the farmer receives no reciprocal use of the city streets in return for the man's use of the country roads, they have, therefore, discharged their obligation with regard to roads.

MAGNITUDE AND EXPENSES

Country road building is, however, a matter of magnitude and expense, as compared with the number and wealth of those upon whom it now commonly rests. Wherever it is left solely to the farmer it will be years before the condition of the roads will be adequate to complete development of the resources of any country. It is a great public work, in which the entire citizenship must bear a part of the cost.

Whether or not the towns and cities discharge their strict duty in the construction of streets within their limits, their prosperity is dependent upon the prosperity of the country districts, and it is but a matter of self-interest, of profitable investment, to assist in road building.

If the farmer must come over the roads to the centres of population and the railway station to dispose of his farm produce, it is equally necessary to the townsman that he should use the roads to draw the merchant's goods back to the farm. It merely happens as a matter of convenience draws his produce to the town and for obvious reasons that the farmer his purchases back to the farm, instead of the merchant hauling his merchandise to the farmer and the produce of the farm back to the town. The country roads are of quite as much benefit to the townsman as to the farmer. Because the farmer provided horses and wagon it does not follow that he should build all the roads as well.

MUST HAVE ACCESS

Without means of access a country is useless for production purposes. A farm of highest fertility, within fifty miles of Toronto, if there were not roads by which it might be reached, in the heart of Africa. Distance is not measured by miles, but by rapidity and ease of travel and transportation. It naturally follows that with the opening of the first wagon track leading to it the value of a farm commences, and as the road improves, the value of the farm advances, other conditions remaining constant. It is true that the more the country districts become filled with population the more rapidly the improvement of the roads will advance, but it is equally true that the more rapidly roads are improved the more rapidly will population advance. As population increases, the wealth of cities will increase, and it therefore points forcibly to the conclusion that one of the potent means of improving and lengthening town and city streets is to provide at the distant end of the chain or transportation, good country roads.

UGANDA ATTRACTS ROOSEVELT.

Finds Country Possesses Great Agricultural Features.

Nairobi, British East Africa, Aug. 11.—Theodore Roosevelt and his son, Kermit were the guests of honor at a public banquet given in Nairobi, Wednesday. Frederick J. Jackson, governor of British East Africa, was chairman and 175 persons sat down at the table. Capt. Sanderson, the town clerk of Nairobi, read an address of welcome to the former president, and afterwards handed him the address, which was enclosed in a section of elephant tusk, mounted in silver and with a silver chain. The American residents of the Protectorate presented Mr. Roosevelt with a tobacco box made of the hoof of a rhinoceros, also mounted, the skull of a rhinoceros, also mounted in silver and a buffalo head.

Mr. Roosevelt in reply to the toast proposed by Gov. Jackson, said: "I wish to take this opportunity to thank the people of British East Africa for their generous and courteous hospitality. I have had a thoroly good time. I am immensely interested in the country and its possibilities as an abode for white men. Very large tracts are lit for a fine population and healthy and prosperous to neglect them. But the settlers must be of the right type.

"I believe that one of the best feats performed by members of the white race in the last ten years is the building of the Uganda Railroad. I am convinced that this country has a great agricultural and industrial future and it is the most attractive playground in the world. It most certainly presents excellent openings for capitalists and ample inducements should be offered them to come home."

GIRL VANISHES.

Had Quarrel With Father and Left Note that She Would Drown Herself in the Canal.

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 11.—After 24 hours of ceaseless searching for Leita Allan, a fifteen-year-old girl in the employ of Dr. Shehan, who disappeared shortly before noon yesterday, leaving a note declaring that she was about to drown herself in the old Welland Canaal, back of the Central Fire Hall, the police are as much at sea as they were when they were first notified of the disappearance. They are not inclined to the belief that the girl carried out her threat and feel certain that she left the city, though no trace of her departure by car or train has been found.

Saturday night the girl was home and had some heated words with her father and they believe this to be the cause of her disappearance. Nothing strange in the actions of the girl was noticed yesterday morning and the first intimation Dr. Shehan had that anything was wrong was when the girl's farewell note was farewell note was found on the dining-room table.

Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

The interest in the mountain districts that are being opened up by the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, is becoming keen to the Alpine climber and the lover of adventure.

Mr. L. Stennett Amery of all Souls College, Oxford, England, was a visitor at the Grand Trunk Pacific Offices yesterday en route to the Yellowhead Pass via Edmonton and the new Transcontinental survey route, for the purpose of exploring the mountains in that locality and with the principal object of making the ascent to Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies and the highest mountain in Canada. Mr. Amery's party consists of five members including a Swiss Guide and the party will be joined at Edmonton by Mr. Amery's brother who is coming directly from South Africa for the purpose of making this trip.

NEW DIPHTHERIA CURE.

German Professor Has Substitute for Antitoxin.

Berlin, Aug. 11.—The growing prejudice in America, as in England and Germany, against diptheria antitoxin on account of the number of children who die after it is administered, even when the diptheria itself has been apparently overcome, has led Professor Fritz Meyer to make an exhaustibe investigation of the subject.

During his investigation the professor discovered that the toxin, or diphtheria, exerted a specially destructive effect on the supra-renal gland above the kidneys. He found this out at his autopsies.

He therefore made an extract from a healthy supra-renal gland and injected it under the skin in a salt solution in cases where the diphtheria had progressed past the point where the heart was affected. The supra-renal extract acted quickly and definitely in raising the blood pressure. It was the only agent he could find which had this action. Thus it would appear that the supra-renal extract, which any chemist can make, by restoring the blood pressure, save patients from death without the use of antitoxin. Further experiments are to be made by other German scientists along this line.

HORSELESS SUNDAY.

London Plans Unique Test to Show Superiority of Autos.

London, Aug. 11.—An experimental horseless Sunday is about to be tried in London, and for eight hours all horse-drawn vehicles will be excluded from the area in the Westminster district, their places being taken by auto cabs and buses. The cost of diverting horse traffic and providing automobiles to give free transit for those who otherwise would cross the area in horse-drawn vehicles is estimated at about £1,000, which sum is being raised by voluntary subscription.

It is anticipated that the experiment will have the effect of demonstrating very clearly the advantages of automobiles over horse traffic, especially from the points of cleanliness, silence, speed and control ability.

Further Particulars of Bobcaygeon Tragedy

Hunter's Terrible Crime Still Causes Much Excitement in the Village

Bobcaygeon, Aug. 11.—The terrible Hunter tragedy is still on everybody's tongue, and there is little else talked about. There is intense feeling against the man in the village and district, many believe that no plea of insanity should prevail.

INSANITY THE PLEA

At the inquest it was clear that insanity would be the excuse, and just what effect such a plea will have remains to be seen.

MOTHERLESS CHILDREN

The Lindsay Post's special correspondent says that the two little children left now without father or mother are being taken care of by friends in the village, and a great deal of sympathy is felt for them. Carman, a lad of about 6½, and Grace, about the same age, are the two children, and under the very trying circumstances are bearing up wonderfully.

WAS IT PLANNED?

The circumstances leading to the murder would go to show that the accused had carefully planned out his crime, and when the proper time came had everything in readiness.

HAD BEEN DRINKING.

For the last three or four weeks Hunter had been drinking heavily, and those who frequent the hotel had noticed a difference in his temper during the last while back. During the night he would go down to the bar and get beastly drunk, and his young son said this morning that some nights he would go down nine or ten times in a night, returning in a very bad temper.

HAD THREATENED WIFE.

That the accused had threatened his wife and abused her considerably is born out by those who are in the habit of being around the house. At times Hunter would curse and swear at his poor wife, who without saying a word took all the abuse that was coming her way. One night not long ago, it is alleged, accused had brought the rifle to his room, and placing two cartridges on his dresser said to his wife, "These will do the trick to-night." His wife at once became alarmed and had some men take the gun away from him. After that the gun was hid and the prisoner could not find it until last evening.

WAS IN HIS RIGHT SENSES

On Friday night Hunter went around as usual attending to his business. After supper on Friday he took in over $70 in bills and talked business to the men just the same as he ever did. None of those, who met and talked to Hunter that day saw anything strange about him except that perhaps he was a little drunk.

A KIND ACTION.

On Friday night Hunter was feeling rather sick and had a terrible headache. His wife sat up with him all night, bathing his head with wet cloths and only left him about four o'clock. He was then feeling better, but scolded his wife for something which he did not think was right.

A LONG RESIDENT.

Hunter, who is accused of wilfully shooting his wife, had been a resident of Bobcaygeon for some years back. He kept hotel for many years

A FINE BUILDING

The Hotel Royal, in which the murder took place is a fine, brick building of three stories. It has a large verandah and is well patronized by tourists who visit Bobcaygeon. The murder took place in room No. 14, on the second floor. The room is about 10 x 14 feet and contains a bed, dresser, wash stand and a few other articles.

A BROTHER'S GRIEF

Mr. Coulter, a brother of the murdered woman, arrived at the Hotel Royal just after Hunter had been taken to Lindsay. When told of the crime he burst into tears and could hardly contain himself. All day long he walked the halls of the hotel, sobbing like a child, and talking to himself "Oh to think," he said, "that I should have left that poor, innocent woman in this place with that wretch." A large picture of Hunter with a mica glass front hangs in the parlor, and the poor, grief-stricken brother went up to it and put his fist right through the picture of the accused. His grief can better be imagined than described.

A PRESBYTERIAN

The late Mrs. Hunter was a member of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, of this village, and Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of that church, will have charge of the funeral service on Monday afternoon.

HIS MOTIVE

Just what Hunter's motive was is a mystery to those who have known him for years. Liquor is given as the direct cause of the crime and his staunchest friends believe that he must have been crazed with drink when he committed the crime. For some time Hunter and his wife have had frequent quarrels, but no one thought that they would end as they have.

MAJOR HENRY LEONARD U.S.M.C. JOINT ARBITER

TO BE CLOSED DOWN

SPRINGHILL MINE TO REMAIN IDLE INDEFINITELY.

President Declares That Work Will Cease for Some Time—Strikers Will Not Be Taken Back.

Montreal Aug. 11.—The Cumberland Railway & Coal Company have decided to close down the mines at Springhill, N.S., indefinitely. This statement was made this afternoon by Mr. H. R. Drummond, president of the company, who added as a limiting clause, "until affairs are upon a basis where we can make a profit at the business."

Mr. Drummond stated that the report telegraphed from Springhill that Manager J. R. Cowans had issued a notice offering to take back the men on the old terms was misleading, as the company will not now take back the men on those terms.

"We have had a board of conciliation," said Mr. Drummond, "and it was proved to the satisfaction of the board that the company has been actually losing money for the last three years. Apart from any return on capital, we have lost money in actual operation. The report of the board said that "these statements were not seriously called in question by the counsel for the men. Indeed it is not likely that they are open to question.'

"In spite of these facts, which are indisputable, the men have asked for the fixing of a standard wage ten per cent. in advance of their present rate. That would mean an increase of $40,000 in the annual wage bill. Now when we are losing money at the present rates, how could we be expected to grant an increase. In the light of these facts, it seems very extraordinary that they should make such a demand. It looks like the dictation of these outsiders, of the officers of a foreign organization. It has been stated that the strikes in Nova Scotia are part of a plan to control the Canadian coal trade in the interest of the Americans. At first blush such a charge may look absurb, but in view of recent developments, does it not seem probable? If the coal trade of Canada is ruined, it is the American miners who will benefit and they form the great majority of the United Mine Workers."

The number of men employed at the mines at Springhill was about 1,200, and the annual output 450,000 tons. The United Mine Workers have been at Springhill now for a little over a year. Formerly the Provincial Workingmen's Association was in the field.

Was Operated On.

Mr. A. L. O'Brien of Toronto, who is well known here and especially through his connection with the Purity Ware Limited, has recently undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is now doing well and will soon be able to go around again. It will be remembered that his brother who was associated with him in the deal died a few weeks ago.

ON FOOD.

The Right Foundation of Health.

Proper food is the foundation of health. People can eat improper food for a time until there is a sudden collapse of the digestive organs, then all kinds of trouble follows.

The proper way out of the difficulty is to shift to the pure, scientific food, Grape Nuts, for it rebuilds from the foundation up. A New Hampshire woman says:

"Last summer I was suddenly taken with indigestion and severe stomach trouble and could not eat food without great pain, my stomach was so sore I could hardly move about. This kept up until I was so miserable life was not worth living.

"Then a friend finally, after much argument, induced me to quit my former diet and try Grape-Nuts.

"Although I had but little faith I commenced to use it and great was my surprise to find that I could eat it without the usual pain and distress in my stomach.

"So I kept on using Grape-Nuts and soon a marked improvement was ing its regular work in a normal shown, for my stomach was performway without pain or distress.

"Very soon the yellow coating disappeared from my tongue, the dull, heavy feeling in my head disappeared and my mind felt light and clear; the languid, tired feeling left, and altogether. I felt as if I had been rebuilt Strength and weight came back rapidly and I went back to my work with renewed ambition.

"Today I am a new woman in mind as well as body and I owe it all to this natural food, Grape Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Writ for $4,212 Issued Against Mr. L. Houdrey

William Edward Genno of Sudbury, the former manager of the roller rink here, has issued through his solicitors, Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon, a writ for $4,212.50 and costs against Maurice Louis Houdry. It appears that the defendant has entered upon the premises the plaintiff had rented as a roller rink, and has made use of it and the goods and chattels for his own purposes.

$2,212.25 damages for wrongfully entering upon the lands and premises leased by the plaintiff and for converting to his own use the chattels and effects of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff further claims the sum of $2000 as damages for breach of covenant by the defendant to repair the roof of the building described in the said lease.

The plaintiff also claimed an injunction restraining the defendant from using or disposing of the plaintiff's goods or chattels.

Some Horrible Crimes Revealed at Warren

John Robinson is Accused of Incest and His Wife of Child Murder— Wife's Statement

North Bay, Aug. 11.—A revolting and almost unbelievable case of moral depravity has been revealed at an inquest held at Warren into the deaths of three infants, the children of daughters of John Robinson, a well-to-do farmer living close by. Robinson is said to be the father of them all and his wife who is somewhat weak-minded from trouble is held as the murderer of the children. Robinson has fled.

Certain ugly rumors had been current for some time and last Saturday Robinson visited Warren and asked a justice of the peace to visit his house and investigate.

Accordingly on Monday, the 6th, Wright and Dr. Dixon, of Warren, visited the Robinson homestead. To their surprise they found that Jessie Robinson, a nineteen-year-old girl, had very recently given birth to a child, and also found that Ellen Robinson, a girl of seventeen years, was about to be confined. On the same day, however, Robinson had gone to Warren and was not present during the visit.

BODY EXHUMED.

The child of Jessie Robinson not being in evidence, Robinson's wife, under pressure, stated that it had died and pointed out the spot where it had been buried in the garden. The body was exhumed and brought to Warren, and this was enough to convince the authorites that there was ground for the suspicious rumors.

Robinson himself could not be found and a posse was formed, and at midnight visited the Robinson homestead again in the hope of locess. His wife, however, volunteered the further information that on the 17th and 24th days of March, 1908, children had been born to her daughters Jessie and Ellen respectively, and that she smothered both infants between mattresses. She pointed out the spot where both bodies were buried and they were exhumed and brought to Warren.

STORY AT THE INQUEST

An inquest was held yesterday at Warren before Coroner Dixon as to what caused the death of the baby born to Jessie Robinson on Aug. 7th last. E. A. Wright related the facts as above in his evidence. The only members of the Robinson family present were Mrs. Robinson, their son, John, aged twenty-one, and their daughter, Maggie, aged fourteen. The daughters Jessie and Ellen were unable to attend.

Mrs. Robinson swore that she was the mother of ten children, the eldest aged 21, and the youngest four. A child had been born to Jessie on the 17th day of March, and one to Ellen on March 24th, 1908. The children were dead and had been buried in the garden. A second child had been born to Jessie on the 7th day of August this year, and it had died and been buried. No doctor or minister had attended at either of the births, deaths or burials. She swore that the children had died on the day of birth, and James Robinson, her husband, had buried all three

THREE MILES OF WALK.

Have Been Laid so Far This Season —Three More Yet to Lay.

The Board of Works sidewalk department in charge of Street Commissioner Harry Evans, is getting along well with their work this season. They have already laid about three miles, and the season is just half over. Another three miles will be laid before the cold weather sets in. The gang is now on Sheridan street, and is up against one of the hardest proposition of the season, on account of the steep hill, the many roots and the changing of the street grade. The job will be finished however by the end of the week. The walk up the hill on Brock street, back of St. John's church has been completed, and is a decided improvement.

The street gang are not very busy this year. Only patch work is being done besides cleaning the sod off the side of the roads, and giving the streets a much better appearance.

LOCAL FACTORIES.

Were Visited By the Visiting Engineers from England.

His Worship Mayor Rush had charge of the visiting engineers from England while they were in the city yesterday. He piloted them while going the rounds of some of the leading factories. First the party went through the Quaker Oats mammoth mills, then to J. J. Turner & Sons' tent and awning factory, next to the Geo. Matthews' Company where they watched with interest the killing of the pigs, and coming back they visited the Peterborough Canoe factory where they saw the famous Peterborough canoe made. After luncheon the party was escorted by Mr. Harry Rush, jr., to the works of the Wm. Hamilton Co. The engineers were delighted with their stay here and were agreeably surprised at the large and important industries in the city.

HORSE FRIGHTENED.

At Street Car—Fell and Broke Both the Shafts.

Mr. and Mrs. Lillico had an exciting experience about a quarter to eight o'clock last night while out driving. They were passing the corner of Charlotte and George streets when the horse became frightened at the street cars and did some fancy side stepping, which made it lose its footing and caused it to fall. Both shafts were broken and the harness had to be removed before the animal could get up. Except the shafts no damage was done. Mr. and Mrs. Lillico were both uninjured

WILL LINDSAY.

Get Burleigh Falls Power Instead of Peterborough?

Ald. R. Kylie of Lindsay, has recently written to the Post of that town in which he certainly hit the right key. He pleaded to the citizens to wake up and go out into the world seeking new industries for their town and to get cheap power. He says it may not be too late to get Burleigh Falls, or they could get some of those powers in the north country. He boasts of the great amount of trade Lindsay has diverted from Peterborough to themselves from the north country because of their enterprise in getting. His boast is not an idle one either. Peterborough has certainly lost a great portion of its country trade from the north. The market here is nothing like what it used to be and it is getting smaller. The trade is going to Lindsay, and if Peterborough does not wake up also Lindsay will get the Burleigh Falls power and the big factories while Peterborough will continue in the same rut paying high rents, high taxes and have smaller revenues. With Burleigh Falls power delivered here at $10 per h.p., the future of the city would be safe. Without the power the city will die out. The council has an opportunity to get Burleigh power. Will they take it or will they give it to Lindsay?

Murdered Son Spoke to Mother Mrs. Sutton's Remarkable Story

Tragedy Described in Detail—Shot Fired to Hide the Crime—Lieutenant Beaten to Death—One of the Four Letters Made Public Yesterday

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 10.—At the Sutton hearing yesterday a remarkable letter was read from Mrs. Sutton, in which she declared that after his death her son had appeared to her and told her that he had been murdered and the manner of it.

This was one of four letters to H. M. Swarts, a clerk in the Marine Corps Paymaster's office, in Washington, D.C., which was read in private Saturday, and ordered to be public yesterday.

"The love between Jimmie and my self," wrote the mother, "was the greatest that could exist between two persons. If Jimmie met with an accident, I felt it at once. Well, the night those beasts were laying their plans for Jimmie, an awful fear came over me and my two daughters, so we could not talk, and each kept away from one another from fear of betraying our feelings. The next day Mr. Sutton came in and told me Jimmie was reported to have killed himself.

"DON'T BELIEVE IT."

"Oh, God, Mr. Swarts, (the writer exclaims, "if Jimmie had not spoken to me I would have died."

"Then Jimmie came up to me and said, 'Mother dear, don't believe it. I never killed myself; Adams killed me; they beat me to death, and then Adams shot me to hide the crime.'

"He told me how they laid a trap for him; how he walked into it; how Utley grabbed him and pulled him out of the automobile; how they had him, and Osterman beat him; about his forehead being broken, his teeth knocked out, and the lump under his jaw, and how, when he was lying on the ground someone kicked him in the side and smashed his watch.

"He begged me not to die, but to live and clear his name. Well, after three weeks I proved some things he told me were true, and after repeatedly demanding the evidence, after months I got it, and within the last month I have proven everything he told me."

JIMMIE BEATEN TO DEATH.

Mr. Birney demanded to know upon what evidence Mrs. Sutton based the foregoing accusation. She replied that the testimony of her mind proved it, together with a certain letter

Mrs. Sutton described the meeting of the officers at Carvel Hall the night of the tragedy, and lays emphasis on the fact that while her son was talking to Miss Stewart and Dr. Coleman, of the Academy, Osterman and Adams withdrew—Had had a talk.

"Now, at 1 o'clock Sunday morning," the letter continues, "Jimmie was beaten to death. That shot was fired to hide the crime. His forehead was crushed, nose broken, lip cut open, teeth knocked out and an incision in the head an inch and a half long. Just think of my boy's sufferings as he was beaten to death by those wild beats. Good God, Mr. Swarts, the work of wild men, and this on their sworn testimony, and still they are walking the streets today, while my poor boy lies in the grave stamped a suicide."

ARRESTED IN RUSSIA.

Said to Be Wanted in Connection With Jewel Robbery.

Bobrinsk, Russia, Aug. 11.—The police of this city have arrested Alexander Sheador-Tanciew, said to be a former salesman of a New York jewelry firm who is wanted by the New York police in connection with the robbery from the firm of jewels worth a large sum. Sheador-Tanciew was taken into custody for passing Russian counterfeit money, and an examination disclosed his identity. He is said to have disposed of the section property partly in Germany and partly in Russia. The prisoner admits having had dealings with the firm in question but says he was never employed by them.

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.

To Receive and Entertain Guests to the City.

A citizens' reception committee is an organization which his Worship Mayor Rush would like to have in the city to work in conjunction with the reception committee of the council. The object is to have some definite plan of entertainment laid out for visitors, such as the English engineers, and thus enable the visitors to see the city and the places of interest to the best advantage possible. It would be a good stunt for the Board of Trade to take this matter up.

Eleven Persons Perish in Western Hotel Fire

Vernon, B.C., Aug. 10.—Fire broke out in the Okanagan Hotel here about 2 a. m. this morning, resulting in the loss of eleven lives. All the victims were guests of the house.

The building, which was of brick veneer, and three storeys in height, with about 48 rooms, was a seething mass of flames by the time the fire-alarm was turned in to the fire station. Both the back and front stairways were on fire before the firemen arrived on the scene, and the guests were escaping from the burning building down the fire-escape, or at the rear, where some outhouses made their descent less hazardous.

Only by the most strenuous efforts on the part of the firemen was the fire confined to this one building, which is situated on the main street and surrounded by prominent business houses, Morris' drug store and F. A. Leveridge, real estate. The premises of the Royal Bank of Canada and P. Burns and Co. were considerably damaged. The Chinese were very active in their endeavors to save their quarters.

Up to this evening eleven bodies have been removed from the smouldering ruins, and a search for more is being carried on.

LOST LIFE IN RESCUE.

A. Hicking lost his life in an attempt to save the life of one of the domestics in the hotel, after having saved one of the daughters of Mr. Signalet, one of the proprietors.

The patients in the hospital as the result of the fire are: Messrs. Herzer, Nichols, Seale, Stringant and Hall.

The damage is placed at $25,000, and the insurance is $12,000.

A BAD FIRE.

A serious fire broke out Tuesday at the farm of Mr. Fred Malstyre, Otonabee, resulting in a heavy loss. Mr. Malstyre's barns were burned with their contents, which included ten tons of hay, twenty-five cords of barley and wheat, and about forty bushels of alsike.

The origin of the fire is not known but it is thought to have originated from spontaneous combustion in some alsike which was threshed last week and thrown out in the barnyard. Six calves and a bull were destroyed in the blaze. Some implements and harness were also lost. Some peas were burned as well.

At the time of the fire Mr. Malstyre was away from home, and his wife and a child were alone in the house.

The neighbors rendered the best assistance they could, but had no facilities for fighting the flames. Considerable difficulty was experienced saving of the barns of Mr. Wm. Ray, who lives across the road.

The loss is estimated at between $3,500 and $3,000. The amount of the insurance could not be learned.

AFTERNOON TRIP.

The Steamer Monarch will take the steamer Otonabee's afternoon trip today (Thursday).

Manitoba Needs 13-000 Harvesters

Winnipeg, Aug. 11.—Harvesting is general throughout the West now, and weather conditions are ideal for cutting in Manitoba and most of Saskatchewan. A severe storm is reported from Maple Creek, where considerable hail fell. A careful estimate of the number of harvesters required in Saskatchewan is 9,320, distributed as follows; G.T.P., 256; C.P.R., Pleasant Hills branch, 315; Moose Jaw to Outlook, 473; Yorkton to Shebo, 320, Main Line, 2,626; Arcola Line, 1,616; Wolseley, Reston, 238; Soo Line, 1,966; C.N.R.: Regina to Warman and Goose Lake District, 1,160; Main Line, 341; Brandon to Regina, 160. The Manitoba Government estimates that about 8,000 to 13,000 will be required in this Province.

Murdered from Hypnotism?

North Bay, Aug. 11.—The inquest into the death of the infant found on James Robinson's farm near Warren did not develop much, although Mrs. Robinson seemed inclined to tell all she knew, in spite of the repeated warnings by Crown Attorney Cleary that she was not obliged to incriminate herself.

The body was produced in court. The subject of the inquest was only born a short time ago, and no evidence was adduced as to the manner of its death, and Mrs. Robinson's previous statement did not mention it.

Constable Boyd visited Sudbury in search of Robinson and found that the fugitive had been there with a boy. Some of his effects were located, but no trace of Robinson himself could be found. Robinson is an expert woodsman, and his neighbors think that he will take to the woods and go far north.

Theheory is advanced that Mrs. Robinson is under the hypnotic influence of her husband, and has acted throughout under his suggestion. She has every appearance of being a hypnotic subject, and when talking of the murder of the children repeat the same language, that "Jimmie," her husband, while present, had nothing to do with it.

Jessie and Ellen Robinson did not testify at the inquest, but are present at the trial of the mother today in Warren, which will result in her committal to Sudbury jail for trial.

Lame Back

Just the Sort of Case That Proves To the World That the Best Liniment Ever Made Is

NERVILINE

When it comes to determining the real merit of a medicine, no weight of evidence is more convincing than the straightforward statement of some reliable and well-known person that has been cured. For this reason we print the verbatim statement of Juan E. Powell, written from his home in Carleton. "I am a strong powerful man, six feet tall, and weigh nearly two hundred. I have been accustomed all LETTER my life to lift great weight, but one day I No. overdid it, and wrenched my back 4769 badly. Every tendon and muscle was sore. To stoop or bend was agony. I had a whole bottle of Nerviline rubbed on in one day, and by night I was well again. I know of no liniment possessing one-half the penetration and painsubduing properties of Nerviline. I urge its use strongly as an invaluable liniment and household cure for all migor ailments, such as strains, sprains, swellings, neuralgia or aties, lumbago, rheumatism, and muscular pain."

No better medicine for curing pain was ever put in a bottle than Nerviline—over one million bottles used every year—better try it yourself. 25c or five for $1. At all dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont. 24

A FACT TO BE NOTED.

A London paper sees in the recent retirement of Prince Buelow from the chancellorship of the German Empire a significant indication of the growing power of the popular assembly, the Reichstag. Theoretically the government of Germany is responsible to the crown and not to the parliament. Hitherto, the government has actually as well as theoretically been under responsibility to the Kaiser. Prince Buelow resigned, however, because his plans in regard to the finances of the empire failed to command the support of the Reichstag.

One parliament was dissolved when the chancellor's financial proposals were condemned by its members. The new parliament condemned just as its predecessor had done. Thereupon Buelow offered his resignation to the emperor and it was accepted, a new chancellor taking office.

In brief, the Kaiser and his late chancellor have realized that no government could be successful which failed to have the support of the popular assembly in reference to matters of finance. The natural expectation is that ere long it will be realized that no government can be successful whose general policy has not the support of the people's representatives.

Constitutional government is apparently coming in Germany. When it becomes an actuality a progressive people will play a still more prominent part in world affairs and the friendship of the empire will be more to be sought after and its antagonism to be dreaded.

SHIPS OF YESTERDAY.

A few years ago two single screw steamers were built for the Cunard Line and were acclaimed as floating palaces which in size, luxuriousness and excellence of mechnical equipment could not be surpassed. Now comes the announcement that they are to be offered for sale since they no longer meet the demands of transatlantic travel. They brought the record for trips across the Atlantic down below the six day mark; now they are too slow for the service which the Cunard Line must give. Their machinery was thought to be as nearly perfect as it was possible to have it. The machinery is still good but it is not equal to that which has been made possible as the result of the study and work of the engine designers and builders of today. The steamers are still seaworthy, fit for many years of voyaging; that they are being discarded by the Cunard company merely shows how rapidly progress is made in ocean navigation in these days of advancement.

MORE MOUTHS THAN BUSHELS.

There comes just now a general warning that the cost of living rises for a good many reasons but one of them is that food supplies are not keeping pace with the growth of population. That makes more competitors for what is grown than otherwise and they bid against each other with the consequence that prices rise for food.

There is an organization, in the United States devoted to the plan of finding a way for the land men to get to the land. They have such difficulty as to be half discouraged in finding people who are willing to leave the city for the country even when life in the city is in the main a life of direct poverty and of existence through charity. When it is contended that the doctrine of Malthus —namely, that population tends always to press upon subsistence, is verified in all countries every year, we may admit it, but still insist that the argument is without special force in this age of the world because the resources of the earth for the support of its inhabitants are as yet merely scratched over and by no means drawn upon to any serious extent.

Yet there are in all cities elements of congestion, hosts of people abundantly to work and insisting upon being supported by charity because it is so much easier to live in that way than by industry and because kind-hearted people insist upon pouring out money like water for the benefit of those who ask help and put up all manner of reasons to get it.

It is impossible to be too kind and generous to those in actual need, no matter what the cause, but a large proportion of the charity work is on a mistaken basis, tending to perpetuate the very evil which it seeks to remedy.

AMONG THE ESKIMOS

HOW THEY BURY THEIR DEAD IN FAR NORTH.

Peculiar Customs of the Arctic People—Man Should Lie With Head Toward East in Grave,

Mr. R. E. Walker, of Montreal, who for many years resided in the far north, and who has frequently been within the Artic circle, passed through the city on his way to Stony Lake, where he will spend a few days with friends.. To a Times' reporter he gave a few facts of interest regarding the Eskimos.

The Mackenzie River Eskimo put the body of one who dies on the ground, sometimes on hills, but more frequently on sand pits where driftwood is abundant. The body is then covered with logs, the sled on which it was hauled to the burial place is broken up by the side of the grave, and a number of articles that the dead man had used, or owned, are left beside him. A few articles of great value, such as labrets of rare stone, ordinarily pass to the descendants of the dead man. If, however, the man had owned several pairs, one or more may be buried with him A woman's most valuable possession, her false hair, is, however, usually buried with its owner. This accounts partly for the fabulous price at which false hair is held, for the value of a good set is computed at from one to two white whale skin umiaks (a kind of boat).

Whalers assert that very often now a-days, an old, inferior gun is substituted for the better weapon owned by the dead man. This, however, the Eskimo deny. They admit that the custom is growing into disuse, and at certain recent burials no property at all was left beside the grave. In general, the Eskimo seem to have the idea that the articles left with the body are useful to the dead. Sometimes, however, these take a curious form. For instance, one man who found that he could not bury both a blanket and a rifle with the deceased relative buried two blankets and no rifle. He said that the dead man could use one of the blankets as a rifle in the future life.

Food is often placed in the grave with the dead, and it was formerly a custom to occasionally replenish this store for two or three years after the man's death. Only small quantities were put on the grave, however, a year's supply of food for the dead man rarely being equal to a square meal for the living. Sometimes articles placed on the grave were deliberately broken and the food occasionally burned, or otherwise handled so as to be unfit for the use of the living. Investigation of the older graves indicates that such articles as kayaks and sleds were almost invariably broken; while smaller things were buried in good condition. All the Eskimo agree that the labrets were not left in the man's lips, but were placed at the side of his head in the grave. Some say invariably at the right side of the head.

Eskimo from Point Barrow, and along the north coast of Alaska say that the only proper way to bury a man was with his head to the east, but the excavation of graves showed, as a matter of fact, no such uniformity. It was difficult, in some cases, to determine the original position of the body, because the graves had been disturbed by dogs, wolves, or polar bears. In fact, the body is ordinarily devoured within a day or a week of its interment. It is said that if the dead had been recognized by the community as a man of importance, more pains were taken to preserve his body, and the Eskimo frequently remark: on seeing a carefully covered grave:

"A good man must be buried there."

Mr. Walker said that he had quite enough of the far north, with its terrible climate. He had lost several of his toes through being frozen and had many narrow escapes.

KILLED BY TRACTION ENGINE.

Welland, Ont., Aug. 10.—Benjamin F. Patterson, a farmer, aged 50 yrs. lost his life at South Pelham this morning. He had just left his home with a traction engine. Mr. Patterson began to oil the gearing while the machine was in motion and, in stooping, was struck on the top of the head by the pin of the piston. He fell under the wheels, which passed over him, crushing out his life instantly. He leaves a widow and three children.

Tell Some Sick One

It Is Free If It Fails.

Will you do an act of Humanity?

Will you tell some sick friend of this, our remarkable offer?

Tell him or her, that you have learned of a medicine so certain that the maker dare say to the sick: "If it absolutely and unconditionally fail it fails."

And you, as doubt, already know of Dr. Shoop's Restorative and its remarkable

For 20 years it has been the standard remedy for Stomach, Kidney and Heart ailments everywhere in America.

When the "medicine" or controlling agency of these vital organs begins to fail, it is Dr. Shoop's Restorative that has quickly vitalized, and strengthened, and brought those nerves and organs back to health again.

I do not dose the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys—for that is all wrong.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes direct to the CAUSE of these ailments—the failing, faltering, feeble or controlling nerves. And herein lies the surprise to my patrons.

When those nerves are again made well and strong, then that is the certain end of all such ailments.

To me it is a great satisfaction that I am the only physician able to say to the suffering sick: "Take my prescription for full 30 days, and if it fails to help you, the entire expense is mine—not yours."

Then why should the sick take any chances on any other medicine, when such a liberal offer as this is open to them?

I also have a Book on Kidney Remedy—and that remedy is ignored by the same standard "Safe Rule, no risk" protective plan.

Besides, you are free to consult me just as you would your family physician. My advice and the book I believe are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will show to some sufferer all need. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my personal prescription of personal advice plan. Why not allow it to benefit your simple request?

So let me send you an order at once, take the physician to some sick friend.

If you will write the opportunity,
I will have an honest and just order from you to whom you can conscientiously so for the 30 day test.

But first, ask me for the order, for all druggists are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So write me here and save all delays, but remember never comes. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 11, Racine, Wis.

SAVED KING COBRA AT RISK OF LIFE

HEAD KEEPER AT ZOO PERFORMS DARING SURGICAL OPERATION

SNAKE IN ITS MOUTH

THIS WAS THE OPPORTUNITY FOR THE KEEPER TO LANCE A SWELLING ON ITS NECK!

New York, Aug. 10.—Charles Snyder, head keeper in th reptile house at the New York Zoological Park, took his life in his hands yesterday afternoon, and, without assistance, performed a surgical operation on Rex, the deadly king cobra. This was after more prudent and more learned scientists of the Zoo had decided that the risk was too great to be undertaken.

Rex has been in the possession of the Zoological Society for nine years and is one of its most valuable specimens. Five years ago it nearly killed a keeper.

SWELLING ON COBRA'S NECK.

Several days ago a wen-like swelling developed on the cobra's neck and grew steadily worse. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator, realized that only a surgical operation would save the serpent. Dr. J W. Reed Blair agreed, but both decided that the snake was not worth a human life.

Snyder's opportunity came yesterday. He had thrown a large black snake into the glass front inclosure for the Cobra's dinner. Rex had difficulty in swallowing. It had about half the smaller reptile down its throat and seemed helpless to get rid of the rest of it. Figuring that Rex could not sting to kill while in that predicament Snyder seized scissors and a scalpel and slipped into the cage.

WHILE SWALLOWING SNAKE.

Rex was thrashing about in its effort to down the black, but Snyder maamaged to stand astride the snake just above the head, and then with a few quick, deft cuts and slashes the work was done. Snyder jumped back and through the little door in the rear, which he slammed just in time, for the cobra had conquered the black snake and had turned to kill the man who had saved its life.

Scores of persons had witnessed the operation without realizing that they were looking at a man in imminent peril of death.

When Snyder told Ditmars, the curator said: "Man, you are crazy; you have a wife and five children."

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

SIX MONTHS AHEAD.

Scientist to Forecast Weather on New Lines.

Paris, Aug. 11.—An eminent French savant, Teisserene de Bort, made the starting announcement today that it is possible to predict the weather in some parts of the world six months ahead. He hopes eventually to be able to extend these semi-annual forecasts to all parts of the earth.

In an interview today M. de Bort explained his theory. He said:

"M. Hildebrand, a Swedish meteorologist, after years of research, has discovered that the temperature at North Cape in the summer season is exactly opposite that of the following spring in Iceland. The temperature during the spring months in the extreme northerly portions of North America was precisely the same as that in Iceland during preceding March.

"So it is possible to forecast weather conditions six months hence. What this summer's weather in Newfoundland would be was predicted from observations in Iceland. It has been established that the temperature at St. John's, Newfoundland, reaches the highest point in those years when there is the greatest quantity of ice in the ocean around Iceland."

TEETH FROM STOMACH.

Man Who Swallowed False Molars in Novel Operations.

Punxsutawney, Pa., Aug. 11.—Few physicians ever operated upon a man with the same object as did the doctors at the Adgian Hospital here today, when an abdominal incision was made on Peter Jackson, who, while drinking a bottle of pop, dislodged his false teeth and swallowed them. A physician, unable to recover the molars, forced them into the man's stomach and then rushed him to a hospital, where the operation was performed. Jackson is in a critical condition.

DOCTOR KILLS CONDUCTOR.

Women Prevent Him from Slaying Others When Ejected.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 10.—Dr. Nelson Ross, a physician of Muncie, this afternoon shot and killed Daniel Linder, conductor of a traction car, in a quarrel over the excess fare of 10 cents.

Three women passengers begged the doctor not to carry out his threats to kill others and probably saved the lives of C. E. Dudley, who was learning to be a motorman, C. E. Linsay, chief lineman, and Clarence Quick, motorman for the Muncie and Portland Traction Company.

The traction company employes put Dr. Ross off the car after he refused to pay the 10 cents required when a passenger fails to purchase a ticket. Then the physician began shooting at the men. Two shots penetrated the body of Linder.

When the women on the car saw Ross' revolver pointed toward Lindsay's heart they implored him to desist. After shouting to those in the car, "You all know he had knucks," the physician walked to Muncie and surrendered to the police He claims self defense.

Ross is 40 years old and divorced. His victim, who was 30, is survived by a widow and two children.

Abdul Hamid's Harem

THIRTEEN HUNDRED WOMEN AND MANY CHILDREN.

Constantinople, Aug. 9.—The more the Yildiz Kiosk commission delves into the mysteries of the deposed sultan's palace the more startling are the revelations. The secrets of the harem, about which romancers have written much from guess work, are now being laid bare. When Abdul Hamid, cowed and terror-stricken, was spirited away to Salonica, accompanied by only eleven women, not one more than 20 years old, he left behind more than 1,300 inmates of the harem.

In the harem were women known as the sultan's official, but not legal wives. These women were so styled because they bore children to his majesty. Still not all the women who bore him children were of this class. To be an official wife a woman must have been officially united to him on the seventeenth day of Ramasan, and thereafter bear him a child.

A child thus born is a legal offspring of the monarch, although the mother is not the sultan's legal wife. Children born to him by other women are not considered legal children. Thus it is explained how it is that Abdul Hamid, who has had number less women, can only have a few legal children.

SEEK HOMES FOR WOMEN

Since Abdul Hamid's deposition the reform government, through the Yildiz Kiosk commission, has been endeavoring to located the parents and relatives of these unhappy women. Success has followed in but very few cases. So hopeless seems the government's efforts that many of them are being given to officials to marry, while others are being assigned to villas and given pensions. More than fifty have succeeded in escaping from the capitol and making their way into Europe. A group of eighteen were returned from Paris an hour after their arrival there. This was done at the request of the Turkish government.

THIRTY-ONE REMAIN IN LONDON.

Thirty-one other women of the harem reached London and, notwithstanding official requests made repeatedly by Turkey to England for their return, the British government has refused to send them back, and is treating them well, having assigned them to handsome quarters in the West End of London, where they lead the life of European ladies, much to their delight. They go about much like other English ladies and are experiencing the novelty of having visits from friendly gentlemen, receiving and accepting invitations to tea and parties and returning the hospitality. They have attended Covent Garden balls, have been to theaters and to private dancing parties.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all Dealers.

There's nothing new under the sun Here we've been reading about those suffragets in London, when lo! from far off Dahomey comes the wail of the infant and the wail of its papa whom its mamma has set to mind it

Where is Mrs. Dahomey Suffraget? She's probably off to attend a bargain sale of sharkskin underwear, 96 cocoanuts marked down from 100.

The Dahomey woman is nothing if not practical. The man from Dahomey long was thought to be the lastest creature on earth, with nothing to do but wear a missionary's discarded silk hat and a pleasant smile. Now he has to mind the baby, and from this moving picture, the baby seems to like it better than he does.

HORSELESS SUNDAY.

London, Aug. 11.—An experimental horseless Sunday is about to be tried in London, and for eight hours all horse-drawn vehicles will be excluded from the area in the Westminster district, their places being taken by auto cabs and buses. The cost of diverting horse traffic and providing automobiles to give free transit for those who otherwise would cross the area in horse-drawn vehicles is estimated at about £1,000, which sum is being raised by voluntary subscription.

It is anticipated that the experiment will have the effect of demonstrating very clearly the advantages of automobiles over horse traffic, especially from the points of cleanliness, silence, speed and control ability.

TALES OF HORROR

FULLER PARTICULARS OF THE SPANISH OUTBREAK.

Desperate Strikers Besiege Home and Made Demands for Food and Money.

London, Aug. 11.—A large number of wealthy Spaniards have taken up their abode temporarily in London to avoid danger and trouble at home They come, of course, principally from Barcelona and other towns in the province of Catalonia. Most of them have thrilling tales to tell of mob violence, which in many respects resembled the days of the great revolution in Paris. Senor Avaredo del Ruiz, a Barcelona iron manufacturer with large interests in America, told this storey of his adventures:

"I was in Valencia when the first trouble broke out in my own city," he said. "My wife sent me an urgent telegram to return at once, which I did. We were in great trouble for some time after my return, because two of our daughters were in a convent in a distant part of the city. This convent was one of the largest and most important and had been so closely besieged by the mob that no one had been able to go in or come out except with a strong military escort.

"I succeeded finally in securing an escort for myself, and about 3 o'clock in the morning we got through the strikers' lines without serious trouble, and so I was able to liberate my two children and bring them away with me.

"Our home is on the outskirts of Barcelona, and stands in our own private park. We were quite safe there until the strikers were dislodged from the center of the city. One morning we were aroused and a large number of them encamped in our park. They sent a committee to me demanding food and money. I gave them what I could, and that night left for Paris, coming here later. I thought my family would be safer here than there."

A number of Americans who have been touring Spain have arrived here and they, too, tell similar stories.

Half Century at Key.

Norwich, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Harriet C. Williams of Sherburne, believed to be the oldest woman telegrapher in the world in point of service, resigned her position with the Western Union Company at that village recently.

For forty-two years Mrs. Williams conducted the office, but because of rheumatism, which closed both her hands, with the exception of the thumb and one finger, she was compelled to relinquish the key.

Mrs. Williams was a telegrapher for more than 50 years and was one of the very first to discard the recording system and learn to receive by sound. She is 73 years old.

SCARCITY OF TEACHERS.

Trustee Boards Have Difficulty Filling Vacancies.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Hon. Dr. Pyne minister of education, has received from one of his inspectors a letter to the following effect:

"As the time approaches for the reopening of the rural schools, it becomes necessary to draw attention once more to the available supply of teachers for vacancies occurring at this season. I may say that from the experience of a number of trustee boards, who have been advertising for teachers possessing the legal qualifications, it appears that no one so qualified can be secured for any salary less than $400."

PETERBOROUGH FAIR.

Annual Exhibition Will Be the Greatest Ever Held Here.

Peterborough's Annual Industrial Exhibition will be on September 16, 17 and 18 and the directors are very active now. They have had the several banners announcing the exhibition dates, strung up on the principal streets and they are also doing a lot of other work on the quiet. In a few days more they will begin the most active campaign of advertising Peterborough and the annual exhibition ever carried on here. At the present time the directors are closing the deals for the special attractions, for excursions to the city, and they are also working on the grounds to get them in as good shape as possible.

Report of the Agricultural Societies of Ontario.

The ninth annual report of the "Agricultural Societies of Ontario" has been published and distributed. The Times has received a copy and we wish to express our appreciation of it as it is a bureau of information of the fall fairs in Ontario. Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition ranks among the largest fairs in the province and their last financial statement shows very substantial surplus with which to work on this year, something which this society has not experienced for many years. The report also contains valuable information on many subjects relative to conducting fall faits and the care of live stock and poultry. It has a large number of fine illustrations and would be a most valuable book for all interested parties to possess.

GOOD CROPS, GOOD TRADE.

Already Prospects are Brightening Things in Britain.

London, Eng., Aug. 10.—All conditions are favorable to trade recovery and to an increase in the profits and dividends of corporations companies which derive advantage from good good trade. Reports as to the condition of the world's crops The Statist points out, have been especially favorable. "The outlook in the United States and in the Canadas is particularly good," it says.

"Rain has fallen in Argentina and there is now a prospect of fairly good crops in that country, and conditions.

QUIET DAY.

Civic Holiday was one of the most orderly this city has ever seen. There was not a single arrest made and there was no necessity for it either. The police might just as well have gone on some of the excursions for holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Williams and son Hillier, and Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Horton and daughter Eva of Butler, Pa., are at Ivanhoe Cottage, Stony Lake, for a month.

AMUSING MISTAKES.

Haughty Librarian Gives Occasion For a Quiet Smile.

It is usually the ignorant or confused frequenters of a library who are responsible for amusing mistakes, but occasionally an overhaughty guardian of literature gives occasion for a quiet smile to those she serves, according to the Youth's Companion. To a request for "Prometheus Unbound" one such replied, with chilling decisiveness, "We have no unbound books."

More recently a schoolteacher, wishing to extend her rather scanty knowledge of the stories of Edgar Allan Poe, in view of the centenary of his birth, inquired at the delivery desk of a rural library for "The Gold Bug," adding: "I can't seem to find it in the catalogue, but I'm sure you have it. A friend of mine had it out last week." The librarian glanced at the card catalogue drawer over which the teacher had been poring and smiled a superior smile.

"No wonder, Miss Jones," she explained, with patient graciousness; "you are looking under 'Fiction.' Turn to 'Entomology' and you won't have any trouble."

Smiling in her turn, a different and more genial smile, the teacher turned to "Entomology" and there indeed, duly classified with learned works on lepidoptera and coleoptera, she found the unscientific but fascinating insect invented by that master of mystery tales, who did not even know that a beetle is not a bug.

It was almost too good a joke to spoil. But instruction and correction became second nature to a teacher, and, besides, there was her duty to the public. When she departed with "The Gold Bug" under her arm she left an enlightened but crestfallen librarian.

Oddly enough, a male to this anecdote comes at almost the same time from the other side of the continent. The president of a western woman's club, also brushing up her knowledge of Poe before writing a paper on his life, sought at the local library for that weird tale of horror, "The Pit and the Pendulum."

She was referred to the card catalogue and advised to look under "Mechanics" or "Horology."

THE TELEPHONE FIEND.

We All Know Her, the Inconsiderate Person.

"Hello! That you? Yes, I just thought I'd call you up. It's warm out. Oh, I should say it is. No; it's real warm. Whatchdoin? You are? Where am I? At the bank."

So were several other women at the bank. They had stopped in to make deposits or send drafts and had gone into the women's room to wait for friends or use the telephone. One woman was waiting to telephone home that she couldn't get out in time for lunch. Another wanted to make an appointment with a dressmaker. A third wanted to telephone out to Bridget that it looked like rain and would she please shut the bedroom windows and also give the children a sunky spiece when they came home from school and not to let them play outside the yard, all of which was business, too, from some points of view. They were all brief, care relieving, time saving messages, the very sort of messages for which these phones were supplied. But there sat that creature "ugh-huhing and mmhmming" while a half dozen women waited for that one minute at the telephone that would make the rest of the day go smoothly.

And, by the way, the young person at the phone had walked in at the front door and made her way straight to that room. When at length she had used the telephones and the mirrors as long as she wished she retraced her steps, found her way back to the front door as fast as her feet could carry her, and in all probability she had never seen the sign on the receiving window.

Still she was in no way deterred from using the special privileges which the bank had provided for its patrons.

Perhaps this is too fine a point of honor to be grasped by the feminine mind.

Princess a Toothpick Queen.

The crown princess of Roumania, who before her marriage was Princess Marie of Edinburgh, expects to manufacture 25,000,000 toothpicks this year. She is the owner and active manager of a toothpick factory near Bucharest. The workers are tenants on the estate of her husband, and she takes a personal interest in all of them. She established the factory four years ago, and it is one of the largest and most profitable in Europe. Toothpicks from the crown princess' factory go into all European countries and are to be found in New York hotels in individual paper wrappers. The crown princess is planning to manufacture quill pens, many of which are used in Germany and Russia. It is said it is becoming the fashion for society women all over Europe to use quills for writing, and it is expected American women will not be slow in taking up the fad. This movement is in line with the general revival of the fashions of our grandmothers, and the crown princess, with her usual business acumen, sees a chance for profit in putting quill pens on the market.

The Grind That Dulls.

If the scissors grinder kept his blade to the whetstone unceasingly the scissors would soon be useless. The grind that dulls women is not daily household duties, but never letting up on those duties. The housewife who is knowing keeps herself sharpened with frequent change and recreation.

London Man Came of a Long Lived Scotch Family.

London, Ont., Aug. 5.—Alex. M. Scott died here tonight aged 100 years and 2 months. He served under Papineau in 1837, was in California during the gold rush and was a veteran of the American Civil War. He lived here 40 years. His father lived to be 107 and a sister died in Sept. last three years ago aged 102. Of a family of six, the youngest to die was 96.

NEW KIND OF AWNING.

Novelty Consists in Fact That Any One Can Hang It.

Where it was once necessary to await the pleasure of the upholsterer or some man of kindred trade before awnings could be hung in the spring the genius of a Philadelphian has made it possible for a householder to hang his own awnings. This man has designed a plan whereby an awning can be put up or taken down in a few minutes. At the top of the window at either side are hooks, on which a bar of wood is hung. This bar has a row of other hooks along its length, adapted to receive the top seam of the awning, which is equipped with rimmed eyelets. It can be readily seen that with such an arrangement the putting up or taking down of an awning is as simple a matter as it well could be—so simple, indeed, that the canvases can be taken down on the approach of a storm or on any occasion when they are not needed, thereby adding much to the life of these articles, which suffer most during heavy winds and rains.

SIMPLE HEALTH DRINKS.

The Sulphur and Molasses Season Has Come Again.

Many letters from correspondents on the subject recall the fact that the sulphur and molasses season has come again and that those who believe in this old blood remedy want to take it.

For this tonic the formula consists of a paste of sulphur and molasses, cream of tartar to the amount of a pinch being added to each teaspoonful of the mixture. The dose from time immemorial has been a teaspoonful every morning for three days, then three days are omitted, and another three doses on three more consecutive days are taken. Then comes another halting space for three days and a final dose the next three, making nine in all. By that time the faithful patient is usually quite willing to wait until another season before taking more. There will be no harm in repeating the routine, however.

Spearmint tea is a drink which our grandmothers believed in as being excellent for the blood, and they made it by steeping two tablespoonfuls of the dried grass in three pints of water. They regarded it as both nourishing and purifying to the blood and drank it at any time through the day.

This is pre-eminently the time when fresh green vegetables should be eaten, even if it is necessary to give up some other article of diet for them. The system craves just the properties they contain, and the blood and complexion will be much better if spinach, greens of any other kind, string beans and the like are eaten once and preferably twice a day. Fresh salads should be considered a daily necessity. Lettuce, with oil and vinegar, is wholesome, but not more than other fresh leaves. Apples, both baked and raw, will be effective as well as tomatoes, the system requiring acid to an unusual degree for several months now.

Authors Favor Suffrage.

It is very evident that suffrage is in favor among the best known authors of America, men and women, from the list of names on the national petition for woman suffrage, which includes Mark Twain, William Dean Howells, Sarah Orne Jewett, Frances Hodgson Burnett, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, Booth Tarkington, Julia Ward Howe, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Alice Brown, General Charles King, Elisa Calvert Hall, Dorothy Dix, Olive Tilford Dargan, Florence Morse Kingsley, Helen Campbell, Ernest Harold Baynes, Frederick A. Ober, Marietta Holley, James Lane Allen, Charles Battell Loomis, Ernest Thompson Seton, Grace Gallatin Thompson Seton, David Graham Phillips, Louise Imogen Guiney, Edith Semilons Tupper, Brand Whitlock, Agnes C. Laut, Edward S. Ellis, Lida A. Churchill, Hamlin Garland, Professor Edward Howard Griggs, Anna Randall Diehl, Julian Hawthorne, Charles Edward Russell, Frederic C. Howe, W. H. Ghent, Robert Hunter and Jane Addams.

Dogs' Shoes.

In Alaska even the dogs wear shoes, at least part of the time. It is not on account of the cold, for a shaggy Eskimo dog will live and be frisky when a man would freeze to death. The dog does all the work of dragging and carrying which in this country falls to the horses, and in trotting over the rough ice of the mountain passes his feet soon become bruised and sore. Then his driver makes him soft little moccasins of buckskin or reindeer skin and ties them on with stout thongs of leather.

Contentment.

Who lives for love must sorrow learn,
Who lives for gain must rest forsworn,
Who lives for power must trample low,
Who lives for fame stakes all for top,
More blest are they who toil all day
And sleep the sleep of Unnatural History.

A hare and a rabbit appear much the same,
They both have long ears and they both eat the same,
They both have long legs, they both run with speed,
They both have short tails and they both are
They both have long teeth, they both have soft fur,
They both have short noses and they both are

WEALTHY POETS.

Bardship Does Not Always Mean Starvation.

That poetry is not so badly paid after all is proved by Mr. Algernon Charles Swinburne's will, the probate of which was recently granted in London. His estate has been valued by the sole executor, Mr. Walter Theodore Watts-Dunton, at $121,000 gross, including personalty of the net value of $99,500. The whole of the property has been left to Mr. Watts-Dunton.

Tennyson left $295,000. He appointed his son his literary executor, and bequeathed to him all his manuscripts, literary works, and copyrights, subject to the payment of the income therefrom to Lady Tennyson for her life. Lord Tennyson's estate of Aldworth, the Farringford estate, the manor of Priors, and the rest of his real estate were put under trustees for Lady Tennyson for her life. The copyrights of the late Poet Laureate's works were valuable, and Tennyson was paid by the publishers handsome sums for his poems.

Robert Browning, of whose will "A. Tennyson" and "F. T. Palgrave" were the attesting witnesses, left personality in England of the value of $62,300. The will was in Browning's own handwriting, with the initial letters of all the nouns substantive in capitals, after the old style. Victor Hugo, who, like Lord Tennyson, attained the age of eighty-three years, had personal estate in England to the amount of $480,000. Dr. Charles Mackay's property was valued at $12,000, and that of Eliza Cook at $10,000. Matthew Arnold's estate amounted to $5,000. His will, in his own handwriting, was one of the shortest that have ever come under probate. It was: "I leave everything of which I die possessed to my wife, Frances Lucy." Mr. Frederick Locker-Lampson left $150,000, Mr. Coventry Patmore $43,000, and Mr. William Morris, who died in 1896, $285,000. In the last-named case, however, it is tolerably certain that poetry did not contribute a very large share of the total.

Medical Women in India.

A very strong presentiment of a case for reorganisation of the Countess of Dufferin's Fund for providing female medical aid to the women of India is contained in a report upon its working published in the Journal of the Association of Medical Women in India. The criticisms are directed at the inefficiency of much of the present surgical and nursing service, at the management of women's hospitals by inexperienced local committees, at the misapplication of funds, and many material matters of administration in hospitals supported by the fund. As regards the first of these criticisms, considering the conditions under which medical women are appointed, it would be remarkable if the highest medical talent were attracted. The women doctors are badly paid, they have no chance of promotion, and no pension to look forward to, while even definite rules for leave are not in existence.

As regards the other points, a sufficient explanation is to be found in the fact that the fund is organised and controlled entirely by men, and the women doctors have practically no voice in the hundred and one questions upon which they alone are able to speak with any authority. Naturally, a civil surgeon or political agent cannot be in a position to report on the inner working and efficiency of a purdah or zenana hospital to which his sex prevents him having access, and yet that is the system now in force. What, in fact, is wanted is the appointment of fully qualified medical women to superintend and organise the whole work.

Universal Penny Postage.

"I hope the day may not be far distant when any inhabitant of our planet—white, black, or yellow—may be enabled for the sum of one penny to communicate with any other at the lowest possible rate and the highest attainable speed." Such is the avowed ideal of Mr. John Henniker Heaton, who celebrated his sixty-first birthday recently. Amongst the most notable reforms which Mr. Heaton has brought about might be mentioned the Imperial Penny Postage scheme and the introduction of Anglo-American Penny Postage. He also introduced telegraph money orders in England, as well as parcel post to France. Mr. Heaton is a self-made man who went out to Australia in his teens and took a post as clerk in a country store.

A Man of Many Titles.

The Duke of Abercorn, who, as chairman of the West London Hospital, has made a special appeal for help on behalf of a girl who lost both arms in a tramway accident, is a nobleman who holds the proud distinction of possessing a peerage in each of the three kingdoms, and is further distinguished by being the Duke of Chatelherault in France. In Ireland the duke has a marquessate, a viscounty, and three baronies, and an earldom, six baronies, and a baronetcy in Scotland. The Duchess of Abercorn, by the way, is in the dairy business. At her Irish home she runs a model dairy on practical lines, supplying several large Belfast firms with butter and cream.

Who Watched the Archdeacon?

No man has a greater love for animals than Archdeacon Wilberforce, whose wife died a few days ago, and it was while speaking at a meeting of Our Dumb Friends' League that he told an amusing story of the days of his youth. He and a few chums escaped from school, and saw Blink Bonny, whom they each backed for $5, win the Derby. The horse won at 20 to 1. "It ran as no other horse ran before," said the archdeacon, when telling the story, "but the bookmaker who had our money ran a good deal faster."

JIMMY REYNOLDS AGAIN.

Will Make Another Try to Beat Previous Records.

Jimmy Reynolds has apparently taken to heart that Part II. reader motto, "If you don't succeed at first try again."

Port Hope's walking barber has not yet passed into oblivion. Although James has seen 58 summers, according to the cope of people who have known him for years, he still thinks he can step from Toronto to Port Hope, a distance of 66 miles, in 14½ hours. James has already made a wager of $150 to $300 that he can not only walk the distance in that time but that he will push a cart the entire route in the bargain. He is having a cart constructed specially for the walk, and thinks he can turn the trick with very little trouble. As a rule, James is a modest, unassuming chap, who can push a razor over the faces of his patrons most fastidiously. But walking is his nobby and once a man starts talking walking to the veteran manipulator of the shears, the lather begins to fly in all directions, and the razor begins to work at the rate of some 66 strokes to the second.

The best time that Reynolds ever made over the course was 16½ hours, but on that occasion he walked from Port Hope to Toronto and did not hit too hot a pace, as he had to walk back. He claims that it is easier to walk down than up, as the hills are not as bad. James will undertake to win his wager on the first day of September, and will leave the King Edward hotel at day-light

ATTEND BALL UNINVITED.

Temerity of Certain Persons is Feature of London Season.

London, Aug. 12.—A feature of the London season which has just closed has been the increased number of people who attended receptions and dances at great houses uninvited. Some of these self-invited guests vited guests even had the temerity to invade Buckingham Palace and attend the first state ball.

It was this, Truth states, that led the lord chamberlain to send a special card with each invitation, which had to be shown upon arrival at the palace. Many hostesses welcome people whom they have not invited, but these, as a rule, are brought by a common friend. There have been several flagrant cases this season where perfect strangers have strolled into a social gathering.

A well-known peer, who was interviewed, said that in many ways it was difficult to stop the custom "I have to give great political receptions," he said, "and even if I suspect a woman or man to be there uninvited, I am helpless. I might be quite wrong, and the result would be a small scandal, with the possible alienation of a valuable supporter."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WESTERN HARVEST

IT WILL EXCEED THAT OF FORMER YEARS.

Harvested Hands Needed —Canada's Exposition for 1912—Great Building Operations Throughout the West.

(Special to The Times

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 11,—Conservative crop reports show excellent conditions throughout the West generally. Some damage has been done by hail, but this—as usual—has been confined to small areas, and leaves the general crop undamaged. In spite of somewhat late seeding, the grain is well advanced, and shows every indication of ripening in good season for cutting. Some barley has already been harvested in the Brandon and Portage districts of the middle West, and the wheat harvest will begin within the next fortnight. From all reports received, it seems probable that this year's crop will be as good as that of 1908 in yield per acre plus que planting of a much larger acreage. Between the 1909 crop and the poor season of 1907, there is no comparison.

HARVEST HANDS NEEDED

There will be the usual demand for harvest hands, and the various agencies have been busy making the necessary arrangements for filling this demand. Last year it took 20,000 extra hands to gather the harvest of the West, and the 1909 crop will call for as many as that — perhaps a few thousands more. Heavy immigration figures between seasons will keep the demand down somewhat, since thousands of new settlers have been sent into the West this year, and these will be available, very largely, for use as harvest hands by farmers who have been longer in the country.

CANADA'S EXPOSITION FOR 1912

Winnipeg and the West are banking on holding Canada's International Exposition and Selkirk Centennial at Winnipeg in 1912. This project has taken a strong hold upon the people of the West, as an occasion worthy because of its historical value, but primarily worthy because it will be a great force for unifying the Dominion, and for placing the resources and opportunities of Canada before the world in a large, dignified and comprehensive manner. The work that has been done already has served to demonstrate the value of such an exposition as a creator of natural spirit and for bringing about closer relations between the several parts of the Dominion. And the West is very much in earnest in this Exposition work. Busy men of affairs are giving valuable time to committee meetings, which take place nearly every day, and no right and proper thing may be done to further the Exposition project is being neglected.

BUILDING AND FINANCE

Building throughout the West is phenomenally active this year. Leaving the new towns that are springing up along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad out of the story, building figures for the older cities show remarkable gains. In Winnipeg the amount of money expended for new buildings this year will be at least double that of 1908 and may go beyond the record of the banner year in Winnipeg—1905—when nearly thirteen millions were put into new buildings in this city. Other Western Canadian points are similarly progressive this year. The June increase in Brandon building figures was 157 per cent. over last June, and such cities as Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina and Western Canadian cities generally are making very great additions to their building values.

Western Canadian banks shows like advancement. No less than twenty-three new branch banks were opened during June, and these were added to fourteen in May and eleven in April, making a total of forty-eight new bank offices opened in the West in three months. In this growth of banking business, Saskatchewan is in first place among all the provinces of Canada, and Alberta second, facts which show where the most rapid development and growth are taking place.

COST OF STREET PAVING.

Montreal Pays Twice as Much as Toronto.

Montreal, Aug. 11.—A striking communication was read at the city Council from the Citizens' Committee. It showed that the city was being asked to pay, to Montreal contractors, no less than $1.30 a yard more for certain asphalt than what was being paid in Toronto. A letter, from Mr. G. H. Rust, Toronto City Engineer, showing an astonishing difference between Montreal and Toronto prices was attached. Mr. Rust's statement was as follows:—

"We are this season paying for a light weight asphalt pavement, with five year guarantee, consisting of 4 inches of concrete with 2 inches surface $1.15 to $1.20. This is an unusually low rate. In previous years we have paid from $1.40 to $1.50 per square yard for this grade of asphalt. For a 6 inch concrete, 1 inch binder and 2 inch surface, with the same guarantee, we are now paying $1.75 to $1.80. In previous years we paid $2.10 and $2.20."

Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

The interest in the mountain districts that are being opened up by the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, is becoming keen to the Alpine climber and the lover of adventure.

Mr. L. Stennett Amery of all Souls College, Oxford, England, was a visitor at the Grand Trunk Pacific Offices yesterday en route to the Yellowhead Pass via Edmonton and the new Transcontinental survey route, for the purpose of exploring the mountains in that locality and with the principal object of making the ascent to Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies and the highest mountain in Canada. Mr. Amery's party consists of five members including a Swiss Guide and the party will be joined at Edmonton by Mr. Amery's brother who is coming directly from South Africa for the purpose of making this trip.

Bridge Replanked.

The road bridge over the Otonabee at the locks has been replaced recently by the county. The old planks had become badly worn and the new floor was found to be a necessity. New Music.

As a souvenir of the visit here of the crack 19th regimental band of St. Catharines, Bandmaster Peel has sent Mr. Gliddon two very fine classical numbers to be added to the 57th's library. They are the overture to "Masaniello," by Auber, and the fantasy "De La Russie," by Edwin Harris. Both selections were beautifully played by the 19th at their concert here in Victoria Park, and were thoroughly appreciated by the members of the 57th. Mr. Gliddon is very much pleased to have received the numbers, and they will be played by the 57th Band after the band has had sufficient rehearsal on them.

NEW OFFICES.

The new offices which have been in course of construction for the G. Walter Green Co., Limited, Founders and Machinists, Mc Donnel St., west, are now ready for occupancy. They are conveniently situated across from the former offices, and are well adapted for general head offices for the company. The building has been divided into four rooms—two in front and two in the rear. The business offices and Mr. Green's private office occupy the front of the building, and a large drafting room for the superintendent and a safe and vault room occupy the rear. These offices present a well arranged interior for facilitating the rapidly increasing business of the company. The comfort and convenience of book keepers and stenographers have been specially considered, and all the rooms are well lighted and ventilated. The new counters, desks, office furniture and filing cabinets have been specially fitted in position, and all the walls and ceiling papered, and woodwork painted in suitable shades. The office staff are to be congratulated on their pleasant change from their former cramped and noisy quarters.

ALD. GILLESPIE'S CAR.

Finally Succumbed to the Auto Fever, and Purchased a Ford.

Ald. G. A. Gillespie has finally succumbed to the auto fever which has taken such a strong hold on the municipal fathers this year. The Times announced some time ago that the chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee was under the spell, but he denied the accusation. However the temptation was too great, and he fell. In future Ald. Gillespie will honk! honk! over the country roads at a Jack Johnson clip, and will thus have the other cheese men beaten to a standstill. The new auto is a Ford Model T fine passenger touring car with a 20-horse power engine. It was purchased through Messrs. Duffus & Drummond, and is guaranteed to carry a cargo of cheese and leave no smell behind like so many autos in the city are doing. Ald. Gillespie is the fourth alderman to get a car this year.

ENGLISH ENGINEERS.

Went to Burleigh Falls and Return —In the City Yesterday.

The party of English University engineers, who are touring Canada, were in the city all day yesterday. They did not go through to Orillia on Tuesday as was expected, as the trip was too long for one day. They went as far as Burleigh and returned on the Bessie Butler. Today they are going to Cobalt for a few days and from there to Manitoba, where they will rest for a time. Returning they will go to Orillia and take a boat there and come down the canal over the Kirkfield lift lock.

The visitors were delighted with their trip through the Kawartha Lakes and with the Trent canal.

The lift lock of course attracted much attention and admiration as did also all the works along the canal. Their visit to the city will be of considerable value to Peterborough, and to the Trent canal as their opinions will count for much in Great Britain.

VOL. XXXII NO. 188 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, FRIDAY AUGUST 13, 1909 PRICE TWO CENTS

SLAIN AT GRAVE

BEAUTIFUL WOMAN KILLED IN A CEMETERY.

After Attack and Murder Body of 17 Year Old Victim is Dragged to Crude Resting Place in Woods.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 13.—The body of Anna Schumacher, 17 years old, who left home to place flowers on the grave of her father was discovered in a lonely spot just outside the Holy Sepulchre Cemetery gates, covered with a thin layer of earth and leaves.

Constables of the town of Greece found marks of a struggle in the Schumacher family plot in the cemetery, where the flowers placed on the father's grave by the girl were still fresh.

That the girl was choked and beaten to death after being criminally attacked is the conclusion based on the autopsy held today by Coroner Henry Kleinclenst.

The strange actions of a man discovered at the scene of the murder by an employe of the cemetery late today directed suspicion toward him and for a time gave promise that an arrest would be made, but the man made his escape and it is not known who he was.

For a time suspicion was directed toward an employe of St. Bernard's Seminary, which is near the cemetery but it is learned that this suspect had been ill and had not been absent from his home for three days.

The shovel used to bury the body has been identified as having been stolen from a cow barn of St. Bernard's Seminary, near the scene of the murder. An employe of St. Bernard's has been missing since Saturday.

The girl was one of a family of eight sisters and two brothers, and lived with her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Schumacher, and her unmarried sisters.

When she did not reach home late Saturday evening, after obtaining permission to visit her father's grave the mother became alarmed and search was made. One of the brothers-in-law and a sister drove to the cemetery and made a hurried survey of the grounds, without avail, and no trace of the girl had been received until the body was found today. The stolen shovel is the only clew on which the authorities have to work.

INDICATOR WRONG.

How the Firemen Got the Wrong Number Yesterday.

Chief Howard discovered last night how the accident happened that the indicator at the fire hall did not record the number of the box from which the alarm had been sent in the afternoon correctly. It appears that one of the men was demonstrating to a visitor the workings of the alarm system. He pulled No. 1 on the indicator, and as he did so the alarm came in and he jumped to the apparatus room to catch his horse without pulling the lever on the indicator. Thus the number appeared 31 instead of 21. It was an accident which will not occurr once in a thousand times, and it was fortunate yesterday that the alarm was not for a fire. In future it would be a good plan to allow the visitors to the fire hall only a verbal explanation of the working of the alarm system. It is just as satisfactory, as very few understand it any better after they have seen it work than before. A recurrence of such a mistake would thus be prevented.

GAMBLERS PAY $50.

Four Well-known Citizens Contribute Largely to the City's Funds.

A well known Water street business stand was raided late Wednesday night by Chief Rouzel and three of his staff, and four well-known citizens were arrested and taken to the police station on a charge of gambling in a public place. Their cards and tables were also taken down and were produced at the trial yesterday afternoon. Mr. Haverson of Toronto, represented the prisoners, and they pleaded guilty after considerable discussion, and were each fined $50 by Magistrate Dumble.

Poker is a most fascinating and exciting game, and it is indulged in by a great many people. It is sometimes a rather expensive game, but for an experienced player who is wise to the new wrinkles a fine of $50 or even $100 is nothing to worry about as he will soon get it back, and with interest. These heavy fines however, are a good thing for the city treasury, and the city needs the money too.

Orillia Firemen and Band on Successful Excursion to this City

The volunteer fire department and their band are the candy boys in Orillia. The people there stand with them and give them loyal support. The excursion run yesterday under the auspices of the firemen of the northern lakeside town was a huge success. It required two trains to bring the crowd down and when they got here they started in for a good time and they got it. When they arrived in the city they were met at the station by Mayor Bush, Ald. Buller, chairman of the Fire, Water & Light Committee, Ald Hicks and Fire Chief Howard, who extended to the visitors a cordial welcome on behalf of the city and city fire department. The chief escorted the visiting band and firemen to the National Hotel where they made their headquarters. Host Denison was equal to the occasion too and used his guests in splendid style. The band played several selections during the day but for the most part they were around the city like the several hundred excursionists they brought with them. The fire station was the attraction for a large number and the local firemen were kept busy showing the visitors around.

In the evening the bands headed by the chiefs of the Orillia and Peterborough departments paraded the business section and then to the station and rendered several lively airs. The band is a good one, and its presence added much to the success of the excursion.

TROOPS WAITING TO START FOR SCENE OF ACTION

REMOVING THE WOUNDED

According to the latest cable despatches the Spanish forces in Morocco are facing a decisive battle with the Moors, against which they have been waging a most unsatisfactory campaign in and around Melilla. The tribesmen are reported to be massing in greater force than ever preparatory to an attack on the Spanish, which is always made with all the zeal and fanaticism which are ever engendered among them by the preaching of a "holy war."

While the Moors have lost heavily in every engagement so far, they do not seem to have lost any spirit or to have been weakened to any extent. Their army near Melilla is being constantly reinforced by the tribesmen from the back country, and they seem to have practically inexhaustible resources, not only for munitions of war but food supplies.

As a rule the Moors have been the aggressors and have virtually begun all the battles so far waged. Several times they have managed to either ambush the Spanish forces sent out by General Merina or to surprise them, in one of these encounters inflicting a severe blow on the Spaniards in the loss of General Pintos and other officers.

Hunter Denies Having Any Memory of the Crime

Weeps at Lindsay Jail When Tragedy is Mentioned

HE CAN'T RECOLLECT

His Mother Pays Him a Visit at the Jail

(Special to The Times.)

Lindsay, Aug. 12.—The murder of his wife was mentioned for the first time to Joseph Hunter at the county jail yesterday. Dr. Jeffers jail surgeon, and L. V. O'Connor, of the firm of Stewart & Connor, lawyers for the defence, broached the matter to Hunter. At first the accused murderer did not seem to comprehend, but after he was told straightforwardly that he was accused of murder he apparently gave up all hope.

"It's all up!" he said, in the tone of a man who has been fighting against a series of unfortunate circumstances and finally gives up.

Hunter did not seem to know why he was being kept in jail up till the time the crime was mentioned to him. He did not say anything himself about the murder and no person had spoken to him at all about it.

"You have shot your wife," Dr. Jeffers said to him.

Hunter seemed dazed and stated that it was all a blank to him. He did not seem to haveknownthat his wife was dead and in her grave.

Yesterday afternoon Hunter was crying like a child when in the jail yard for exercise. Governor Jackson takes him out every morning and allows him a certain amount of liberty in the yard.

This morning Hunter's mother and brother visited him and had a chat for several minutes in the jail. Hunter was brought from his cell and talked with his relatives in another room.

LIQUOR'S EFFECT.

Lindsay, Aug. 12.—It is an acknowledged fact among medical men that constant indulgence in alcholic drinks weakens the brain of a man, and brings about insanity to a certain degree. This will probably be the defence offered by Hunter's lawyer in the coming trial of that man for murder.

"Persistent indulgence in alcohol for three or four years, such as in the case of Hunter certainly weakens the brain," said Dr. Jeffers this morning.

"For instance the moral sense is affected and the consciences is deadened.

"Hunter is certainly affected by the continual use of alcohol. I would not like to say to what degree or whether he is insane or sane. I understand he has been drinking whiskey continually for three or four years; that he would even get up in the middle of the night to get liquor. He was in a position, too, where he could get whiskey without trouble and this perhaps made him indulge the more."

Asked as to the present condition of Hunter Dr. Jeffers stated that he ate fairly well and seemed healthy. He says he

He says he does not recollect the crime, and may not if his mind was diseased to such an extent. "I would not care to give any official opinion, but these are merely my private opinions," he said.

Dr. Meyers, an acknowledged expert on nervous diseases was secured by the defence to examine the man, and he along with Dr. Jeffers, conducted exhaustive examinations.

PASEO DE GRACIA, BARCELONA WHERE CHURCHES WERE STORMED.

Barcelona, Aug. 12.—The recent revolutionary outbreak in Spain was the worst the country has experienced in seventy years. The trouble began with the general strike, intended to be a peaceful manifestation. Then anarchists spread fires, priests were murdered, churches and convents sacked and burned and nuns' bodies mutilated. During the first few days the military made no attempt to stop the incendiaries, people seemed indifferent and the vandals met no opposition.

There are three possible sources of a renewal of the outbreak;—The calling up of conscripts, which was due on Friday but has been postponed; a new disaster in Morocco, or the punishment of the prisoners, more than five hundred of which are in the fortress of Montjuich.

The military favor wholesale shooting, but all well informed inhabitants of Barcelona agree that such action would precipitate another revolution. No prisoners have yet been shot. If the prisoners are shown clemency resistance to the government may smoulder for months, perhaps years. The lesson of the week is this:—All Catalonians have been proved republicans.

Chemong Regatta Drew an Immense Crowd and was a Great Success

A big crowd, fine weather, a nice breeze, good races and lots of sport were the chief features of the Chemong regatta yesterday afternoon. The conditions under which the annual event was held was ideal and the results were most satisfactory. Chemong Park yesterday held the biggest crowd of the season. People came from all parts, including Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Sturgeon Point, Stony Lake and Peterborough. The steamer Otonabee brought a crowd from Lindsay and steamers and yachts came from all directions. The Peterborough crowd got out by busses, automobiles, rigs and bicycles.

The entertainment provided was greatly enjoyed. The Chemong Yacht Club's club house was the headquarters for the officials and the club members and their friends, while the Chemong ladies served refreshments for the visiting ladies. The 57th Regiment Band furnished music during the afternoon and also for the dance in the evening.

The races were all very good and caused considerable excitement. The lake was dotted with canoes, skiffs, sailing yachts, gasoline yachts and floating craft of every description.

The result of the races were as follows;

Open Sailing Race—O. Milburn, B. Hopkins.

THE DANCE.

In the evening the pavilion in front of the hotel was crowded with young people who stepped the light fantastic with great pleasure for several hours. The 57th Band furnished excellent music and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

THE WEATHER.

Warm with local thunderstorms.

Thaw Must go Back to Matteawan Asylum

Hears News Calmly—Puffs Away at His Pipe Until Air is Blue—He will Have More Privileges Than Have Lately Been Granted Him

White Plain, N.Y., Aug. 12.—The State of New York won a complete victory over Harry K. Thaw today, when Justice Isaac N. Mills decided that the slayer of Stanford White is still insane and sent him back to the criminal insane asylum at Matteawan. Not one of the many contentions made by Thaw during the three weeks of his recent hearing was sustained. He is somewhat better off, however, than before he present suit, because Justice Mills in his decision suggests, and the suggestion amounts practically to orders, that Thaw at Matteawan be restored to the privileges he enjoyed during the first three months of his stay there, and that his white-haired mother be allowed all possible privileges and treated with every consideration when she calls to see him. Thaw will remain at the jail at least until tomorrow, when his attorney will be given a chance to make any formal motions before Justice Mills at his chambers in Mount Vernon.

Fire Alarm Went Wrong Chief to Make a Report

The Fire, Water & Light Committee intended giving the visiting firemen of Orillia an exhibition of the Peterborough Fire Brigade in action yesterday afternoon. Ald. Morgan sent in the alarm from box 21 at J. J. Turner & Sons' factory, at a few minutes to five o'clock. The first alarm was somewhat hazy, and the indicator at the fire hall showed No. 31. The man on watch said he counted 31 on the small bell and he gave that number to the firemen. The apparatus was therefore taken to box 31 on Park street and were therefore delayed some time in getting around to box 21, and the exhibition was spoiled to a great extent.

The alarm sounded a second time, on the big bell and it recorded all right, but it was too late. Then when the firemen did not turn up Ald. Morgan sent in a second alarm and it sounded all right and soon afterwards the brigade arrived at the correct corner.

An investigation was held by the chairman of the committee, Ald. Morgan and Chief Howard. When they got to the fire hall the indicator showed 31 all right, and how that happened was the mystery. No one could explain. The chief, however, will go further into the matter and will report to the committee at its next meeting.

Posse of Police Search Woods for Jas. Robinson

Hideous Crime Shocks the North—Terrible Practices Going on for Years—Two Committed for Trial

Warren, Ont., Aug. 12.— Hunted through the woods like a wild animal, James Robinson, who, according to his wife's story has been guilty of incest of the most revolting kind, is still at large in the bush somewhere in this vicinity.

He did not go West, as was supposed, but has merely been in hiding since Monday last, when he vanished. Yesterday morning about seven o'clock he appeared at his home and said good bye to his daughters, and it is said, expressed sorrow for what he had done.

HUNT CONTINUES TODAY.

He was gone before the authorities were notified, and has not been seen since. Provincial Constable Boyd of Warren; Provincial Constable Thompson of Sudbury, and Provincial Constable A. C. Storey of Webbwood, with Special C considerable discussion, and were with Special Constables Wm. Monroe, Lawrence Shea, A. Lamarche yesterday and most of last night in the search for Rob

For Mrs. Robinson much sympathy is felt. It is believed that her crime was the result solely of her desire to shield her husband, and that she did not realize the enormity of the offence which she has confessed to, that of murdering her daughters' infant children.

Mrs. Robinson's preliminary trial took place yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Wright. She pleaded guilty but made no statement. She was committed for trial, and left on the midnight train for Sudbury in charge of Constable Charles Chapman.

Mrs. Robinson comes of good family. She was a Miss Matheson, and comes from near Pembroke. Her brother, who is a well-known Presbyterian minister, is here with her, and accompanied her to Sudbury last night, returning today.

SWEDISH FARMERS BEG HELP.

No Hands for Harvest—Union Paper Stockholm's Only News.

Stockholm, Aug. 13.—The opening of the second week of the labor troubles in Sweden shows no abatement of the conflict and the men already on strike continue to augment their forces from other trades. A general strike of railroad men is threatened for Wednesday.

The Farmers' Association today appealed to all classes to help them save the cereal crop, and the government supplemented this by offering police protection to all persons assisting in the harvest. Street cars are running on time in the capital and on all lines to Gothenburg, operated by strike-breakers.

The compositors struck this evening, but the strike will not become general because some provincial unions refuse to break their contracts. As a result of the refusal of the newsvenders to distribute papers not having socialistic tendencies, the only newspaper which will appear in this city tomorrow will be the organ of the trades unions, the Answer.

Twenty strikers were arrested today at Vesteras, sixty miles northwest of here, for attempting to compel agricultural laborers to leave their work.

A delegate of the Central Federation of Trade Unions named Tholin, will leave shortly for the United States to collect contributions from Swedish-Americans.

Back From Rome.

Venerable Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay who has been visiting Europe for the past few weeks, is expected to arrive home on Sunday next and his friends intend extending to their pastor a right royal welcome.

Father Casey has been on a pilgrimage to Rome, when he had an interview with the Pope. His many friends in Peterborough will be pleased to hear of his safe return.

TREATING SICK

By Wireless Is the Latest Achievement.

New Bedford, Mass. Aug. 12.—Treating a sick man on board the lonely Nantucket lightship by wireless is the latest achievement of those aboard the ship. A few days ago, Capt. Doane, of the light vessel, was taken sick, and as there was no doctor aboard the crew did not know just what to do. A wireless message to the naval hospital at Newport, however, brought detailed instructions from a surgeon there, and the prescription that was sent up from the medicine chest on the lightship by the crew.

The naval surgeon was kept constantly informed of the captain's condition, and he began to improve soon after the long-distance treatment began. Today he was reported as being convalescent.

A HUMAN JEWEL SHOP.

Smuggler on Ocean Liner Has Big Stock.

New York, Aug. 12.—After most of the passengers on the Red Star line Laplanc had left the pier today Special Customs Inspector Timothy Donohue made an important seizure. He had spent several hours rubbing up against the cabin passengers, and finally noticing something suspicious about Aaron Greenberg of 331 East Houston street, ordered him aboard for examination. On reaching his stateroom Greenberg was searched, and in a concealed pocket was found a wallet containing six diamond rings valued at $100 each. In another pocket were found six more of similar value.

Around each of his legs—inside his underclothing—were tied strings, and from these dangled twelve coral necklaces. On other parts of his person were found eight pairs of ladies' kid gloves and five pocket-books.

To Hoarse to Speak

"I had a patient with Quinsy that I found great difficulty in curing," states Dr. Wilson. "Every time he caught cold or got chilled he suffered intensely from sore throat, huskiness, throat and chest soreness. After every attack his throat and chest seemed more sensitive. This patient lived in the country, and couldn't come to the city for treatment. I concluded that the NERVILINE best remedy would be an honest linim- CURES ent, and because of its enormous sale QUINSY and well-known mer- it, I advised Nerviline. Morning, noon, and night Nerviline was rubbed over the neck and once a day diluted with water it was used as a gargle. In a day or two my patient reported an improvement, and by continuing the treatment with Nerviline he was cured. I can recommend Nerviline for breaking up colds, for chest tightness, throat, inflammation, quinsy, tonsilitis and similar conditions."

Not a druggist or doctor who has examined the formula of Nerviline who won't tell you how good it is—why it contains the best medicaments known to science and for general family use has no equal. 25

IS JAPAN FAIR TO CHINA?

The issue between Japan and China over the little stretch of railroad between Antung on the Korean border and Mukden is not one which we need fear will result in war. Nor is it an issue of great importance for either of the two countries. It has interest, however, in casting light on the attitude which the two nations are adopting toward each other. It is a straw to show which way the wind is blowing.

Japan built a narrow-gauge railway over this route in connection with her war operations against Russia. In the agreement with China following on the declaration of peace she was given the right to improve this road and maintain it for fifteen years, but was then under obligations to turn it over to China at an agreed price.

Mainly, we may assume, out of fore-thought for the possible military operations of the future, Japan now wants to turn this road into a standard gauge and provide it with expensive equipment. She assumes the right to do all this under her agreement.

China, however, feels that such reconstruction would go far beyond the original plans, and since it is she who must ultimately repay the money that is expended, she feels her interest is being affected in such a way that she must protest. The Chinese position is that for commercial purposes the road will not be worth what it costs on the basis of construction now proposed by Japan.

It would be impossible to decide the merits of the question between these two powers without having first an expert opinion on the uses and prospects of the road. Japan may be trying to secure a railroad line primarily useful to her army, at the ultimate expense of China. Or, on the other hand, China may be peevishly obstructing a liberal but nevertheless not unreasonable interpretation of the agreement.

But whichever is the case, the difficulty ought to be easy to smooth away by fair arbitration. Suppose arbitrators were instructed by the two powers to give the agreement a fairly liberal interpretation. But not to permit Japan to saddle China with an excessive debt for a road which would be to a great extent useless to her. Would it not, then, be easy to determine on the basis of a physicaland traffic survey what amount, if any, of the unanticipated cost of the new plans Japan should pay herself without looking to China for ultimate recompense? It would seem so, if each nation wishes to treat the other fairly.

NO GOOD TO CANADA.

The Ottawa Journal says that James J. Hill a few years ago described the Canadian Northwest as no good. Recently he has been talking of extending his railways into another transcontinental line in Canada, but close to the United States border so as to form a sort of roof to his lines running north in the States. In that case James will want a Canadian charter. If he comes for it, the accuracy of some remarks in the Vancouver Sunset will be worth enquiring into by members of Parliament. So far as Canada is concerned, Mr. Hill's lines are, says that journal, but mere feelers and feeders thrown across the border to tap trade. "The Hill lines enter Canada at sixteen different points along the boundary line, yet he has not a roundhouse nor a shop in Canada." That journal ventures to think that not a single Hill train crew lives in Canada. If this is so, or nearly so, any charter granted to Mr. Hill in the future should specify a good deal more than our railway charters usually do.

NO HOME RULE YET

INDIA NOT READY FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Col. Sir Duncan A. Johnston Here on His Way to the British Association Meeting.

Montreal, Aug. 11.—Colonel Sir Duncan A. Johnston, K.C.M.G., was in Montreal a few days ago on his way to attend the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Winnipeg. Sir Duncan is the president of the Geographical section and is enthusiastic over the honor reflected on Great Britain by the performance of Lieut. Shackleton.

"That was a remarkable piece of work," said he to The Star. "It was organized by Lieut. Shackleton; he secured the money for it by private subscription without a public appeal. And in exploration he evinced remarkable judgment and power of leading men. The expedition from what I can gather, seems to have been most harmonious. Further he penetrated as far south as his supplies would allow him without starvation. Again and again the party reached their bases of supplies on the return journey without anything to eat. I am very sorry," he added, "that he will not be at the meeting in Winnipeg, but he is too busy just now to come so far."

In addition to his services to the science of geography, which have secured him the position of Hon Secretary of the Royal Geographical Society, Colonel Johnston has seen service in India in the engineering branch of the army, where he was engaged in the initiation of the famous series of irrigation canals, which have revolutionized Indian agriculture. Colonel Johnston discusses the present situation in India at some length.

"I think that the Government is not ruling with a strong enough hand," he said. "Lord Morley is legislating for a few agitators and not for the great mass of the people of India. The people of the country as a whole do not want to participate in the government, and if they did they are unfit to do so. Neither do these agitators want them to have a part in the government; they want the power for themselves.

CASTE IS A DIFFICULTY.

"In particular," went on Sir Duncan, "it is a mistake on Lord Morley's part to admit an Indian to the Viceroy's Council. For one reason, if a Mohammedan be chosen, the Hindus will be angry; and if a Hindu, the Mohammedans. Further, many matters are discussed before the Council, which it is not well should be spread abroad. The British officials will keep things secret, but a native is likely to let a hint drop to some of his native friends. Still another objection, is that the people trust the British officials; and they will not trust one of their own fellow-Indians."

"What do you think will be the effect in India of Japan's entry among the powers?"

"It is twenty or more years since I left India, and on that I am not qualified to express an opinion, beyond saying that it will make the problem more difficult."

"Do you not think that Lord Morley is seeking to meet this element of the problem?"

"Yes, I suppose so; but I am not prepared to express an opinion, beyond saying that the rise of Japan has increased agitation in India."

EDUCATED THE WRONG WAY.

"What do you think of the English policy of educating these Indian Babus, who are conducting the agitation?"

"I am not opposed to education, but they have been educated the wrong way. They have been given book-learning, which they drink up very rapidly, instead of practical educated Indians in India now; they may even become judges; but we could satisfy the demand for government positions, if we were to throw all open to the natives."

Sir Duncan is of the opinion that Lord Morley's proposals are due to ignorance of India. He expressed the view that if England were to withdraw from India, it would split up into provinces, ruled by the fighting races.

Colonel Johnston will spend a couple of days in Montreal, and then go on west, visiting Eastern Canada on his way to Winnipeg. He experts to spend six weeks in America before returning home.

SECOND SUDDEN DEATH.

Brother of Victim of Hanlan's Point Fire Was Killed By a Train.

Cobourg, Aug. 11.—The news of the death of Miss Clara Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Andrews of this town, who was burned to death in the fire at Hanlan's Point, was learned with deep regret by her young associates and friends, who regarded her as a bright, quick girl, capable of showing considerable nerve when occasion demanded. Residing here are her parents, two married sisters, Mrs. T. Niles, and Mrs. Andrews, and one unmarried sister. She visited at her home about a month ago, and was formerly employed as waitress at the Dunham Hotel here, before going to Toronto. She is highly spoken of by those with whom she was employed, and by her employers. Miss Andrews was about 22 or 24 years of age. The family has resided in town for about seven or eight years. Two years ago a terrible grief came to the parents when their young son was run over by a freight train at the G.T.R. station here, and his body almost cut in two. This second tragic fatality has prostrated the entire family, who have the deepest sympathy of every citizen.

Don't Risk even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help!"

Get Health

been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are sold by druggists everywhere, in every community—and everywhere, I believe, they pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and unasked medicines. Thousands upon thousands have in the most commendable way used Dr. Shoop's Restorative. When the first dose helps, when a single bottle proves its merit, you pay for it. If you are sick, and I can help you, I will tell you how to get well. If you are not benefited and completely drugged in the right way, you pay nothing. Is there any way, anywhere, in which my offer can be made more fair? Is there any other physician who will make such a proposition? Is there any other remedy that is sold on such terms? Perhaps a word or two from me will show you the reasons of such offers. I have behind Dr. Shoop's Restorative thousands upon thousands of dollars' worth of curative merit. Else I could not afford to make such an offer. Do I need others to make good my claims? Surely not. Then why should you? Why not make this test do it now. Be the judge. Decide for yourself. Don't send a penny. Don't even write a letter. Simply get a package of Dr. Shoop's Restorative from your druggist. Use it according to the directions. Then if you are not satisfied with the benefit received, if you do not feel that you have got back more than you gave, if you do not feel that you are entirely well, or that Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the greatest remedy you ever used, then go back to your druggist and tell him to charge the bottle to me. I will pay him myself gladly and willingly. Isn't that fair? Isn't that just? Isn't that exactly what you would do for me? Then why not write for a free sample? Do write now while you have it in mind. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 78, Racine, Wis.

THE CARIBOU AT HOME

BIG BEAST IS CANADA'S MOST ERRATIC ANIMAL.

Can Always Be Relied on to Do the Opposite Thing to Any Other Animal—Color Is Like That of Moss-Grown Bushes—It Herds With Its Fellows More Than the Moose or Deer—Feet Adapted to Deep Snow.

"The caribou or American reindeer (Rangifer caribou)," writes Mr. W. H. Moore in The Educational Review of St. John, N.B., "which is found in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, is in size midway between the Virginian deer and the moose, and is without a doubt the most erratic in its wanderings of any of our native mammals. Its true habitat is among barrens, somewhat overgrown with black spruce, upon which usnea moss (really a lichen—Usnea barbata) is the main diet of the caribou, whether its long pendulous threads or fronds grow on the spruces of the barrens or on the trees of rocky, elevated positions. This animal also follows the roads made by the lumbermen and crops the lichens which grow on the felled trees.

When disturbed, the caribou often goes away, perhaps not to return for weeks; and when pursued may be expected to do exactly the opposite to what another animal would do. Herds of half a dozen or more have been known to allow a hunter to come up with them, and to stand staring at him in amazement, as one after another of them was shot down. At other times they flee at the slightest warning at the approach of a hunter. The actions of this animal are very uncertain. If, while wandering about, one of them should come across a man's trail in the snow, it will sometimes wheel about and run for perhaps twenty miles without stopping; and, another time, it is quite as likely to follow up his trail.

The color of the caribou, which in summer is a glossy reddish-brown, becoming grayer towards winter, serves to protect it because it much resembles that of the moss-grown bushes among which it stands. The under parts being of a lighter color than the upper, the form of the animal is much broken, and its outline is rendered indistinct to any but an experienced eye.

The female caribou brings forth a single fawn at first birth, and after that two are born at a time. Unlike the cow moose, she is often the possessor of a pair of antlers, which are, however, much smaller and more slender than those of the male. Some hold that the antlers of the female caribou are never dropped. This statement is based on the belief that the antlers not having an enlargement at their base—known as the "burr"—cannot be dropped and again reproduced. The writer, however, believes that the antlers of the female are dropped and grown just the same as are those of the male, and that as for the burr, the female has as much in proportion to the size of her antlers as has the male.

The caribou is much more gregarious than the moose or the deer. In favorable localities, as many as fifty of them may be seen at one time scattered over the side of a hill in search of their favorite food, locally known as caribou moss.

The caribou, unlike the moose and the deer, does not "yard" in the winter, but roams over a considerable area. The formation of its feet facilitates its progress through deep snow or over snow covered with a thin crust. The hoofs are very shallow and broad, as are also the dew-claws or secondary hoofs. In traveling where the footing is insecure, the animal squats down until the lower part of the leg rests on the surface of the snow, and with the hoofs and dew-claws spread laterally, a support almost equal to that of a snowshoe, quite a surface is covered, and the speed attained is much greater than if it had to wade or plunge through the snow, as animals that run on the extremities of their hoofs have to do.

The flesh of the caribou is much esteemed as food, and clothing made of its skin, is, it is said, so impervious to cold that with the addition of a blanket of the same material one may traverse on the snow with safety even in the coldest winter night.

With us this animal is a beast of chase merely, but it is well known how useful the tame reindeer is to the Laplander, being his cow, sheep, horse in one animal. The milk of the herds is the principal support of the owner and his family, and as a draught animal his speed and endurance render it the most valuable of creatures to men living in high northern latitudes.

The caribou or American reindeer of these provinces and farther north is regarded by some naturalists as only a variety of the European reindeer (Rangifer tarandus). Another variety is the Greenland caribou, a smaller animal, inhabiting the shores of the Arctic Ocean and the woods and barren grounds adjacent."

Niagara Relic Gone.

Built nearly 125 years ago, the old Morse Home at Niagara Falls South, was destroyed by fire a short time ago. The house has been occupied by four generations of the family and was built by the father of the present owner, in which was then almost an uninhabited district, the centre of untouched forest. It was probably the oldest house in this district. It witnessed the vicissitudes of the war of 1812, and, situated near the battlefield of Lundy's Lane, was often the rendezvous of officers and soldiers of the defending army. It is said to have been the scene of conflict itself, when a small company of British soldiers successfully withstood the siege of American forces. It was a Mecca for tourists.

To Record Speed.

Taxicabs will soon carry an instrument which will automatically indicate at what speed the vehicle is traveling. Should the speed exceed twenty miles an hour a bell will ring.

STRIKING CAREER

London Man Came of a Long Lived Scotch Family.

London, Ont., Aug. 5.—Alex. M. Scott died here tonight aged 100 years and 2 months. He served under Papineau in 1837, was in California during the gold rush and was a veteran of the American Civil War. He lived here 40 years. His father lived to be 107 and a sister died in Scotland three years ago aged 103. Of a family of six, the youngest to die was 96.

STUDYING ESQUIMAUX.

Government Will Make Further Investigations In North.

The Canadian Geological Survey, under the late Dr. G. M. Dawson, gathered from time to time a large amount of interesting and valuable information regarding the native races. Since the death of Dr. Dawson this portion of the work of the department has been allowed to languish, but this year a fresh start was made in a direction which cannot but prove to be of great historical and ethnological interest, as well as being of particular value in allowing the people of Canada to become better acquainted with their fellow citizens who occupy the vast frozen territory which forms our northern boundary.

The present subject of ethnological research by the department is the Esquimaux race; and it is deemed especially desirable that this work should be resumed amongst them just now, because their habits are rapidly changing and becoming more difficult for scientific study, as the white man penetrates the Far North.

The Esquimaux is perhaps by his natural gifts the most admirable of the native races of Canada. There are no more intelligent and kindly people than the Esquimaux of Northern Canada, and none that so readily respond to courtesy and good will; and yet they are probably the most misunderstood and misrepresented of all native races. The expedition which was fitted out last year for the study of the Esquimaux consists of Mr. V. Stefansson and Dr. R. M. Anderson. The undertaking is by no means a new task to Mr. Stefansson, as it is the second of a series of journeys he has planned to carry out within the next fifteen years, during which period he hopes to visit and study every Esquimaux settlement from East Cape, Siberia, to the east coast of Greenland and the shores of of Labrador.

The present journey is planned to cover two years, one of which Mr. Stefansson expects to spend between Cape Brown and Bathurst Inlet, Canada, the other on the Colville river, Alaska. He believes that near the mouth of the Coppermine river there is a group of Esquimaux who have never seen a white man; these he desires to study while as yet they are uncontaminated by white influence, and before "civilized" ways change their system of living.

Dynamited by Dog.

The news of a very remarkable accident at a mining camp at Hanging Stone Lake, near Gowganda, by which one man was killed and two injured, was brought to Montreal recently by Frederick Dunn, a resident of St. Johns, Quebec, who accompanied from Northern Ontario the remains of Andrew Dunn, the principal victim, for interment at his old home just outside that city.

Andrew Dunn and companions were dynamiting a vein. The fuse was ignited and the men ran, followed by Dunn's collie dog, which picked up the dynamite stick in his teeth. The explosion came just as the dog reached the cabin and dropped the explosive.

Dunn was killed almost instantly, his skull being fractured in two places, and one of his arms and two ribs being broken. One of the other men, Sims, was stunned and badly cut about the neck, while the other miner, Hackett, escaped with a few bruises. The dog, which was the cause of the disaster, bounded away and escaped injury.

A Man of Weight.

People in many Ontario towns know Mr. Holland, of Whitby, who has done excellent work as grand organizer of the Sons of Temperance. Mr. Holland is a big man—not only big in achievement, but big in person. He related on one of his tours how he had gone into a certain place to be weighed, but as the scales went up to only two hundred and fifty pounds, he could not succeed.

One time he went to the little village of Port Robinson, where the lodge was presided over by a demure but droll Worthy Patriarch. After the customary preliminaries Mr. Holland was admitted, and as he made his ponderous way to the platform the halting Worthy Patriarch remarked dryly:

"Well! they told me Holland was coming, but I think it's all of Holland and part of Belgium."

She Didn't Go Back.

Miss Agnes Laut, whose address on "yellow journals" and how they may be got rid of, created such a stir at the International Congress of Women, has ever been noted as one with views of her own and with a courage of her convictions. In Winnipeg she is remembered as a delicate girl with definite opinions and an independent spirit that entirely belied her looks.

When Miss Laut left Winnipeg to try her fate in the big world of journalism and literature, there were not wanting those who predicted that she would soon be back at her desk in The Free Press office. Her first work was the reporting of the meetings of the Joint High Commission in Quebec, and in this she succeeded in a way that ranked her work with that of the ablest Ottawa and Washington correspondents. From that time her rise has been steady, and though she has several times visited Winnipeg, she has evinced no tendency to occupy her old desk.

The Moose.

The moose is the largest animal now existing of the deer family, standing often as high as six feet, and sometime weighing 1,200 pounds; but notwithstanding its great size, it is very fleet of foot. When brought to bay, a blow with its fore foot or horns is a very serious matter for the huntsman. Often when pursued by man they have their intelligence to thank for their escape, for sometimes, if closely followed, they double in their tracks and stand motionless in some thicket until the hunter has slipped by, when they quickly glide away. At other times they make such a commotion as to preserve any but an experienced hunter, and thus escape.

The Bladderwort.

The aquatic plant the bladderwort feeds on animal life. The tiny bladders attached to the leaves and leaf stalks are each furnished with a door, the whole acting on the eel trap principle. Any small water creature that ventures to poop in is seized in the clutches of the murderous plant and is at once swallowed and assimilated.

Ant Proof Woods.

Use is made in the south sea islands of logs made of camphor wood or American white cedar, because ants and other insects have an aversion for these woods. The natives use such

C. P. R.'S BIRTHDAY.

The C.P.R. did not mark in any special way the twenty-third anniversary, which occurred the other week, of the sending of the first transcontinental train across the Dominion. At the same time, in looking back to the achievements of the last twenty-three years, the official breast was inclined to swell a little with satisfaction.

It is twenty-three years since the last lines of the great transcontinental system were put together, making one long whole out of many disjointed parts.

The head offices were then on St. James street, facing Place d'Armes Square. Lord Mount Stephen was president, and Sir William (then Mr. William) Van Horne general manager.

The offices themselves were small and stuffy. All was in the formative stage. The sense of stability had yet to be impressed upon the system. The general manager could be found in his shirt sleeves. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was then purchasing agent of the company. Mr. McNicoll acted as general passenger agent. Business was done, but it was done under crude conditions.

The staff was small, and the thousand or more clerical employes now at the head office were not dreamed of.

Great railway men were then in the making. The highest was accessible. It was desirable to propitiate the public.

The visible assets were slight, and the local cartoonists of the time used to poke fun at the C.P.R. trying, with the aid of Mr. Clouston, the general manager of the Bank of Montreal, and a lighted candle, to find a surplus in the vaults of the bank.

There was the old Dalhousie Square station, which sufficed for all the business offering.

Little was defined. Able men took off their coats, but when any enthusiastic person spoke of dividends, he was greeted with an indulgent smile.

This can be said—that everybody hustled.

As Sir William Van Horne has many times said to the writer, in going over the past, "we literally took off our coats to work."

The offices were removed to Victoria Square, to the building formerly occupied by the Co-operative Association. The annual meetings were then held in secret, and it was a sight to see the local newspaper men holding up Sir William Van Horne after the meeting was over.

The tone of those meetings was vastly different from that which prevails at present. A tremendous undertaking had been espoused, but the future was dark. The Northwest was merely a name—vague, distant. The business had to be made.

Such growth, however, manifested itself in the course of a few years that it was deemed necessary to have a West End station and general offices, which the company itself could control.

In the early years the earnings of the company varied from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 per annum. They are now something like $75,000,000 per annum.

Even after the new station and general offices were taken possession of, there were days of darkness to be encountered; and it became necessary for Lord Strathcona to come over to reassure the pessimistic stockholders, many of whom openly lamented that they had put their money into such a doubtful enterprise.

"An enterprise," said His Lordship, "which, nevertheless, will, in the course of the next few years be one of the best dividend-earners in the Dominion."

Telephones at Osgoode Hall.

Osgoode Hall, Toronto, slumbered for half a century or more, so far as telephones and other modern equipment were concerned, and then it awoke or was awakened, whichever you prefer.

A young man came to Osgoode Hall. He was J. A. C. Cameron, and, like other wise men, he came from the east. He hailed from Cornwall, to succeed the late Neil McLean as referee and clerk to the Master-in-Ordinary.

It occurred to him that new office furniture would be a good thing, and, likewise, improved ventilation. He got 'em. Then he asked for a telephone.

"Why, people will bother you to death," he was told.

"That's all right," he answered, easily. "It's a good thing to be stirred up." Mr. Cameron's telephone, the first business bells machine in Osgoode, was installed. There were three 'phones at Osgoode, but they belonged to the Law Society. Then, after the Cameron innovation, came the definite decision by the Government to equip the various offices with telephones.

A Difficult Task.

A good story is told of Rev. Dr Sipprell, president of Columbian College, New Westminster, B.C., and a great exponent of Methodism on the British Columbia coast. Dr. Sipprell is possessed of the silver tongue, and his flowery sermons and addresses are the pride of Methodist hearts.

On a recent trip through the Rockies, returning from a visit east, the doctor was enjoying, for the first time, the grandeur of the Canadian mountains. He was talking to a little coterie of admiring friends.

"Ah!" he said rapturously, waving his arm oratorically toward a colossal pile of rock, "What would we find friends, were we to drive to the bottom of yon wonderful mountain?"

Place For Dullards.

Admiral King-mill, advocates a Canadian navy because it will provide places for our dullards. His theory has all the authority that antiquity can lend it, and no more. It prompts The Kincardine Review to recall the story of the captain who was receiving the new middy:

"Well boy, the old story, I suppose—fool of the family sent to sea?"

"Oh, no, sir," piped the boy, "that's all altered since your day."

Canada has now the largest, indeed the only considerable, herd of buffaloes in the world, and the stirring and even dangerous work has accompanied the assembling of that herd. Except for about one hundred head which have been at Banff, and which will now be transferred, the colony of buffaloes in Buffalo Park, Wainwright, Alta., has all been secured from the herd owned by Michael Pablo in Montana. Pablo's 600 or 700 buffaloes were the outgrowth of a small group of twenty purchased thirty years ago from "Walking Coyote," a Flathead Indian, returning from a great buffalo hunt in southern Alberta, so that Canada now secures her own, with interest, on payment, of course, of a considerable sum in cash, $300 per head.

Two years ago the first round-up of the Pablo herd commenced, the captives being shipped to Elk Island Park, at Lamont, Alberta. The ground here was unsuitable for a large herd, and the enclosure too small, so the Government secured a new park of 107,000 acres at Wainwright, on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 100 miles or so east of Edmonton. To this point 349 buffaloes were removed from Lamont a few weeks ago, now to be joined by 196 fresh from the latest round-up in Montana. Adventures and dangers, with narrow escapes from death, marked almost every day of the round-up. The animals ran wild over a country fifty miles in extent. Riders chased them to the valley of the Little Bitter Root, then into a lane which led to the Pend D'Oreille River. They then swam this and entered a large corral, from which they were driven into a smaller enclosure. When the rounding-up was finished, they were loaded into cages on wagons and hauled 36 miles to Ravalli, a railway station on the Northern Pacific, and then entrained for Canada. Every now and again a buffalo could stand the hounding no longer, and turned on his aggressors, resulting in such incidents as the impaling of Johnny Decker's horse, and the carrying of horse and rider on a buffalo's horn across the corral.

The Canadian Girl.

In the first instance, we must admit that the French-Canadian girl has remained quite aloof from her more modern sisters, and is in many respects like the Evangeline whom Longfellow described, the dark-tressed gentle Acadian whose love-story began in the far-off days when Grand-Pree had neither bolts nor bars. La petite Canadienne is a conservative, in fact, who follows her great-grandmothers' ways, and is akin to the Norman maidens of long ago. She is, says a writer in The Girl's Realm, gentle, industrious, and vivacious, a devout daughter of Mother Church, and usually gives herself at a very early age to a youth who is as fond as herself of the ways of their forefathers. In Quebec and the provinces along the Atlantic may be found many a Marie, Josephine, or Jacqueline, who might have given the New England poet the model for his ill-fated heroine. To the British world, however, the Canadian girl belongs to the English-speaking majority of the Dominion, and to her we are willing to give exhaustive attention. In connection with her qualities, it is almost impossible to avoid international comparisons, for the visitor from the United States finds points for divergence, while the English guest is likely to pronounce the Canadian girl very American.

Travels Far Into the North.

Miss Annie S. Nash of Carstairs, Alberta, will travel over a thousand miles straight north of Edmonton before she reaches Hay River, a Hudson Bay post, where she will wed Rev. Alfred J. Vale, an English Church missionary, formerly of Berlin, Ont., and a graduate of Wycliffe College, Toronto, in 1906. The trip will take in the neighborhood of two months to complete, and will be made by rail, stage, scow and river steamer. It is a trip scarcely ever made by a woman, and one that few men except traders take.

Miss Nash is accompanied by Archdeacon Lucas and wife of London, England, who are in Canada for a year's holiday. The archdeacon is going north to perform the marriage ceremony, and will probably spend the winter in that district with his wife, returning to London in the spring of 1910.

Miss Nash has had a wide and varied experience in the five or six years that she has been a trained nurse. Her early home was in Berlin, Ont.

Aged Indian Dies.

Old "Indian Dave" died in his wigwam in Gilford Township a few days ago, where he had made his home for 60 years. He was sure he had passed his 106th birthday. He was known to the oldest settlers in 1836, and was then considered quite old.

Dave claimed to be the son of Chief Nitmup of the Chippewa tribe, but was never recognized as such by his tribesmen. He was known as "Indian Dave," but was recorded as Dave Stecker as a citizen.

He spent the winter in his bark and hide hut manufacturing baskets and bows and arrows, and during the summer traveled about the resorts selling his wares. He is survived by one son, James.

A Private Still?

A private detective is being engaged at St. Catharines to look into the rumor that the "Indian Listers" of this vicinity have a private still where they manufacture the best of whisky for 20 cents a gallon. The still used is said to be a relic of the Scott Act days, when it was kept in active operation in Raleigh.

The Sultan's Throne.

Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The pale, burning, will supply below. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and you have quickly banished to your system. Sold by all dealers.

FISHERS OF LUNENBERG.

They Are the Rivals of Gloucester For Cod Bank Honors.

It is recognized that the fishermen of Gloucester have long monopolized fiction and poetry as being the real catchers of cod, and the most picturesque of those who make their living on the Grand Banks.

If you ask a Bluenose, that is a resident of Nova Scotia, who are the real bankers, he will tell you "the men of Lunenburg." Lunenburg is the rival of Gloucester in the hunt for cod, and a pretty husky rival, too, for fishermen from that seaport on the south shore of Nova Scotia are the backbone of that industry that is valued well over $3,000,000 a year.

The Lunenburg fishermen spend about half the year at home, but they do not use this time sitting around the docks spinning yarns. They are busy with lobster catching or in the woods. When March comes around they begin to make ready for the sea.

The schooners are put in order and stocked with provisions. On the Sunday nearest March 21 the churches hold special services, and prayers go up for safe and prosperous voyages. They are devout, these Bluenose fishermen, but they keep an eye on the profits, too.

The fishing schooners are small, rarely reaching 100 tons. The law requires vessels exceeding that size to carry a certified master, and the Lunenburg man can't see the use of passing examinations in navigation. With a compass and a dipsey lead the master of a banker can find his way in any weather.

The start from Lunenburg is like the start of a yacht race. Most of the bankers go out on the same day, and there is good-natured rivalry among the skippers as to who shall first anchor on the fishing grounds.

When a skipper makes a berth in a likely place real work begins. The dories, flat-bottomed boats about fifteen feet long, which are very seaworthy but don't look it, are put overboard and the trawls are set.

These trawls are something sizable in the way of fishing lines. The main line is from one to one and a half miles long, with a fringe of smaller lines which carry the hooks. The trawls are anchored at each end and are set like the spokes of a wheel whose hub is the schooner. The dories move up and down the trawls, taking off the fish and rebaiting the hooks. It sounds easy, but in a heavy sea it is ticklish business.

When a schooner has loaded full with fish, cut and salted down, she steals away from the shrieking medley of foghorns and makes for Lunenburg. It is a lucky ship which enters port without her colors at half-mast, which would indicate that one of her crew has gone. The fleet gets back from the spring trip about the end of May, unloads and sails back again on the summer trip, which lasts until autumn.

Room For Canadian Coal.

Of the large coaling trade of the West Indies, Canada gets practically no share, and yet there appears to be no reason why some of the coal might not be imported from Canada, as the greater part of it is steam coal. Trinidad and Barbadoes divide their importation of this article equally with the United States and Great Britain, while St. Lucia, which has the largest bunker coal trade, takes all its coal from the United States, reports the Canadian commissioner at Barbadoes. He adds:

"It may be remarked that Canada last year, as during the last few years, has taken the greatest share of the exports of sugar and molasses, amounting to about 35 per cent. of the total export. Up to June 3 of the present year, exports of sugar, as taken from the records of the chamber of commerce, were 9,266 tons, 4,635 of which went to Canada; and of the total export of molasses—36,040 puncheons—18,082 puncheons went also to the same market.

New Forest Atlas.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has issued the first sheets of a new "forest atlas," which will include plans of the Dominion Forest Reserves, of which the surveys are now being carried on. The "legend" is now being sent out; this designates the marks used to denote natural features, the different species of trees and the amounts of timber that can be obtained per acre from timbered areas, entries of various kinds (such as homesteads, mineral lands, etc.), burns or brules, cuttings and sales, roads, trails, railways, canals, flumes, telegraph and telephone lines, buildings, etc. One of the smaller forest reserves, that known as "The Pines," situated near Prince Albert, Sask.—has already been mapped, and the map of the Riding Mountain Forest Reserve, in northwestern Manitoba, is now in preparation. As surveys of the forest reserves and other forested districts are completed, maps of these will be prepared and added to the atlas.

Another Ice-Breaker.

The Lady Grey, the ice-breaker of the Dominion Government, is to be given a consort, and the Earl Grey has just been launched from the shipbuilding yards of the Vickers Company at Barrow-in-Furness. The new boat marks a considerable advance in size and speed, and it is hoped that it will prove even more successful than the Lady Grey, though the older boat has done good work in her three years of existence. Although the new vessel is built very powerfully and with a special view to the breaking of ice, the makers promise that she will be able to make seventeen knots an hour.

Of Canadian Parentage.

Among the girls presented at the last court was one at least, with a Canadian connection. That was the daughter of the Earl and Countess of Wharncliffe. Lady "Mollie" had a Canadian grandmother, for her grandfather, Gen. Sir Lionel Gallwey, of the Royal Engineers, who knew Canada well, married Miss MacDougall of Montreal, many years ago, and their daughter is the present Lady Wharncliffe.

Signs of Storms.

As stormy weather comes on, sea birds fly inland in search of food, wild fowl leave the marshy grounds for higher localities, swallows and ducks fly low before and during bad weather; frogs are unusually noisy before rain; sheep huddle together near bushes and trees.

SIMCOE'S HOME.

Famous Lieutenant-Governor's Last Residence Built In 1800.

High among the hills surrounding Honiton, the little country town which is famed far and wide as the centre of the lace-making industry of Devon, England, stands Wolford Lodge, the pleasant English home where General Simcoe, the first Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, spent the last few years of his eventful life. Weakened by the wounds and hardships endured in the disheartening campaigns of the American Revolutionary war, and worn with his anxious toil for the benefit of the new British province which it had been given to him to organize in the wilderness, he came back to England in 1796 to seek well-earned repose. But rest was not for him. Almost immediately he was sent back across the Atlantic to put down an insurrection in the West Indies. Returning again to his native land, he began, about the year 1800, to build himself a spacious mansion on a green slope deep amongst the gently-rounded, well-cultivated hills of lovely Devon. Surely no toil-worn warrior ever found a more restful spot in which to spend the evening of his days, for still, despite a hundred years of progress, despite vastly increased population, despite railways and motor-cars, the whole land speaks of peace.

The lodge was built in solid fashion by the General round an old farm-house, which was on the estate when he bought it. Except for the addition of some large bow-windows, the house has been little altered from the original design, and much of the old furniture remains in its spacious rooms. So large are they that an ancient four-post bedstead appears a comparatively small piece of furniture, and the General's own bedroom is larger than many a village church. In the different rooms numerous relics connected with him have been carefully preserved.

On either side of the staircase window, in the square entrance hall, are two venerable flags, the colors of the "Queen's Rangers," a provincial corps of Loyalists, which was raised by Simcoe and did gallant service during the revolutionary war.—Emily P. Weaver.

Statue to La Verendrye.

A strong appeal for a proper memorial to La Verendrye, the discoverer of the Canadian Northwest, is made by Le Manitoba; and in addition to urging that a monument be erected to the great explorer in St. Boniface, the paper makes a suggestion which might be highly acceptable to the organization committee of the Canadian Exposition and Selkirk Centennial, and one which probably has not occurred to that body before. It is that the name of the illustrious pathfinder, La Verendrye, should be associated with the equally illustrious colonizer, Lord Selkirk, in the exposition.

La Verendrye's son was one of the victims of one of the greatest and the earliest tragedies of the frontier, in which he and his companions were massacred by the Sioux, at Fort St. Charles, the site of which was discovered last summer by the Jesuit fathers, who for two years had prosecuted a diligent search for it. Now it is reported that at the request of Mgr. Langevin and of Mgr. Ireland, the American Government has decided to reserve the site of old Fort St. Charles as national property, with a view to the erection of a memorial in the future.

What He Was Having.

A very familiar and also rather picturesque figure in Montreal newspaperdom passed away recently, when William Jarvis — the boys all knew him as "Bill"—handed in his last report to the great Editor-in-Chief. And now wherever newspapermen get together in Montreal, stories are told of "Bill" Jarvis and his many amusing and kindly peculiarities. One of the best of these yarns is to the effect that he once went into a restaurant in Montreal, where two other newspapermen were eating oysters.

"Come on and have some oysters, Bill," they invited.

Bill didn't care if he did, and in a few moments a half dozen Malpecques were laid out before him. The other men were using Tabasco on theirs, and Bill picked up the bottle. Without noticing what he was doing, he simply deluged one of his oysters with the fiery stuff and gathering it up put it in his mouth. Immediately he made a wild dash for the bar.

"Water! water!" he gasped.

The bar-keep hastened up and inquired politely: "What will you have, sir—Redner or Caledonia or—"

"Oh, you fool," he roared, "any kind—any kind that's wet!"

Victoria as Gretna Green.

Recently in a single week 136 marriages of non-residents were celebrated in Victoria, B.C. It appears that prospective bridal couples resent the new law, now enforced in the neighboring cities of Seattle, Bellingham, Tacoma and Portland, requiring medical examination and certificates of physical fitness from applicants for marriage licenses. In preference to compliance they take one of the daily steamers from Seattle—sometimes as many as twenty couples a day—and the sheriff's office enjoys a phenomenal business at $5 per wedding ticket. The clergymen of Victoria are kept busy with this "transient trade," and indeed it has been suggested that Sheriff Richards should meet all boats with an omnibus connecting direct with the marriage bureau. That other border city, Windsor, has long enjoyed a reputation as a Gretna Green, but it never experienced anything like the present rush of marrying visitors to Victoria.

Oldest Indian Dead.

Christopher Paul, aged 91, the oldest Indian in the Maritime Provinces, died recently at the reserve at Shubenacadie, forty miles out of Halifax. Previous to the building of the Intercolonial Railway, Paul used to paddle down the lakes to Halifax.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "Vanity nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all Dealers.

ARTICLES SIGNED.

Johnson and Jeffries Have Finally Reached an Agreement.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Articles of agreement for a fight between Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world were signed here today. The fight is to take place within eight months, before the club offering the best inducements. All bids for the fight are to be made inside of 60 days.

Sam Berger, manager for James J. Jeffries, George Little, Johnson's manager, and Jack Johnson were present at the meeting when the articles were signed.

Little, however, had nothing to do with the arrangement of terms for the fight, having turned the whole affair over to Johnson.

The articles prepared by Jeffries were given to Johnson by Berger After carefully perusing the paper, Johnson handed them back to Berger, remarking as he did so, that they were not at all satisfactory to him. He declared he was ready to sign agreements, but he wanted to sign an agreement to "fight." He then outlined what he conceived would be a satisfactory agreement.

A warm discussion followed. Berger objected to any mention of the purse in the articles, but he finally yielded this point. Johnson was equally as insistent that the reference to Jeffries as the heavyweight champion of the world be stricken from the agreement, declaring that his position on this point was irrevocable. He finally won out, and all reference to this subject was omitted.

The agreement as signed calls for a fight of from 20 to 100 rounds for the heavyweight championship of the world. The division of the purse was left to the decision of Jeffries.

It also provides that as a guarantee of good faith each of the parties to the agreement shall post $5,000 with Chas. A. Comiskey, of Chicago, within 72 hours on the understanding that the $5,000 operate as a side bet on the contest.

Form of agreement entered into this eleventh day of August, 1909, between Jack Johnson, of Galveston Texas, and James J. Jeffries, of Los Angeles, Cal.

It is agreed between these men mutually that they shall box a certain number of rounds, the same to be anywhere from 20 to 100, for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Contest to be held before the club offering the best inducements, and mutually agreed upon by the contestants.

The division of such purse shall be on a basis of either 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. to the winner and loser, respectively, or 75 per cent. and 25 per cent. or winner may be permitted to take the entire amount. The decision in this matter to rest with James J. Jeffries.

The sum of $5,000 each is to be posted with Charles A. Comiskey, of Chicago as a guarantee of good faith and the fulfilment by each side of the terms of this agreement, said money to be posted within 72 hours. It is further agreed that the above named $5,000 shall operate as a side bet on the result of the contest. It is further agreed that the club will be selected and mutually agreed upon 60 days from date, at which time all further details will be mutually agreed upon.

Contest to take place not later than six months from date of selecting club and the signing of final articles.

(Signed)

SAM BERGER,

ROOSEVELT IN DANGER ZONE.

Hunters Move Camp Into District Inhabited by Warlike Nomads.

Naivasha, British East Africa, Aug 12.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and his son Kermit, accompanied by Edmund Heller, the zoologist of the Roosevelt expedition; E. J. Cunninghame, the British field naturalist, and Leslie A. Tarlton of Nairobi, left here today for Nyeri, a government station in the northwest of Kenia Province. Major Edgar A. Mearns and J. Alden Loring, the other members of the Roosevelt party, will leave here Wednesday for Nairobi, where they will make preparations for an ascent of Mount Kenia, an extinct volcano to the north of Nairobi. A second consignment of specimens collected by the expedition will be shipped to the United States on the steamer Admiral, which leaves Mombasa, Aug. 16.

Nyeri is an important trade center of British East Africa. The neighborhood is the headquarters of the Masai tribe, warlike nomads, who inhabit the northwestern plain of Kenia is about 17,200 feet in height. It was ascended for the first time by Mackinder in 1899.

Paris, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Archie, Quentin and Archie, Quentin and Ethel Roosevelt arrived here this evening from Avignon.

THAW CASE.

The Judge Will Give His Decision Today.

New York, Aug. 7.—Next Thursday, August 12, Justice Mills will file with the clerk of the Supreme Court, Westchester County, his decision in the matter of Harry K. Thaw's writ of habeas corpus, on which Thaw seeks his release from the Matteawan State Asylum for the Criminal Insane. That Justice Mills will set Thaw free is hardly expected, even by Thaw, but until the decision is filed it is impossible to forecast the judge's conclusions.

Justice Mills announced that the taking of evidence for and against Thaw's release must all be in this week, even if he had to sit all day Saturday. District Attorney Jerome closed his case Wednesday afternoon and Lawyer Morschauser for Thaw, began presenting testimonoal in rebuttal. When the day's session was over Morschauser has just started reading into the record Evelyn Thaw's testimony given at the first trial. The only other evidence Morschauser is expected to present is that of one or two alienists, notably Dr. Evans of "brain-storm" fame to rebut the evidence of the people's alienists.

JUDGE IS GOING AWAY.

Justice Mills has made all arrangements to start on his vacation Friday, Aug. 13, and he said last night it would be only something now unforeseen that would compel him to hold up his decision longer than next Thursday. Neither will he attempt to render the decision before that day, as he proposes to look carefully into all exhibits and evidence given at both murder trials.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. EXORBITANT ASSESSMENT.

The George Matthew's Company's Big Fight in Ottawa.

The George Matthews Company of Peterborough who have a flourishing branch in Hull, Que., has decided to take the matter of its assessment in that city before a superior court judge.

Last year the property owned by the firm was assessed at $60,000 but this year the 15 years' exemption from municipal taxes which it enjoyed expired and the valuators placed the assessment at $135,000.

The Messrs. Matthews thought latter figure excessive and endeavored to have the valuation placed at $80,000, which would be an increase of 83 1-3 per cent. The Board of Revision took the question into consideration, but decided to let the valuators' figures stand.

The result is the judge of the Superior Court will be asked to decide the 15 years' exemption granted to the George Matthews Company was made only on municipal taxes proper School taxes, which are high, they have to pay.—

LOVERS DROWN.

One Goes Down in Attempt to Save the Other.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—A hard- earned vacation, which had just begun to develope into a romance, came to a tragic end yesterday for Miss Alida Johnson and George C. Engelbrecht, two Chicago young people who were enjoying an outing at South Haven, Mich.

While bathing in the surf early in the afternoon Miss Johnson ventured too far out and was caught in a strong undertow. Engelbrecht, who had been with her almost constantly in the week since she had been at the resort, went to her rescue, but the breakers were too high for him and after a moment's struggle both went under.

Hundreds of bathers saw the incident, but supposed that Engelbrecht had rescued the girl, and before anyone realized what had occurred both had drowned.

It was the first accident of the season at South Haven, and the town spent the rest of the day discussing the double drowning and the romance connected with it.

If You Feel Poorly This Spring this Article is Worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health If the nerves are weak, if the stomach liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, healthy surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health —the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton of Lewisburg. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depression, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned of the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

CITY LEAGUE.

Loses T.A.S., and the Troubles of the League is Settled.

As was stated in these columns on Monday last there was a general mixup in the Senior City Baseball League. The particulars of the case are too trival to waste the readers' time, but suffice it to say that the managers of two of the teams were fined $5 in police court yesterday morning for fighting. They were also severely called down by his worship the magistrate, who will do his part in trying to make sport in Peterborough clean. The league executive also held a meeting the other night when the school boy quarrels were settled by the T.A.S. losing its protest and withdrawing from the league. It's hard to understand how the officers allowed the team managers to get away with them. It shows a lack of interest which should not qualify them for offices in future leagues.

Be sure and take a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with you when starting on your trip this summer. It cannot be obtained on board the trains or steamers. Changes of water and climate often cause sudden attacks of diarrhoea, and it is best to be prepared. 8

Expert on Gunshot Wounds Again Shows Impossibility That Lieut. Sutton Could Have Taken His Own Life

Annapolis, Aug. 12.—The court of inquiry investigating the death of Lieut. James N. Sutton, Jr., U. S. M. C., began this morning what was expected to be the final day of presentation of testimony in the case. Dr. Edward Schaeffer, who was called as an expert on gunshot wounds, resumed the stand.

When the court adjourned yesterday Dr. Schaeffer had shown on a skull the location and direction of the bullet wound which caused the death of Lieut. Sutton, and had declared that, under the conditions as established by the testimony, it would have been impossible for Lieut. Sutton to fire the shot that killed him.

DR. SCAFFER EXPLAINS.

Mr. Birney, counsel for Lieut. Adams, cross-examined the witness and had him take a position on the counsel table similar to that occupied by Lieut. Sutton on the ground when the fatal shot was fired, and repeat, with a service revolver, a demonstration the witness gave yesterday of the difficulty of firing under the circumstances.

Dr. Schaefer again declared that with a service revolver and under the conditions given, Lieut. Sutton could not have shot himself. Mr. Birney then directed his efforts to the credibility of the witness as an expert on wounds from bullets.

The Judge Advocate, Major Leonard, asked if the course of a bullet in a wound could be at angle to the line of fire.

It would depend, the witness said, upon the location of the wound and whether any bone or other hard substance were encountered. If the bullet struck the scalp at an angle of 45 degrees it would be most unlikely to then turn and enter the skull, but that this might be possible.

PANTOMINED SHOOTING

Lieut. Adams again pantomimed the shooting of Lieut. Sutton, the scene being re-enacted on the floor of the court room, with Lieuts. Utter and Osterman and Sergeant De Hart placing themselves upon him. Lieut. Adams pulled the trigger of a service revolver but Dr. Schaeffer declared that he could not thus have inflicted a wound duplicating the one which killed Lieut. Sutton. This closed the testimony.

Major Leonard stated that the government had no argument to submit. He outlined the efforts of the government to lay before the court every shred of testimony touching the case This having been done, he said he would not offer any argument unless compelled by something that might be said by the attorneys or other parties to the investigation.

ADJOURNMENT TAKEN.

He asked the court to so construe the regulations as to relieve him of the duty of aiding the court in arriving at its findings. The court announced that this request of Major Leonard would be granted.

Adjournment was then taken until tomorrow morning at the request of Mr. Davis, counsel for Mrs. Sutton.

Connors Discharged No Evidence Produced

Tom Connors was discharged at the police court yesterday afternoon by Magistrate Dumble. Connors was charged with Fallon of having attempted to rob Desborough in Central Park last Monday.

GEORGE DESBOROUGH.

George Desborough, the complainant swore that he was a baker with Mr. N. Lush. He boarded near the C.P.R. station. He left home at 1.30 last Monday night to go to work, going straight up George St., to Central Park. As soon as he entered the park he saw three men sitting on a seat. Witness sat down on another bench to light his pipe. He had been about two minutes when Fallon came and sat down beside him. He asked complainant what his name was, where he was going, and what he had about him. Desborough answered that he had nothing for him. Fallen told him that he would give him a d—— good licking before he left. Witness got up to leave and was followed by Fallen, who struck him in the back of the neck. He tried for witness' pocket but he stopped him. All the time he was kicking him. Desborough struck at him but Fallen stepped back. Fallen then called for his chum who was Connor. They both started at him then and he shouted out Police! Murder! and then they ran away. He proceeded to the bakeshop. When he got in, Mr. Lush asked him what was the matter? You are all blood." Mr. Lush telephoned for the police.

NEWHALL'S EVIDENCE.

P. C. Newhall said that on Monday last he received a telephone message to come to a certain number on Water street. He remained there a considerable time and on returning came along McDonnel street to George street. The policeman heard some person calling murder! He stopped and saw two men running in the park towards McDonnel street. A few yards behind the two was a third man running. When with men got to the bandstand he saw a man running towards him. P. C. Newhall hid and then followed the prisoner, who turned out to be Connor, right down George street, on Simcoe street. Newhall met Adams and the two went to Lush's bakery. There Mr. Desborough related what had happened. Desborough complained of a tooth loose, and was very sore about the hip. The crown of his straw hat was torn.

On Wednesday about 4 o'clock he brought Connor into Chief Roszel's office. Witness asked Connor all about the affair, and he replied that he knew nothing about it. Connor then spoke of being on George street near Central Park on Monday night, and hearing someone yelling "Murder!" he ran for home. Later when the chief had left the room, Connor told Newhall that he knew all about the affair in Central Park and proceeded to tell him. About 8 o'clock on Wednesday Fallen was arrested. On Fallen a silver watch was found. P. C. Newhall told in detail the conversation between the two prisoners in the cell.

NEWHALL CROSS EXAMINED.

At the afternoon session Mr. G. N. Gordon, who was acting for Connor, cross-examined P. C. Newhall.

Mr. Gordon showed that on the night of the holdup Desborough wore a white baker's coat from his home to the bake shop, while the totrem men that P. C. Newhall said he saw all had dark colored suits on.

At this point Mr. Gordon made application for the discharge of Connors as there was no evidence against him. The application was granted.

FALLEN REMANDED.

The case against Fallen was next taken up, and Deborough was the chief witness. He stated that he recognized the prisoner, as the man who tried to rob him last Monday night. Fallen was remanded for a week when he will be brought up for sentence.

GREAT EXCURSION.

From Lindsay to Peterborough— It Will Be Repeated Next Week.

Is that trip from Lindsay to Peterborough popular? Just ask any who have ever been on it. The special trip ran yesterday from Lindsay was a huge success. The steamer Otonabee was loaded to her full carrying capacity of 475, and then nearly a hundred were left at Lindsay, and about sixty at Sturgeon Point. The boat being already loaded it did not call at the Point. The trip through the beautiful Kawartha Lakes was made without a hitch and everyone on board thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

So popular is this trip that Peterborough and Lindsay people have both requested that another special trip be arranged. Ald. Hicks, manager of the company, has done this, and on Tuesday next another trip will be taken from Peterborough to Lindsay, returning by train and on Wednesday another excursion from Lindsay and Sturgeon Point will be run to the city and return by special train. The number of tickets for both of these trips will be limited and those desiring to take it in will do well to secure their tickets

MR. NEWHALL KEEPER MRS. NEWHALL KEEPER OF

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 12.—Through a chance remark dropped by one of the attorneys in the action it became known here that a divorce was granted to Mrs. Mary Lawrence Keene, of New York, from her husband, Foxhall P. Keene, a noted sportsman, and son of James R. Keene, in this city on July 31. It was also learned that Mr. Keene brought an action for divorce and was unsuccessful.

Newspapers on both sides took notice of the matter a month. Mrs. Keene charged her husband with desertion, and it is understood that her husband made the same charge against her. In support of the action Mrs. Keene submitted a letter written to her by her husband on June 17, 1900. The letter follows:—

"Dear Madame:—I desire to notify you that I do not propose to live with you any longer as your husband and further, do not intend to provide [illegible] in the future."

Fountain Pen Saved Him from Being Shot to Death

New York, Aug. 13.—William B. Craig, a young lawyer, owes his life to an innocent fountain pen. It came about when Mrs. Neville Castle, who lives in the Colonial Studios, at No. 39 West Sixty-seventh street, pressed a revolver against his heart in an elevator at the Waldorf-Astoria and yelling, "I'll teach you to go back on me, Will" and pulled the trigger. The bullet struck a fountain pen in Mr. Craig's upper coat pocket, was deflected, making only a slight abrasion over the heart, and dropped to the floor.

MRS. NEVILLE CASTLE

The report of the pistol was heard throughout the office floor of the hotel, and a crowd surged toward the elevator, Kennedy and Kelly, hotel detectives, assisted Mrs. Castle, a pretty young woman dressed in a black and white check suit. She still held the revolver in her right hand. In her left hand was a leather bag, bearing her name in gold letters. She had taken the pistol from the bag when she followed Mr. Craig into the hotel from West Thirty-fourth street. He was on his way to the rooms of the Rocky Mountain Club on the 15th floor when Mrs. Castle intercepted him at the elevator.

Special Attractions Arranged for the Fair

Arrangements were made by the directors of the Peterborough Agricultural Society at a largely attended meeting for several special features for this year's exhibition. There will be night attractions before the grand stand, and several special attractions that will be of great interest and which have never been put on at a fall fair before.

The directors also received a demand from the Turf Club for $100 for the use of the track at this year's fair, and the directors were not slow in recognizing this as a hold-up, and they will not pay it.

The list of judges for the fair were appointed but their names will not be published until they have been communicated with and their acceptances received.

Peterborough's exhibition this year will be the greatest ever held in this city or in this part of the country. There is sure to be an immense crowd as the city and country people are looking forward to it and there will be several excursions to the city from outside points.

Mr. F. J. A. Hall,
Secretary P. A. S.

Dear Sir,—I am instructed by the Peterborough Turf Club to notify you that at our meeting last night we decided to give you the grounds for your fair for $100, payable within ten days of this notification.

W. JONES,
Secretary P.T.C.

The directors of the Agricultural Society discussed this communication at some length, and there was general indignation. Some wanted to erect a fence across the grounds and shut the Turf Club off, and make them put up the other half of the fence. Others wanted to assume the liability of the Turf Club, and allow the club to use the track.

The general opinion was that the Turf Club should co operate with the Agricultural Society as before. It was felt that the Turf Club's proposition was a hold up. Two motions were made. One that the old arrangements be carried out. The other was that if the Turf Club will not meet the society that the agricultural grounds be fenced off, and the society go on and use the smaller track for the races.

The first motion carried and was as follows:—

Moved by Messrs. Turner and Baptie that the society take control of the whole grounds of the Driving Park and the Agricultural Society for the week of the fair as per the old agreement.—Carried.

NIGHT ENTERTAINMENT.

Without any discussion Ald. Gillespie and Dr. King stated that there would be a night performance.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS.

President Leary suggested a tug of war on horseback, also a Red Cross ride to be put on by the artillery and dragoons.

Another attraction will be the secretary page with three prizes. Also an impersonation race.

Hobbies are barred in both these races.

Moved by Mr. Turner and Mr. Garbutt that the races be advertised in the Canadian Sportsman.

A special tent will be furnished the directors and officers where they will have meals.

Mr. Anderson will have the dinner tent.

A troop of Arab acrobats and performing animals are some of the special attractions engaged for this year.

Mrf Wm. Yelland's dog race will be another attraction this year.

The directors then adjourned and some of them will get together today or Monday and draw up an official program for the three days and hand it to the Printing Committee, as it is time to get these out.

TINKERING WITH BUSINESS.

The business interests of this country should no longer be made the puff-ball of American politics. Constant tinkering with the laws that affect commerce as quickly and positively as does a powerful drug affect the physical body of the individual, is a constant menance to steady, healthy general growth. Favored industries, made so by liberal contributions to party campaign funds are largely responsible for this condition and when members of Congress are swayed in their action by the petty needs, real or imaginary, of their districts, the damage done to the industry in its broadest sense is almost beyond comprehension.

PREMIER SILVELA

Madrid, Aug. 13.—Senor Maura, the Prime Minister, in an interview declared that the war manifested against the Moors by the Spanish government is not unpopular. He says the people manifest a devotion to the flag and that the situation in relation to the recent outbreaks were exaggerated.

"There is one fact," said Senor Maura, which ought to have been enough to convince thoughtful persons that the situation has never been as grave as depicted by some French newspapers, that is, that the trouble in Barcelona scarcely lasted five days, having begun on Monday and ended [illegible] restored the [illegible] Saturday.

Robinson Armed with Rifle and Revolver

Will Make Fight to the Death—Warren Man Still Eludes Capture in the Woods— A Visit to the Home

Warren, Ont., Aug. 13.—That Jas. Robinson, reputed joint-murderer of his children, will never be taken alive, is expressed by the people of this neighborhood. It has been learned that when Robinson called at his home early Wednesday morning, he obtained a revolver, a rifle and four boxes of cartridges. He is an expert woodsman, having lived in the back woods all his life, and the constables will have great difficultyin locating him. If they do, however, and he is cornered, it is hard to say what the result will be. Either he will put up a fight, and he is said to be a good shot, in which case he may add some more to his list of crimes—or he will shot himself.

A reporter had a talk with John Robinson, eldest son of the Robinson family, this morning. He is 21 years of age, and is quite the usual type of farmer's boy, mild mannered and frank. He evidently feels very keenly the position of the family, and particularly the unfortunate condition of his sisters. He says he knew nothing of his father's criminal relations with his sisters until a year ago when his mother told him.

She advised him to say nothing about it, however, telling him that the "quiet way was the best way," so he obeyed her. "I knew nothing about the children being born, until this trouble started; that was the first I heard of it," he said.

DID NOT REALIZE HER CRIME.

"I don't think mother realized she was committing a crime when she did away with the children. Her sole idea was to keep father out of any trouble, and to keep people from knowing about it."

"How did your father treat you?" Was he harsh with the family?" the boy was asked.

"No, not harsh; he was just like other fathers; he made us mind; that's all."

HASTY MORNING VISIT.

Then he told of his father's hasty visit to the house yesterday morning.

"He came in about seven o'clock. He asked us about the inquest, and, when we told him mother would probably be sent to a jail for a month until she was tried, or until they caught him, he didn't say anything. He seemed to be too broken up to say anything. He did not stay for breakfast, and only took enough food with him for one meal. He did not say where he was going."

Rev. Mr. Dunlop, the Methodist minister here expressed himself very strongly on the case in conversation with a reporter this morning. It seems that rumor has been rampant here for three years charging exactly the conditions which have been found to exist.

A child was born to the youngest girl, Ellen, on June 7, 1906, when she was between 14 and 15 years of age. It was a girl. The child is still living. As the family are isolated, the nearest neighbor being nearly two miles away, and the family did not associate much with the other young people in the neighborhood, ugly rumors began to float about. The case, bad as it was, was given a worse color by these reports. They persisted until a year ago, when on the 17th and 23rd of March, children were born to Jessie and Ellen respectively, both children dying.

Rev. Mr. Evans of Sturgeon Falls, reported the matter to Mr. Keiso, who deputed him to get the facts. Mr. Evans asked Rev. Mr. Dunlop of Warren, to confront the mother with the charge that incest was being committed, and possibly murder but the latter refused, not wishing to meddle in the matter.

The greatest possible talk arose, and matters became so hot and rumor so loud that it was having a very bad effect on the morals of the community.

Accordingly Magistrate Wright decided to charge Robinson with the crime, and did so on Saturday last.

Although rumor has been persistent, the neighborhood, when faced with the actual facts, has been shocked beyond measure, and can scarcely belive that such conditions existed. It is probable that the plea of insanity will be advanced on behalf of Mrs. Robinson.

CHARGE OF MURDER.

Robinson, when caught, will be charged with murder, for, while Mrs. Robinson's confession did not implicate her husband in the murder of the children. Magistrate Wright stated this morning that evidence had been found which indicated that the wife had withheld a great deal in her confession.

Orillia Woman Endeavoring to Prevent Hotel License Transfer.

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Margaret McDonnell, Orillia, has entered action today at Osgoode Hall against Allan Gray, W. Walls, and W. Shier, license commissioners for the electoral district of North Ontario; and C. Kelley of Uxbridge, license inspector for the same district, for an injunction to restrain the defendants from allowing Chas. P. Healey, hotelkeeper, in the township of Mara, to remove the license held by him for the Atherley Hotel to other premises. A second action has been entered by the plaintiff against Healey to restrain him from transferring the license in question.

MUST REMOVE PEAS.

Florence Got His Orders from Magistrate Dumble Yesterday.

At police court yesterday morning D. Florence was charged with maintaining a public nuisance at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets. Florence owns the large warehouse at that point which was burned down some time ago. It seems there were in the warehouse at the time a large number of old rags, and several hundred bushels of peas. These, when the water from the fire soaked into them, began to rot and a most disagreeable odor prevailed around the neighborhood.

When the case was brought up Magistrate Dumble wished a close and vivid description of the odor

"Was it strong?" inquired his honor.

"Yes," replied the witness, "it could be smelt three blocks away."

"Was it worse than pea soup?"

"Yes," again replied the witness. "I'll never be able to look pea soup in the face again."

"Well, if the obnoxious smell is not removed by next Tuesday it will be worse than ever, for there will be a dead Jew in it," exclaimed his honor, and with this awful threat ringing in his ears, Florence departed at an increased acceleration.

Medical Association Asked to Pass Plans for Isolation Hospital

A special meeting of the Property Committee to consider the revised plans for the isolation hospital, was held yesterday. All the members of the committee are convinced that the building is necessary, but before recommending it to the council they decidedto have the Medical Association pass upon the plans. Dr. McPherson will report to the mayor the opinions of the medical men, and the mayor will call a council meeting.

Those present were Chairman Ald. Bradburn, Aldermen McIntyre, Duncan and Mayor Rush.

Dr. McPherson, medical health officer, and the instigator of the new plans for Peterborough's isolation hospital, took the plans and explained them to the members of the committee. He pointed out the uses of the various rooms which are provided for and why they are necessary. The plans were described at some length in these columns a short time ago. The hospital will be thoroughly up-to-date, and will be attractive for patients. It is proposed that the long way of the building will face toward Water street, and the diphtheria side will face the boundry road. The hospital is to be situated on the north end of the Hilliard farm, just above the gravel pit and about where the smallpox tents are now situated.

Ald. Bradburn said that what the city was up against was that the hospital would cost $12,000. The council can, however, raise the debentures for the hospital without going to the people. The initial cost of the building would not be so very much but the maintenance of the institution would be considederable.

The committee members discussed the question and all agreed that such a hospital was necessary. Without a hospital every resident who has a case of scarlet fever in the house is put to the expense of a hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars, and the average person cannot stand that expense.

The city clerk looked up the city's legislation and found that the city could issue debentures up to $15,000 for the isolation hospital. The plans for the present hospital will cost $12,000, and the equipment complete about $3,000.

After further discussion Aldermen Duncan and Morgan moved that the plans be referred to the City Medical Association. That Dr. McPherson arrange for the meeting and then report to the mayor, who will call a meeting of the whole [illegible] Carried.

"Sick Man's Friend"

1,000,000 Bottles Used Annually.

No, better known or more popular family remedy has ever been compounded than "Nerviline." During the past half century its success has been phenomenal—due to the fact that it always cures.

"No one could get him go to bed at night unless I was sure we have Nerviline in the house," writes Mrs. R. L. Weightman of Bolton P. O. "Six years ago my husband was taken badly with rheumatism, which affected his right arm and shoulder. It was so sore and stiff as to be almost helpless for four years. I read of the case of James E. Everett, and felt sure that when Nerviline cured a case like his, it would cure my husband. I got a dollar's worth of Nerviline, five bottles, in Buffalo, and am pleased to write you that the fourth bottle cured. We have since used Nerviline for Lumbago, Neuralgia, Colds, Chest Tightness and other minor ailments in the family and found 'Nerviline' to be the 'Sick Man's Friend.'

CURED 4 YEARS RHEUMATISM

No other remedy is so useful in the home, so universally employed to alleviate pain and curing the sick. Refuse anything offered you instead of Nerviline which is sold: Large 25c. bottles or five for $1.00. By all dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont. 26

HARD LINES IN GEORGIA.

Georgia has abolished the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors and after a year of legal, if not actual, prohibition has imposed a tax tax of ten cents a gallon on "soft" drinks. That amounts to prohibition in that direction and it is rumored that the next move will be to attack tea and coffee drinkers.

There is another side to the Georgia story, it is true, but the Times declines to credit that side, for it is to the effect that no less liquor is consumed in Georgia than formerly, as proved by returns of the Federal Government. Neither will it consent to believe the reports of hypocrisy, lying and all ill-conduct on the part of citizens to obtain their accustomed stimulant. Such is the state of things elsewhere under stern legal repression of personal appetite and taste but it must be that Georgia is an exception to the general rule.

For a State whose citizens are so rabid about reform as even to drive soft drinks out of the State must be puritanic enough to enforce all radical laws for the time being at least. The seriousness of several Southern States will be more easy to accept for fact if it were not so often, said by men of that section that the blue laws are aimed at the black race and are no more carefully enforced against white men than are the election laws of the same commonwealths.

Ontario continues still to be a pretty fair country to live in, though it is by no means certain how long it will bear that good name with local option in about half the municipalities, it is little wonder that places where prohibition exists is looked upon with considerable interest.

A TIMELY APPEAL.

The Western Canadian Irrigation convention which adjourned recently at Winnipeg passed several most timely and important resolutions, but the biggest and best was that asking the Dominion Government to set aside the whole of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains as a forest reserve, to save the rivers which the great prairie provinces. In referring to this the Ottawa journal says that it is to be hoped that this proposition will have the backing of the Minister of the Interior, Hon. Mr. Oliver and meet the favor of the Government.

The chief argument is the preservation of the rivers of Alberta and Saskatchewan, the majority of which find rise in the Rockies and their eastern foothills. Continuance of the forests there means continuance of the rivers, with ample water and even flow. Disappearance of the forests means less precipitation of moisture in that region, earlier and more rapid melting of the snows each year, denudation of soil on the hills, floods in the rivers in the spring, followed by extremely low water later, perhaps extinction.

Persia, Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor, were once among the most fertile and beautiful parts of the world. Now in part they are among the most barren and unsightly. The explanation offered by scientists is the destruction of the forests on the uplands. First the trees went, then lacking the protection of the trees, the soil on the hill-sides was washed away, with the trees and the soil gone, the rains, instead of storing moisture to feed the streams evently, became devastating forces with instantaneously disappeared in injurious floods, and eventually the largest streams dwindled to small ones, the smaller disappeared, and with the streams vanished the fertility of the country.

An intelligent conservation of forests is one of the greatest achievements that can be put to national credit. Most of our governments are waking up to this. The Dominion and the provincial Governments have all been establishing splendid forest reserves. The Dominion Government could do nothing better than go further in the good work by acting upon the representations of the Western Irrigation convention.

OVERSEAS BY BALLOON.

The success which has been met with in aviation, to the extent of making a successful trip across the English channel, naturally leads says the Brantford Expositor, to a revival of interest in the greater question. Shall we ever go to Europe by balloon? This is answered in an interesting article which appears in the September number of The Technical World Magazine.

The writer of this article says that not only may we go to Europe by airship, taking advantage of what has become known to meteorologists as "the great highway of the air," but we may return, for this highway is not a one-way route, but issues return tickets to all who study its schedules and take advantage of them with the proper equipment. The rails of this vast circuit road of the upper air are laid, so to speak even the motive power is provided; the knowledge of the schedules has been furnished us by Professor Clayton, and other scientific observers; the only remaining need is the safe and sure equipment for reaching this upper air current and staying in it until the desired point is reached, and men daring enough to trust their lives to the first voyage and thus point the way to thousands of eager followers.

In other words, a balloon several miles high at the latitude of Boston finds a wind blowing from west to east which is as dependable as the motion of the earth itself, which will whisk it across 3,000 miles of sea at the rate of speed far exceeding that of the swiftest ocean liner. At a point near the equator it would find an equally steady return current which would waft it at equal speed back to America. With a dirigible capable of seeking favorable local winds or proceeding against moderately unfavorable ones to traverse the space from England to the Canary Islands or from Key West to Boston, it can be seen that a circuit would be established which would have great possibilities, even to the revolutionizing of the passenger service between this continent and Europe.

GYPSY IMMIGRANTS BARRED.

The policy of barring gypsies, which the new immigration commissioner at Ellis Island is enforcing, is likely to meet with general public approval There is no conceivable respect in which they can be a benefit to our society. While not likely to be a charge on our communities in the ordinary sense, they are suspected of being so in anothes. They are hardly desirable neighbors even for a short time, and it has become the custom in most communities to refuse them a place to fix their camps. Picturesque, no doubt they are, and reminders of certain phases of the days of romance and chivalry, but we measure our human accretions these days by the standard of utility, and according to that they are invariably found wanting.

CUSTOMS OF THE NAVY

SOME CURIOUS WAYS OF BRITISH LOWER DECKS.

Jack-Tar Has Various Means of Making His Protests to the Captain—Placards in the Christmas Decorations—Lionel Yexley Tells of Early Days on Whale Island When Fisher and Scott Were There.

"By gods and little fishes! What constitutions Britishers must have; salt pork and pea soup, and up the top of the mast, with the temperature of the lower deck about 110 degrees Fahrenheit. Still, Christmas is Christmas, and it takes more than tropical thunderstorms and salt pork to knock the spirit out of the average Englishman on that day."

Afterwards the men ranted and roared "like true British seamen," and danced in wild abandon and a thick fog of tobacco smoke, wearing little else than bathing costumes.

Such was a Christmas Day, typical of many spent by our lads in blue lying at foreign stations, which Mr. Lionel Yexley experienced while stationed in the Persian Gulf, and which he describes in his interesting book, "The Inner Life of the Navy" (Pitman). He also tells how Christmas is spent on board men-o'-war at home, and mentions that, should there be any little grievance affecting the men generally, suggestive mottoes are hung among the decorations, where the captain cannot fail to see them. "These, in ships where the captain takes an interest in the men, generally have the desired result."

Mr Yexley spent many years in the navy and was at Whale Island when that splendid gunnery school was in its infancy, and when the authorities were just beginning to awaken to the fact that the man behind the gun counts for something in warfare. All the men who arrived at the island for gunnery instruction were called Volunteers, and "the first thing that a Volunteer had impressed on his mind was that he knew nothing.' If you will bear in mind that you don't know what a rifle is, don't know how to put on your accoutrements, don't know how to turn to the left or right, we shall get on very well together,' was the dictum of the instructor. And from that position each man had to start."

In those days "Jacky" Fisher, now Sir John Fisher and First Sea Lord, was appointed captain, while on the staff of gunnery officers was Lieut. Percy Scott.—destined to revolutionize the whole gunnery of the navy—now a rear-admiral and Sir Percy Scott. No doubt there were faults in the system of training; for instance, too much trouble was taken over details, such as getting a man into the exact position supposed to be necessary to the proper firing of a gun, and this led to the catch phrase, "Attitude is the art of gunnery—whiskers make the man."

The curious fact is mentioned that "the British navy is the only uniformed fighting service of any civilized state that has the very doubtful honor of paying for its own uniform, and the British bluejacket is very loud and persistent in his demand to be relieved of what he considers an unfair tax on his scanty earnings." Until recent years Jack made his own clothes, but now he must buy them from the Admiralty ready-made. A sharp eye, however, was always kept upon the manner in which Jack cut his cloth.

The regulations, for instance, said that the size of the trouser leg at the knee should be 10 inches, and 11 inches at the foot, and added, "The measurement across the knee is always to be 1 inch less than at the foot." Then the pockets of the jumpers must be 6 inches deep and 3 inches wide, the top of the pocket to be so many inches from the line of the shoulder. At the home depots it was no uncommon thing for a sailor, if his clothes deviated from the official scale, to have them ruthlessly ripped up with a knife so as to make them impossible for wear until they had been altered.

The issue of rum is an interesting daily event in the life of a bluejacket. Every man who has reached the age of twenty is entitled to a spirit ration of half a gill of rum daily, which, before it reaches him, is mixed with three half-gills of water, making half a pint in all. A cask of rum is taken out of the spirit room at six bells (eleven o'clock a.m.), in the presence of various officers, including the captain of the hold, with his implements — spirit pump, measures, etc.

The latter pumps out the necessary quantity, after which the rum cask is re-hanged and returned to the spirit room, which is then locked up until the next day, the key being placed usually outside the captain's door under the charge of the sentry. After the officers' allowances have been drawn off the rum is mixed with the proper proportion of water and served out to the men.

Effect of a Shave.

"Men have one advantage," said the woman, "and that is when they are shaved they are so sure of themselves. If they are not all right it is the fault of the barber, but if they have a good barber, why, then, their self-assurance is complete. I sat in the lobby of a big hotel yesterday looking at a big fat man who had come out from under the hands of his barber, and I never saw anything so placid with pure complacency as his large, fat face. I wish I could have been so certain that mine was all right as he was of his."

Swearing It In.

"The story's true," declared the married man. "I swear it." And, holding up his hand, he took the oath.

"We believe you," said his listeners. "You needn't swear."

The married man put down his hand, somewhat abashed.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "I have to swear to the truth of my statements so often to my wife that it has become second nature."

QUINQUENNIAL ECHOES.

Toronto Ladies Still Talk of Their Strong-Minded Guests.

If the half were to be printed of what is being told about delegates to the Quinquennial Council in Toronto that town would not contain the writing thereof. There were adequate daily reports as to how the council occupied its business hours, but the private lives of its members while there is a subject which has been left to gossip, and some funny stories are gaining currency.

Some of the European visitors stopped at other points on their way to Toronto, and it is said that a Montreal family, returning to the city for a brief sojourn in their town house in preparation of their visit to the city, found entirely to their surprise, a prominent Teutonic delegate to the council occupying their house and boasting their servants. They deprecated her untimely arrival during their absence and the upset condition of the house, and assured her of their complete surprise. But their guest comforted her involuntary entertainers with the assurance of the great comfort of her entertainment, and her intention to remain until it was time to move on. Meeting later on in Toronto, the German lady was equally candid in informing the Montreal people that she was not being half so well entertained in the Queen City.

There is an old cricket story, which saw the light in the times when cricket matches never extended into the second day, about some Englishmen exiled to France, who desired to alleviate their homesickness by indulgence in the national game. They accepted a free lease from a wealthy landowner near the town of a generous portion of his pasture, and soon came to feel so much at home that their secretary wrote their benefactor requesting him to remove his cows from their cricket field. Some of the delegates must have been descended from these old cricketers.

A Toronto lady who bears a foreign name, but yields in loyal British sentiment to no one in the Empire, was called upon to entertain a lady from over the seas and one daughter. The expected guest asked the privilege of bringing another daughter, and eventually turned up with three daughters and a maid. No doubt the hospitable hostess, who has never winced under the hardships of synod time, began to understand why the quartering of soldiers used to be unpopular, and has ceased to be customary, especially when her enterprising guests turned her out of her own room.

Niagara's Age.

According to Mr. Spencer, of the Canadian Geological Survey, the great spectacle of Niagara Falls, as we see it to-day, has been about 30,000 years in the making. Mr. Spencer, in common with other geologists who have studied Niagara, believes that originally the cataract fell into Lake Ontario over three steps, or platforms, the first being 35 feet high, and the third being at or near the edge of the lake proper, instead of seven miles back up the river as at present. It took the stream 25,000 years to hollow out the first three miles of the gorge, but only 4,000 years for the other four miles. The difference of time in these two stages of the erosion, and of the cataract's recession of seven miles in all, is explained on the theory of a sudden and enormous increase of the volume of water, caused by seismic disturbance, or earthquake.

Formerly the Niagara River served as outlet to Lake Erie only. After the upheaval, the waters of Lakes Huron, Michigan, and Superior, which previously had debouched directly into Lake Ontario, were diverted into Lake Erie into the Niagara River, swelling that stream to six times its former volume. Mr. Spencer's figures, of course, can be taken only approximately, as even contemporary authorities are at variance as to how the Falls of Niagara have receded during the past fifty years—some estimates making it 1.28 metres per annum, others 1.52. Moreover, while the U.S. Geological Survey declares that the rate of recession of the Falls has increased during the last fifteen years, the corresponding Canadian official report shows that the rate has decreased some 66 centimetres per annum.

Elevators and Flour Mills.

The Department of the Interior has recently issued a map of that part of Canada lying west of the Great Lakes, showing the positions of grain elevators and flour and oatmeal mills, together with tables showing their individual and collective capacity. In the three provinces of Manitoba, Alberta, and Saskatchewan there are 650 grain elevators, with an aggregate capacity of 42,686,900 bushels. The terminal elevators at Lake Superior have a capacity of 20,132,700 bushels, and there are also transfer elevators at eastern points with a capacity of 14,286,000 bushels. Thus the total elevator capacity of Western Canada amounts to 76,816,140 bushels. Manitoba has 50 flour and oatmeal mills, with a daily capacity of 17,205 barrels; Saskatchewan has 28 mills, with a possible daily output of 3,265 barrels; while Alberta has 17 mills, with a possible daily output of 1,530 barrels.

Fish Freights.

In order to encourage the developments of the Canadian fishing industry on the Pacific coast, where the bounty system prevailing in the Atlantic provinces does not obtain, the Dominion Government recently passed an Order-in-Council granting a bonus equal to a rebate of one-third of the express freight rates on all shipments of fish billed from Vancouver by Canadian fishing companies or Canadian fishermen to any point in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. This rebate or bonus applies to any variety of sea-fish caught in Canadian waters, including salmon, halibut, oysters, crabs, and clams.

MERELY AN EYE WASH.

The Chemical View of Tears Differs From the Poetical View.

Tears have their functional duty to accomplish, like every other fluid of the body, and the lachrymal gland is not placed behind the eye simply to fill space or to give expression to emotion.

The chemical properties of tears consist of phosphate of lime and soda, making them very salty, but never bitter. Their action on the eye is very beneficial, and here consists their prescribed duty of the body, washing thoroughly that sensitive organ, which allows no foreign fluid to do the same work. Nothing cleanses the eye like a good salty shower bath, and medical art has followed nature's law in this respect, advocating the invigorating solution for any distressed condition of the optics. Tears do not weaken the sight, but improve it. They act as a tonic on the muscular vision, keeping the eye soft and limpid, and it will be noticed that women in whose eyes sympathetic tears gather quickly have brighter, tenderer orbs than others. When the pupils are hard and cold the world attributes it to one's disposition, which is a mere figure of speech implying the lack of balmy tears that are to the cornea what salve is to the skin or nourishment to the blood.

The reason some women weep more easily than others and all more readily than the sterner sex has not its difference in the strength of the tear gland, but in the possession of a more delicate nerve system. The nerve fibers about the glands vibrate more easily, causing a downpour from the watery sac. Men are not nearly so sensitive to emotion. Their sympathetic nature—that term is used in a medical sense—is less developed, and the eye gland is therefore protected from shocks. Consequently a man should thank the formation of his nerve nature when he contemptuously scorns tears as a woman's practice. Between man and monkey there is this essential difference of tears—an ape cannot weep, not so much because its emotional powers are undeveloped as the fact that the lachrymal gland was omitted in his optical makeup.—Exchange.

A Matrimonial Catch.

A remarkably active peer in the Commons is Earl Winterton, the "baby" of the last Parliament, so called because he was elected, while Viscount Turnour, when he was only twenty-one. His lordship has proved himself a young man of energy and vigilance in the House, but apparently politics do not allow him sufficient scope, for it has just been announced that he is to fill the editorial chair of The World. The earl writes as well as he speaks, and in addition is a keen sportsman. Furthermore, he possesses the distinction of being a grandson of that social queen, the late Dowager Duchess of Abercorn. In fact, someone who has counted up says that his lordship has more relatives of exalted rank than anybody else in the United Kingdom, and that the woman who wins him—for he is still a bachelor—will be related by marriage to three dukes, two marquesses, two earls, several barons, and a corresponding number of marchionesses and countesses.

Wasting Valuable Time.

An old farmer died in a little village in the neighborhood of Paris. His fortune, the fruit of years of patient toil, was invested in a nice compact little farm. A nephew of the departed, believing himself to be heir, called a few days later on the lawyer and before saying a word about the succession thought it only right and proper to shed a few tears.

"Poor uncle!" he murmured. "So kind, so affectionate — to think that I shall never see him again!"

The notary allowed the young man to give full vent to his sorrowful emotions, after which he quietly observed:

"I suppose you are aware that your uncle has left you nothing?"

"What!" exclaimed the nephew, suddenly changing his tone. "I'm not down in the will? Then why on earth did you let me stand weeping there and making a fool of myself for a good half hour?"

An Editor's Woes.

Editing a paper is a nice thing and no mistake. If we publish jokes people say we are rattle-brained. If we don't we are fools. If we publish original matter, they say we do not give them enough selections. If we give them selections, we are too lazy to write. If we don't go to church we are heathens. If we do we are hypocrites. If we remain in the office we ought to be out looking for news. If we go out, then we are not attending to business. If we wear old clothes, they laugh at us. If we wear good clothes, they say we are extravagant. Now, what are we to do? Just as likely as not someone will say that we purloined this from another paper. So we did.

That's the Question.

Clifford can ask questions quicker than we can answer them, and a few days ago his uncle told him he would turn into an interrogation point. I agreed with him and said that I had once seen a picture of a little boy turning into one. He had become more and more curved and finally had become just a large interrogation point.

Cliff listened intently, and when I had finished he instantly asked, "Well, how did they keep the dot under him?"—Delineator.

Explaining It.

We were moving a 4,000 pound safe from one office to another, says a writer in The Saturday Evening Post. George, the negro janitor, with a 4 by 4 pine stick was pinching the safe along. The boss man said, "George, why don't you pick that safe up and carry it instead of monkeying with that scantling?"

George replied: "Boss, I hain't feelin' very pickish dis mawnin', suh. I's feelin' a leetle duplicate."

CARE OF FLOWER BEDS.

How to Keep Them Beautiful All Through the Summer.

All flower beds should at this season of the year be kept in proper shape and condition. All seed pods and withered and yellow leaves should be carefully cleaned and picked off. Frequent stirring with the hoe is good, but not deep enough to in any way injure the roots. It is a good idea every time you mow the grass to take a sharp spade and cut the edge of all your flower beds. It keeps the grass from encroaching on the beds and also keeps the beds in their proper shape and form and makes them have a fresh and neat appearance.

By August many of the soft growing foliage bedding plants, such as coleus, alternantheras achryanthus, etc., will be growing freely and should be kept cut back and not allowed to become straggling. To be pretty, beds having plants of this kind should be uniform. The various colors should not be allowed to intermingle. Golden colored plants should not have red foliage ones sticking their shoots up through the yellow, etc. This is easily prevented by constantly pinching. The main point is to commence pinching early and take the tip out of the young growth. In this way you can scarcely see that the work is going on. If, however, you neglect them until the plants are very tall then you leave stems showing, and the beds are unsightly for awhile

Some beds are greatly benefited by a mulching of well rotted stable manure. It is necessary to shake out all the long straw before using, and if the manure is in large pieces chop it with a spade. Rose beds, cannas, hardy herbaceous and berbena beds are all benefited by mulching. We do not believe it is necessary to thus mulch soft plants, such as the coleus and geraniums, as they grow very well without it. The work of mulching is very simple. All you want to do is to spread the manure over the bed carefully to the depth of about one inch.

How often flower beds in the open air should be watered depends to a great extent upon the character of the soil and variety of plants. If the soil is good stiff loam and you have frequent showers you do not need to water at all. If it is sandy, as near the coast, and the weather dry it is beneficial to water every day. Geraniums seldom need watering when growing in good garden soil. With much water they grow too much to foliage. Cannas and plants of this character do not require much water For them and geraniums we prefer much hoeing.

If using a hose sprinkler to water have just force enough to water without washing the ground. Hold the sprinkler near the ground so the water goes first where you want it Geraniums should not have the flower heads watered if you can avoid it, as it spoils them completely. The evening, after sundown, is the best time to water, as the plants have all night to take up the moisture, and artificial watering is soon evaporated under the combined effects of wind and hot summer sun.

Rainbow Tinted Fishes.

The remarkable brilliancy of color in the fish living about the coral reefs in tropical regions has been often noticed. Brilliant blue with fins and tail of bright yellow, vivid crimson shading off into a more subdued hue, bright green spotted and banded with red, green with long parallel stripes of blue and red, green marked with red above and bright blue below—such are some of the colors displayed by the fish of the Great Barrier reef of Australia. In order to explain such brilliant hues on the principles of natural selection, they have been described as "warning colors." The fish are thought to be nauseous or poisonous and to proclaim this by their bright colors. As regards those of the Australian coral reef, however, many of them are said to be excellent eating.

A Bold Defence.

"An enlisted man once put the president of a court-martial in a difficult position," says a writer in Cassell's Magazine. "The court-martial was trying the soldier for some fault or other. When the evidence—and it took an unusually long time—had been given, the president asked the prisoner if he had anything to say in his defence.

"'Well, sir,' said the man, 'I can't see how this 'ere court can sentence me, for Major Jones 'as been reading a paper under the table the 'ole blooming time, and Captain Smith 'as been making me into karicatoor on the blotting pad, and, as for Lieut. Brown, 'e 'asn't 'ad his commission a year and don't count anyways!'"

Casting Metals.

As is well known, some metals are unsuitable for casting, while others, like iron, can readily be cast in any desired shape. The property of casting well is said to depend upon whether the metal contracts or expands on solidifying from the liquid form. Iron, like water, expands in solidifying, and hence the solid metal may be seen floating in the liquid iron about it The expansion causes it to fill the die into which it is poured, and so it can be cast easily. Gold and silver contract in cooling and therefore are not suitable for casting.

The London Pageant.

The site selected for next year's London pageant in that part of Chingford Plain which adjoins Connaught Water has been approved by the pageant authorities. Between the lake and the old hunting lodge of Queen Elizabeth a great horseshoe stand will be built, three times the size of that erected at Fulham for the church pageant There will be 15,000 performers.

Canadian Securities

The quiet but successful placing of $5,000,000 of Dominion Iron and Steel Co. bonds with English banking houses affords another demonstration of London's capacity for the absorption of Canadian securities.—Toronto News.

FADS OF CRIMINALS.

Murderers Who Were Particular as to Personal Appearance.

Oscar Slater, who murdered Miss Gilchrist in her Glasgow flat, proved himself a typical dandy even in the condemned cell and also a stickler for the proprieties. He insisted, for instance, from the very beginning in being called "Mr." Slater, and each morning he changed his linen, varied his neckwear and demanded polished boots.

Similar exhibitions of strutting peacock vanity are not uncommon on the part of men doomed to die on the gallows. Wainwright on the day preceding his execution absolutely refused to dress because his clean linen had not arrived from the laundry, and a new shirt and collar had to be bought for him. When the evening arrived—his last on earth—he craved a smoke. A pipe and tobacco were brought to him, but he rejected them with disdain. He would have a cigar. And he got it.

Lefroy, who murdered poor old Mr. Gold in a railway carriage on the way to Brighton, wore an evening dress suit during the whole of the period that elapsed between his condemnation and his execution; also he was greatly upset at the refusal of the authorities to allow him to be hanged in a new silk hat presented to him in court.

As a rule, however, the thoughts of the condemned turn mostly toward food. Rush, the Stansfield Hall murderer, was an educated man. "I want my slippers and The Times," were his first words on returning to jail after his conviction. But a little later he called for pen and paper and wrote out an order for his next day's dinner, 'Pig and plenty of apple sauce."

In those days it was the custom to give capital convicts whatever they asked for in the way of food. But the rule was abolished soon afterward, one of the first delinquents to come under the new regulations being a certain Jeffrey, who murdered his six-year-old child by hanging him in a cellar in Seven Dials. He was unaware of the alteration and called for a roast duck directly he entered the condemned cell, and when it was refused him he behaved so violently that he had to be put in a straitjacket.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Genesis of the Cravat.

Cravats date from the incursion of the Croats into French territory during the Thirty Years' War. The French termed there invaders "Cravates," and a freak of fashion made their somewhat clumsy neckgear popular about 1636. The fancy must have spread very rapidly, for we find lace cravats with bread ends hanging in front replacing the wide collars of the cavaliers during the earlier stages of the civil war in England. Charles II. made white cravats a part of the uniform of his life and dragoon guards. The palmy period of the cravat was early in the eighteenth century, when these articles were made of the very finest lace and were so expensive that even the richest of fashionable young men could not afford to have more than two of them in their wardrobes.—London Standard.

The Time to Save.

As a general rule the question whether a man's career is to spell success or failure is settled between the ages of thirty and forty-five.

If a man cannot attain prosperity at forty his chances after that age are remote.

At fifty the sensible man plays for safety rather than for high stakes, for after that age not one man in five thousand can recover his financial position if he should come a cropper.

At sixty 98 per cent. are either dependent upon their daily earnings or upon their relatives.

It is evident, therefore, that no man should put off saving for old age after he has passed his fortieth birthday.

Twenty-First Century Wooing.

The grave young medical man entered the front parlor with sober mien. Unfastening his small black satchel, he produced a little purple vial, and, taking therefrom a tiny bag, he slipped it into a hypodermic syringe and advanced toward the shrinking girl.

"No, no!" cried the pretty Penelope. "It cannot be! I could not love you in the world!"

"You just wait until Mr. Cocoamorita gets busy in your delicate blue veins," said the young doctor, injecting the love germ.

Their devotion is now almost proverbial.

Consistent.

In a hospital in one of the large cities of central France the physician in chief, in the course of his round of inspection, approached a cot and after feeling the patient's pulse remarked, "H'm—he is doing very nicely; his pulse is much better."

"It is as you say, doctor," replied the nurse, "but it is not the same man. Yesterday's patient is dead, and this one has been put in his place."

"Ah," said the doctor, "different patient, eh? Well, same treatment." And he walked on.

He Had the Best of It.

Nervous passenger (on lake steamer)—It must be really terrible to think of an accident happening to the boat while you are away down there in that hole.

Stoker—It's just the other way, ma'am. If the boat sinks I won't have to go through more'n about half as much water as you will 'fore I get to the bottom of the lake.

A Way Out.

Servant—A newspaper reporter wishes to interview your, sir.

Great Man—Did you not tell him I was hoarse—could hardly speak?

Servant—Certainly, sir! But he assured me he would only ask questions which you could answer by a nod or a shake of the head.

Great Man—Then tell him I have a stiff neck.

Lake Huron Islands.

There are some 2,000 islands in Lake Huron.

Scipio Africanus.

Scipio Africanus was one of the greatest soldiers, save Julius Caesar, in Roman history. He defeated Hannibal and his Carthaginians at Zama, a city of Carthage, on Oct. 19, in the year 202 B. C., and gave to Rome the ascendancy over the then known world.

ICED TEA.

How to Make and Serve This Refreshing Summer Drink.

However the doctors and health fearful may revile iced tea, it is bound to stay as long as thermometers are so unruly in summer. It is surprising, considering the amount of iced tea Americans consume, how rarely it is good.

The most scientific and supposedly healthful way to prepare it is to pour freshly brewed hot tea over a large lump of ice, then pour into glasses half filled with shaved ice.

More economical is it to make a small quantity of rather strong tea several hours before it is to be used, let it cool in the refrigerator and weaken to the desired consistency with iced water just before needed.

It is a mistake to think iced tea can be cooled by a few lumps in the pitcher. There must be either cracked or shaved ice in glasses to make it palatable.

Lemon is also better added before the meal than at it. The usual way is to pass a section of lemon to each guest. Far better is the taste if both lemon and sugar are mixed with the tea when the iced water is added. Better yet is it to adopt the Russian plan of grating the rind of a lemon and pouring hot tea over it.

If lemon is passed, as it may have to be when some of the family do not like it, cut into lengthwise sections rather than thin rounds and pass in addition a small glass pitcher filled with extra lemon juice.

Mint leaves or lemon verbena added to iced tea, besides the lemon, gives a delicious flavor. It is also good with a little ginger syrup or a few drops of rum.

One hostess on gala occasions serves her iced tea poured cold over lemon, orange or pineapple sherbet. This is served in a punch bowl, and each guest fills her tall glass with the mixture. In this case cracked ice is not used.

The thinner and more slender an iced tea glass is the more refreshing it tastes. It should be stood on a glass saucer or tumbler coaster. If possible use long handled spoons.

USED AGAINST HER.

Congratulations the Actress Received on Her Engagement.

A London music hall belle who had just successfully "landed" an old and wealthy nobleman sued an unpopular manager, alleging that he had not paid her sufficiently well for her engagement at his hall. She won the case and was immediately inundated with flowery congratulations from her friends, all of whom were glad to see the manager go down.

Not content with her victory, however, the belle must needs crow over her beaten manager by packing up the choicest of these telegrams and dispatching them to his house, with the intimation that he might make what use of them he thought proper.

She regretted this last concession the next morning. Taking her at her word, the manager pasted the telegrams on a board outside the music hall, headed them "What Miss Flightle's friends think of her engagement" and left the public to assume engagement, the professional or the matrimonial, was meant.

Then followed such messages as "Good for you, old girl!" "Pinned the old horror at last!" "Don't let him wriggle off the hook!" "Stick to him till you get the dibs!" "Congratulations on your splendid haul!"

Jingoes v Dingoes.

Australia has succeeded in taking all the sting out of the term jingo. Adherents of the fallen Ministry who were opposed to the offer of a Dreadnought to the Mother Country attacked the Imperialists by accusing them of jingo policy. The Imperialists defended themselves by stating that they preferred a jingo policy to a dingo policy. The contrast so caught popular fancy that it spread quickly through all the states, and Australians are now classified as dingoes or jingoes. The dingo, or wild dog, is such a contemptible beast, cunning and a propensity to bite the hand that feeds it, being its chief characteristics, that jingo is now regarded as a term of honor.

English Villages Without Churches.

England cannot be said to be lacking in churches, and yet there are remote districts that are sometimes put to strange devices for want of one. In the tiny village of East Horndon, in Essex, which possesses a railway station, but no church, service is held every Sunday evening in the station waiting-room. The congregation consists of the railway men and the people of the sparsely-inhabited neighborhood, which only needs a railway station because it is able to send milk to that devouring London, which must seem to be a very incomprehensible place to the simple villagers.

Startling Equine Sagacity.

A startling story of equine sagacity comes from the provinces. A horse was standing in the shafts of a carriage just outside the local theatre. It had a weary look, as of one that desired repose. Suddenly it brightened up, and before it could be stopped it made a dash for the box office. The reason for this unexpected behavior gave rise to much discussion till at last one of the crowd, more observant than the others, pointed out that the legend "To the Stalls" was written in large letters over the box office window.—London Globe.

What He Wanted.

The old man turned from his desk as his son-in-law entered the office.

"Well, what is it now?" he asked.

"I—er—have been thinking," answered the new member of the family, 'that you ought to give me a pension."

"Well, it's like this," explained the other. "Ever since I did your daughter the honor to marry her I have been dependent on you for support, and I want to be independent. See?"

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "middle nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress result nearly always. For this, druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart, and Kidney nerves fail. Then you backache, Heart palpitation, or Kidney Kidneys follow. Don't dose the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these inside nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative It is the nerves, and the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment, you will notice the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all Dealers.

Ontario's Rural Roads Need Great Attention

Toronto Aug. 13,—More than two million dollars are spent every year on the roads of the Province of Ontario. That does not include, of course, the cost of constructing new pavements in towns and cities. Two million dollars on the rural roads. Naturally, one would expect that the roads of the province would be pretty good to travel on, and so they are. But there are many roads yet which would cause one pain were he to look at them after a heavy rain, or in the Spring of the year, when the snow is melting and causing the roads to become rivers of mud. But farmers are appreciating the fact that good roads are very necessary. No matter how good the roads may be in a city or town, the roads leading to those towns or cities should be equally as good, in order to allow farmers to get in to the markets with their products.

When a new district is opened up, the first thing which has to be done is to build roads. Without roads no one would have access to the country The place would not develop at all. Roads are as necessary for the development of any part of the country as railroads. Railroads certainly do a lot to open up new country. But what would be the use of a railroad if there were no good wagon roads leading to and from the tracks?

Time was when any old kind of a road would do. As long as horses could drag through mud and water, and get to market and back again, no one cared whether the road was made of sand, gravel, stone or clay. But with the increased facilities which every farmer demanded came the demand for better roads. About ten years ago the Ontario Department of Public Works started an active campaign for a system of good roads throughout the entire province. For a time the farmers were indifferent. Then they talked the matter over, and finally some action was taken. When the farmers saw that good roads added to the value of their farms, and made travel much easier for both man and beast, they realized that the talk of the department had not been for political purposes, but for the good of the farmers themselves. Gradually the movement spread, and instead of wasting money every year on patching up the old roads, new macadam roadways were built. The cost was a little heavy perhaps, at first, but the repair bills disappeared entirely, and with the money which would have been wasted on patching, new sections of road were built. So the thing goes on. Each year hundreds of miles of good roads are added to the already lengthy system, and everyone benefits. One county councillor, when asked why he favored spending money for good roads, stated that more automobiles would come that way, and if the roads were good the drivers would exceed the speed limit, and the county would be enriched by reason of the extra fines which would be imposed. That may or may not be the case. It is true, however, that the good roads of Ontario attract many a touring automobile party which would not otherwise visit Ontario, and as most of these parties spend a good deal of money, there is a benefit somewhere. In Wentworth County some excellent roads have been laid since the system was first commenced, and there are more automobiling parties using the roads there than in any other part of the province. The same state of affairs exists in Simcoe County, where the roads are fine. Prince Edward County has added thirty or forty miles when completed, and that little county alone spends thousands of dollars every year on its roads. Similar action is being taken by many other counties, and the result will be that in a few years's time there will be none but good roads in Ontario. The time lost, the energy wasted, and the discomfort caused by bad roads, if directed to road construction, would quickly build for Ontario a magnificent system of good country highways. While the cost of wagon transportation has been for many years almost at a standstill, railways have been decreasing cost in many ways, not by spending more. But from the initial cost economy and efficiency in operation has resulted.

CAUSES GREAT CONFUSION

The impassible condition of country roads at certain seasons of the year tends to disorganize commerce, and to throw the railway service into confusion. The demand for farm produce is constant throughout the year. The market is depending, not so much on the demand, as on the the condition of the roads. There is always a rush to market in the Fall, before the roads get bad. At other periods of the year, railway traffic fluctuates as much as fifty per cent., as the direct result of the condition of the roads. Demands of this kind upon commerce and upon the railway accommodation mean a waste of energy that is profitable to no one.

VEHICLE AND ROAD ONE MACHINE

The economical and efficient operation on the common roads should be kept in view. The idea of operation as applied to railways should be directed to country roads. The first cost has in general been the great consideration—the obstacle to a progressive improvement, keeping with modern advance in other ways. The public have become so accustomed to the mud embargo as to be blind to its very existence. The vehicle and the roads are but parts of one machine. With roads equal to the weight and speed of means of transportation, which will no doubt be used, the possibilities as regards farming are tremendous. But a necessary condition to the efficiency of such a vehicle is better roads. The expenditure on country roads in money and labor has amounted to more than two million dollars annually. This large sum is spent in comparatively small amounts throughout the province, and ratepayers do not realize how large a sum is being spent each year. Much of the money is wasted, and much of the remainder turned to poor account.

NO TIME TO WASTE

It has been said that there is no direct cash value to the farmer from a saving of time in driving over the roads; that it does not matter whether he can take one load or two to market in a day; that he has plenty of time to spend in driving over the roads, but has little money to spend in improving them. The day when that argument was effective has gone by. A farmer of today who realizes his opportunities, has no more time to waste than has any other business man. The time that users of the roads waste in driving through mud, if expended in road construction, would do all the work necessary, and we would have the benefit of good roads in addition.

Road construction in Ontario along improved lines is only in it: infancy. While much has been done in the past, there remains much more to be accomplished. There is a growing demand for good roads from all classes of citizens. It is impossible to sum up in a few words the reason for requiring better roads. The benefits are very many. If described in detail they are apt to lose weight, but the aggregate furnishes a motive of very great importance. It is to some extent summed up in the statement that no civilized country ever reached its highest state of development without a good system of common roads. It is seen in Ontario wherever good roads are constructed, by the fact that property along these roads at once increases in value to a very remarkable extent. The people of the rural districts want good roads in order that their social condition will be improved, and that farm life will lose much of its inconveniences and isolation. The people of the town want good roads in order that they may reap the benefit of a richer and more highly developed country surrounding them. The construction of good roads in Ontario is a great public work, in which all citizens are deeply interested.

HASTEN SLOWLY

The roads of a township or county cannot all be permanently built in one season. A start must be made at a few points and the work extended from year to year. There is need for the efficient and early construction of the more heavily traveled market roads, or roads which, if properly constructed, would be heavily traveled. A commencement along the line of permanent construction should be directed to such roads, and in order that this may be undertaken without delay, systems of county are being established throughout the province to which the Provincial Government contributes one-third of the cost. These are now fifteen in number. These roads do not follow the lines of the old county systems, leading continuously through the county, but are the main highways leading to towns, villages and the stations. They are what may be called the market roads, upon which traffic from roads adjacent to them may be collected. They should be so located that no farmer may be more than two or three miles from a good road leading to his market town. These roads, as the town should be placed under a competent superintendent, responsible to the council, and carrying out the directions of the council in so far as they are required.

A runaway on Park street last night caused considerable excitement A passing motor car frightened a horse so badly that it became uncontrollable and dashed up on the sidewalk with the result that the front wheel of the buggy was smashed against a tree and the driver was thrown out. He luckily went over the pavement and lighted on a lawn inside the walk, escaping injury. The horse was held and quieted down by a couple of spectators to the accident, its progress being impeded till they arrived by the axle being held against the tree.

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew. Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"When I was so stooped and took weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant in Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back pain, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, the working man who is tired all day and can't rest at night, whose back aches, and whose feet swell—these people have kidney trouble. Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles, and joints lack of appetite, and loss of sleep teach the cause. Cure the kidneys Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

LITTLE BRITAIN NEARLY WIPED OUT OF EXISTENCE BY FIRE ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Started in Robinson's Blacksmith Shop and Cleaned Out Most of the Business Section with Several Houses

Toronto Sent Assistance--Loss is Heavy

(Special to The Times.)

Lindsay, Aug. 15.—Little Britain a hamlet of about 700 population was almost swept off the face of the map on Saturday evening by a fire which broke out in Robinson's blacksmith shop, and which made rapid headway. A stiff breezewas blowing and the flames quickly spread to the other buildings in the neighborhood comprising the business section. The village possesses no fire fighting apparatus, and the people were therefore at the mercy of the flames. So fierce did the fire become that a call for assistance was sent to Toronto. About ten minutes past six o'clock the department there sentout a steam fire engine from No. 6 station Yonge street and a hose section from Queen and Elizabeth streets, including 10 men. The men and apparatus were loadedona special and sent at all speed to the little village, leaving Toronto at seven o'clock, and arrived in Little Britain about 8 o'clock. The Toronto department did excellent work on the fire and the villagers are deeply grateful for their prompt action and splendid efforts.

Little Britain is situated in Victoria County on the Midland division of the G.T.R., a few miles from this town. Word was first sent here but Lindsay has no engine or apparatus that would be of any service so no help could be given.

The buildings destroyed by the conflagration are:—

R. Robinson's house and black smith and wagon shop.
A Tremeer's carriage shop.
J. Jones' store.
W. Yerex's house and shop.
W. M. Rood's house.
J. J. Rich's house and shop.
Mrs. Fall's house.
J. J. Sloane's house.

It is reported that other buildingswere also destroyed and damaged, but the actual extent of the damage has notyetbeen computed. The fire has been a heavy blow to the village as the greater part of the the business places were destroyed, and the insurance will not begin to cover the loss. The fire was gotten under control late in the evening.

RAMBLA DE LA FLORES IN BARCELONA

Port Vendres, France, Aug. 15.—Peace reigns in Barcelona now, but trouble may break out at any time. The inhabitants circulate freely through the streets, laughing and chatting as if they had not been in the midst of deathlast week. The only evidences of the fury and determinationof the people in revolt are millies of Belgian blocks torn from the streets and arranged in barricades andthe still smoking ruins of convents, monasteries, orphanages, schools and churches, noticeable in every quarter of the city.

But the royalist is frightened and the intelligent republican is vexed and grieved. The ordinary republican (which is equivalent to saying the ordinary Catalan) is exultant and defiant by turns. The anarchist is grimly satisfied, for a mob inevitably means his day.

Burleigh Falls Power is Needed to Run the Factories Coming Here

An evening contemporary is blowing about a lock factory which is looking for a location inCanada and which the paper claims can be located in Peterborough. It is to be hoped that the new lock factory is secured, but if the council handles that proposition the same as it is handling the power proposition Peterborough's chances are slim indeed. In a very few days the poweroption will have expired and the council will then know no more about it than they did six months or two years ago. Positively nothing has been done although some members of the council have tried to get something calledand have tried to have the question settled one way or another. Those who are blocking the business are doing so without the slightest hintof an excuse, or explanation. They are groping around in the dark as it were, and do not appear very anxious for light. In fact they refused light when they refused an engineer to make a report. It may be good politics to block civic business and to hold a company at a standstill.

Referring to the lock company. Supposing it does locate in the city, or that the city has agoodopportunity to get it, and supposing the Purity Ware locates here,andsupposing that another big factory the manufacturers' committee has in view locates here, where is the power coming from to turn the wheels? There is none available. The city has not enough power to run one 16-candle power lamp, and will not have if the council turns down Burleigh Falls.

Burleigh Falls is the hope of Peterborough, some of the aldermen to the contrary. The 3000 horse power or more to be developed there will last the city for severalyears, but will by no means make Peterborough a city of 50,000 people so that those who are looking forward to a greater Peterborough must also look for power to turn the wheels of industry and furnish light for the increased population. The opportunity is at hand to get a goodparcel of power. If itisnottaken those who have refused to send the proposition tothe people will have a brightmunicipal career to look back upon. Memory will remain green in the minds of the populace in regard to them.

Hunter was Committed for Trial for Murder

Lindsay, Aug. 14.—Have you anything to say in regard to the charge of murder of which you are accused?"

Joseph Hunter, the Bobcaygeon hotelkeeper, was asked this question at his preliminary hearing here this morning, and the reply of the accused man was clearly heard throughout the spacious room.

He stated that he had nothing whatever to say, and thereupon was ordered to be incarcerated to await his trial at the coming fall assizes in September.

HUNTER WAS PALE.

Hunter appeared in the court room a little paler than usual, but calm and collected. He had nothing to say, but sat attentively listening to the evidence of the various witnesses. The evidence was much the same as was taken at the inquest.

Hunter speaks in a high-pitched voice and through a close-lipped mouth. At the preliminary hearing this morning he sat sullen, with barely a word to say, except an occasional whisper to his lawyer, E. V. O'Connor.

KEPT OUT THE CROWD.

The large crowd was refused entrance to the judge's chambers where the hearing was going on.

Many conflicting stories are abroad as to what the result of the final trial will be.

WINS CHILD BACK FROM COUNT

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 12.—After months of ceaseless efforts and the bringing of pressure to bear in the most exalted quarters in Vienna and St. Petersburg, the Countess Gizycki formerly Miss Eleanor Patterson of Chicago, has finally succeeded in gaining possession of her little daughter, who was taken from her and concealed by her husband, Count Gizycki, in May, 1908.

When all other efforts seemed to be in vain an appeal was made to the Emperor Nicholas II., as Count Cizycki is a Russian subject. The czar, on learning all the circumstances,ordered the count to return the child. In addition it is rumored that the family of the countess paid to the Russian count a sum of money amounting to several hundred thousand francs.

Mrs. Rabert W. Patterson, the countess' mother, was in Vienna some days last week arranging the final settlement of the affair. It is asserted, now that the question of the custody of the child has been determined, the countess will renew her efforts to obtain a divorce. Further details cannot be obtained at present owing to the absence from the city of the lawyers representing the two parties.

SMALL DRUMMER.

Nine-Year-Old Boy is Enterprising Traveller.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Harold Banks of this city is the youngest travelling man in the world, and he looks it. He pleads guilty to 9 years of age, and declares that this is his third season on the road.

In order to subscribe his name on the hotel register Harold has to stand on his tiptoes, but when it comes to doing business he can give points to some of the best veterans. He is selling a window cleaning compound and deals with the retail trade

While the young man from Chicago is educated in the ways of the world he has not acquired any of its vices. Discussing this point, he said: "I do not drink, smoke, chew, or carouse. I enjoy a game of baseball but I never allow it to interfere with my business."

HURST GIVES BOUNCER.

New York, Aug. 13.—A Washington special to the World says that Ban Johnson, president of the American League, announced last night that he had dropped Tim Hurst, the [illegible] umpire and referee, from his [illegible] list. Hurst's [illegible] as one of the most [illegible] football referees, has been signed, and will take up his duties immediately. Thompson will step the contract today, which will call for the neat sum of $500 per month.

Hurst's recent escapade in Philadelphia, when it is charged that he spat in the face of Eddie Collins of the Athletics, and for which he was indefinitely suspended, decided President Johnson that a change on his staff was absolutely necessary, and he notified the offending umpire yesterday that he had been dropped from the staff.

Mike Thompson, who takes Hurst place, is well known all over the country. He was for years identified with athletics at Georgetown University, officiating at all football games between the big college elevens.

DETECTS PERJURY.

Washington Judge Finds New Way to Prevent False Testimony.

Washington, Aug. 13.—A local police judge has mounted a searchlight upon his desk to detect perjury Long experience upon the bench has taught him that from the class of prisoners brought before him it is difficult to obtain trustworthy testimony. Searching for a cure for this evil, he began to experiment with light.

An electric light, with a strong reflector, was brought into use, and as the police prisoners are brought to the witness stand he turns on the impromtu searchlight. Its strong rays enable the judge, sitting in the shadow, to follow every facial expression of the offenders, and it is found that perjury has been greatly reduced.

The judge who is a student of criminology, reads the faces of his visitors and, in a way, their thoughts, and upon the appearance of an effort to escape the consequences of the truth he promptly checks them.

RELICS OF 1812 WAR.

Skeleton Unearthed are Believed to Be of Wilkinson's Forces.

Cornwall, Aug. 15.—While excavating for a new residence at Fort Covington N.Y., a few miles from here the other day, workmen were astonished to unearth a lot of skeletons. It is believed that these were the bones of United States soldiers buried there in 1813 when the place was known as French Mills.

After his defeat at Cryaler's Farm, Nov. 11, 1813, General Wilkinson retreated down the River St. Lawrence and went into winter quarters at what is now Fort Covington. Many of his men were from the South and the cold Northern winter carried them off like flies by typhoid fever, smallpox and other maladies.

Brigadier General Covington, a Scotchman, who commanded for Wilkinson at the battle of Crysler's Farm, died shortly after and the post was called after him. Many of Wilkinson's batteaux sank in the Salmon River, near Fort Covington, were found in recent years.

WESTERN WHEAT PAST DANGER.

Favorable Reports of a Big Yield General—Labor is Scarce.

Winnipeg, Aug. 15.—Harvesting will be general in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta within a week. From all sides come cheering reports of crops. Conditions continue favorable for maturing and farmers are actively preparing for their garnering operations.

They are in the markft looking for help, and employment agents are finding it difficult to supply the demeanad. Harvesting will depleta the forces on railway construction work, because the better wages paid while crops are being gathered will tempt hundreds of men from the grade to the fields.

In the course of a few days harvesters from the East will be making their appearances and will relieve the present labor situation.

In the principal grain growing districts farmers say that if a frost should now occur very little injury would be done, as the grain is pretty well matured. Washington forecasts still state that there will be no frost until the first week in September.

Few Facts Relating to the Desertion of Husband by His Wife

In one of the evening papers a few nights ago appeared anarticleto the effect that a woman had forsaken her husband who was a paralytic. Only one side of the case was given, and it was made to look very black for the wife. Whether she did right or wrong in deserting her helpless husband is a matterof opinion, but The Times has been informed by a party who has known the family for years, of some of the facts of the case which certainly should make the public think before condemning the poor woman.

It appears that this man has been helpless for the past three years, that he was in the hospital or an institution in thiscity for a time and where the authorities were willing to keep him but he refused and was taken home. For several years the wife kept a butcher shop and did her utmost to find enough money to keep her family, her husband and herself. She did so with some success but trouble overtook her. She was unable to collect moneys that were owing. She lost other money through no fault of hers, and it was most difficult to make ends meet. Finally she lost the shop and she was forced to go outtowork. This she did and worked faithfully. She was assisted by her sister anbetween the two they kept thingsgoing but that was all. That isindeed a very hard life for awomanand a mother to look forward to and the horizon did not show even a faint glimmer of a silver lining. Still her helpless husband refused to return to the institution where he would be cared for, and would not be a needless burden to his poor wife and family.

Thewife, broken hearted and discouraged, took what seemed to her to be the no doubt, the only course open to her, andleftthe home taking her belongings with her. Where she has gone or what she isdoing this journal does not know. Whether she was right or wrong is left to the public to figure out. But, on behalf of womankind, men should give this unfortunate woman every benefit and anyany doubt that exists A womans lot is hard enough in this world and they are very often imposedupon by their own relations as well as outsiders.

TORONTO VISITORS.

Messrs. John Mc Guire, Toronto; George McGuire, Buffalo; and D. Lorsch of Toronto, a business partner of Mr. E. R. Gamey, M.P.P., were in the city for theweek and registered at the Oriental. On Saturday they were guests of Ald. Hicks, manager of the Otonabee Navigation Company, and they enjoyed their first trip on the Kawartha Lakes, going from Chemong to Burleigh Falls, and back to Buckhorn, returning to the city on Sunday by auto. The visitors were delighted, enjoying the outing very much and will be back here again. They leave forToronto this morning.

LIFE PRISONERS

In Edmonton Jail Went Insane — Sent to Kingston "Pen."

Edmonton, Aug. 14.—Today two convicts of Edmonton Penitentiary, serving life imprisonment for murder will be transferred to King ston Penitentiary, where they will be placed to the ward for the criminal insane. The men are Samuel Prior, Wolseley Sask., and Amadee Petreault, Battleford. Prior was sentenced March 26, 1908, to a life term for killing little girl whom he hit on the head with a stick and afterwards beat to death. Petreault was sentenced on June 17, 1909, for murdering a comrade into whom he plunged a knife.

A Special Ross Rifle That Canadians Used

Ottawa, Aug. 14.—The Ross Rifle that was used by the Bisley team in England, was a special match match rifle with a barrel about 31 inches in length, and considerably heavier than the ordinary Lee-Enfield rifle. This match rifle is not the same as the Rossrifle "mark II" which has, to the number of about 12,000, been served out to rifle clubs and cadet corps in Canada that have asked for it.

This "mark II" Ross rifle is light short in the barrel, and will not stand the wear and tear of rapid target practice as much as the Lee-Enfield, the weapon with which the soldiers in Canada and Great Britain are armed.

In some quarters it is thought that the great shout raised over the fact that the Ross rifle did good service at Bisley may lead the public into supposing that the Ross rifle match rifle is the same as "mark II." It certainly is not, although one militiaman, when asked whether he would be content to have the Ross match rifle in place of the Lee-Enfield, replied that he would be perfectly satisfied, although the rifle was heavier than the Lee-Enfield, yet what he feared was that an effort would be made, on the grounds of all acclaimgiven grounds of all acclaim given to the Ross rifle, to get the Ross Rifle "mark II" substituted for the Lee-Enfield in Canada.

This would be agreat mistake, because the Ross rifle "mark II" is in no respect comparable to the present weapon.

John Kemp's House and Barn Destroyed by Fire

Mr. John Kemp's house and barn with all the contents are atotal loss as the result od a fire which broke out in the houseabout 9.30 o'clock on Saturday evening. The house was a frame, one-storey one, situated on the bank of the Otonabee river near the Auburn mills. Mr. Kemp was down street at the time, and Mrs. Kemp is in Toronto. The children were at home alone. The cause of the fire is unknown, but the result was the destruction of thehome and all belongings. These were, however covered by insurance.

An alarm was sent in frombox 59 which is just at theAuburnmills. The fire department made a quick run, and were at the scene of the blaze in lots of time to have saved most of the property had they possessed a chemical engine or had water been available the loss would not have been nearly so heavy. The department used a couple of the small chemicals on the barn but as fast as the blaze was extinguished it broke out fresh, so there was nothing to do but let it burn.

When the alarm wassoundedatreport was rapidly circulated that the Auburn mills were on fire and an immense crowd hurried tothespot. The street cars were packed and soon the vicinity of the fire was mass of curious spectators.

Thisis the second fire at Auburn that could not be fought onaccount ofno water and for the lack of a chemical engine.

FLEE FROM SUMMER RESORT.

Chicagoans Scatter in Flight When Woman Excursionist is Stricken.

St. Joseph, Mich., Aug. 15.— A mother, accompanied by her 2-year-old child, excursionists from Chicago yesterday afternoon, exposed a whole boatload of people to smallpox while en route to this city.

Upon arriving here parent and child went to John Lord's resort, five miles north of Berrien Springs, where the mother was taken ill. A physician pronounced her illness due to smallpox.

A hundred resorters at the place fought their whypast the authorities ten when the quarantine was established and officers are now guarding the resort to prevent the escape of others. The name of the patient has not been learned.

Awful Crime of a New York Steam Fitter

New York, Aug. 15.—Frank J. Cavanaugh, a steamfitter of 99 East Eighty-first street, shot his wife, Louise Cavanaugh, 32 years old, in the Oriental restaurant at 3 Peel st. Chinatown, this afternoon and then fired two bullets into his head. They are both in Hudson Street Hospital. Mrs. Cavanaugh probably will recover, but her husband will die the doctors say.

The shooting occurred after a quarrel between the couple in the restaurant. Mrs. Cavanaugh said the trouble was caused by her husband's dissolute habits.

Denver, Col., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker is virtually agreed upon as the candidate of thewomen of Colorado, as their candidate for Congress for two years hence.

A stubborn effort will be made by the women of this statein 1911 to elect one of their sex to the national House of Representatives.

Such was the announcement made to the visiting delegates from the International Council of Women by one who spoke for the Women's Associations in the state.

"Of course it is difficult to tell whether we will be successful in our efforts or not," said Mrs. Harriet, former member of the state legislature, "but we are looking forward to leading a woman in the halls of Congress, and we certainly are goingto make a determined fight."

Judge McMillan, who talked suffrage to the House of Lords for four hours, said they stopped only because they ordered her to, brought out the excitement. She put this question to the Denver women who were entertaining her—

"What are you women going to send a woman to Congress?"

The reply was quick and decisive:—"In two years."

All are agreed that Mrs. Decker is the candidate.

GIRL'S SLAYER TO PRISON.

Youth of 18 Slashed Her to Death With Knife.

Welch, W. Va., Aug. 16.—The jury in the case of John Thomas, 18-years-old, charged with having attacked and murdered Lulu Stafford, 10-years-old, tonight returned a verdict of guilty and recommended life imprisonment.

Thomas after having attacked the girl, slashed her to death with a knife and then hid her body in a cluster of bushes in the courthouse yard.

PROFANITY OF CANADIANS.

St. John Star Says Bad Language Leads to Obscenity.

In the course of an editorial article the St. John Star the other day, on the evil of profanity, says it has become a blight on our language. Moreover, profanity—by which is meant not merely the use of strongly expressive words—leads to obscenity, and the two forms in combination are as degrading to those who employ them as disgusting to those who are forced to be listeners. Why is it that when a man is drunk his flow of language is picturesquely profane, his remarks clothed in shocking vileness? Surely the liquor releasing intellectual control, permits the utterance of what is rooted in the brain. And certainly there would be less disgusting talk on the part of drunkards if there were less silent profanity in sober moments. It is to be feared that violence of expression rather than refinement of language is the dominant characteristic of the conversationalist of today.

Are we to adopt, in the ordinary development of language, words and expressions which to our fathers were rightly regarded as vulgar and indecent? Certainly the evidences point that way, but the plan is by no means praiseworthy.

CRAZED BY IMMIGRATION LAW.

Woman Loses Mind When Bailed By Rules and Will Be Deported.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Driven insane by the complexities of immigration requirements, Mrs. Ann Kulja, left here tonight in charge of a government inspector for New York whence she will be deported to Austria. Two months ago the woman and her 15-year-old daughter were passed at New York and permitted to buy tickets for Ladysmith, B. C. At Prescott, Ont., they were turned back by Canadian officers on the ground that they had not sufficient funds. Unable to make herself understood, the woman lost her reason.

Children's Chest Troubles

Nurse Carrington Says Her Long Experience Proves the Safest Remedy is to RUB ON NERVILINE!

Every mother knows how difficult it is to get a young child to take a cough mixture. Seldom will one help unless given in large doses, and the result is to completely upset the sick child.

Speaking of the promptest cure for chest troubles and children's Nurse Carrington says: "In all my experience in nursing I haven't seen any preparation so dependable as Nerviline. It is the ideal liniment. Every drop you rub on is absorbed quickly, sinks through the pores to the congested muscles, eases, relieves and cures quickly. Especially for chest colds, pain in the side, stiff neck, earache, toothache, I have found Nerviline invaluable. In treating the minor ills of children Nerviline has no equal. I think Nerviline should be in every home."

A million bottles of Nerviline used every year—this is itself a burden of story every year—this is itself a burden of proof that it is the ideal liniment for the home. Refuse anything your dealer may offer instead of Nerviline. Large bottles, 25c. for sale for $1.00. Sold everywhere and by The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 27

BETTER THAN KILLING THEM.

If hearers of Mrs. Besant and readers of what she says will avoid being prejudiced against her by her overdogmatic assertions about what goes on in the other world they may get some useful suggestions about what might be done to better conditions on this side of the dividing line. For example, what she says about murderers. Mrs. Besant doesn't believe in beheading or otherwise killing murderers—and for a novel reason. She says they are more harmful after being "cut off" than before. She was illustrating what an easy thing dying really is, as she sees it, and went on to tell what a dreadful time drink-lovers have in the other world where there is no drink so she understands. Then she said:

"The murderer isn't killed when you strike off his head or hang or electrocute him. You only kill his physical body and you thereby set him free to spread his evil broadcast over the community. Have you ever noticed how crimes repeat themselves? This is encouraged somewhat by the printing in newspapers of the present method of dealing with the murderer also has its effects. He goes forth into the next world a veritable devil who incites to temptation." She advocated locking the murderer up where he could do no harm and then working on him to improve his nature, so that when death comes he will take better ideas into the next world with him.

There is a suggestion of country experience in this. Mrs. Besant probably knows, as most farmers do, of certain kinds of weeds that are thankful for being plowed up and taken by cultivator, to see the world. They just root fresh when they are broken and separated and turned under in new places. The notion that a murderer relieved of his body is a transplant of virulent influence thereafter is worth considering. It has been said many times that the poorest use of a man is to kill him and this may be the reason. A less profound reason has been widely believed—that death penalties breed morbid ideas leading to crime in others and do not really prevent crime because of the universal gamble on the enforcement of the law. Mrs. Besant, aware of what is doing in the other world, if she knows herself, adds to this a suggestion worth considering. She has certainly strengthened the argument in favor of making something better than a quicklime-eaten corpse of a breaver of the Sixth Commandment.

GOLDWIN SMITH'S ERROR.

Goldwin Smith is constantly condemning Britain for seeking to maintain the mastery of the sea. To use his exact words on the last occasion of his criticism, he said: "The pretension of Great Britain to the empire of the seas is a standing challenge to the rest of the world."

To which the Orange Sentinel replies, "We cannot understand the viewpoint of our revered friend of The Grange. The industries of Britain are absolutely dependent on her seaborne trade. The very food on which her people subsist comes across the waters. The existence as a nation depends upon the maintenance of naval supremacy. Her weakness afloat would be an unduly severe test of the generosity of her rivals, and the greatest provocation to bloodshed. As Britains safety demands that she shall not rashly engage in a struggle that might put her only means of defence to the test, other nations have nothing to fear from her might, the war dogs could do little more than bark at her doors. On the other hand, any state that seeks to wrest from Britain that supremacy afloat which is her only safeguard, must be considered to have designs upon her integrity. No other ambition would explain another nation incurring such vast expenditures to develop a navy. It is idle to suggest that it is because Britain has scattered possessions that she seeks "dominion over the common highway of the nations." It must be patent to anyone who is unprejudiced that the sea dominton is a matter of self-preservation with Britain, as well as being necessary to the continuance of peace."

THE DOG NUISANCE.

The Hamilton authorities are prosecuting a vigorous campaign against the dog nuisance. Not content with the employment of dog catchers, owners are summoned to the police court and fined for permitting their dogs to run at large. The police applied for no less than ten summonses. It is proper that the owners of dogs should be proceeded against if they fail to keep their dogs at home. It is one of the restrictions of the license which they obtain that their dogs are not to be allowed to run at large and if they violate the conditions of their license they should be prosecuted. Public opinion will sustain the most vigorous measures to abolish this nuisance. It is more than a nuisance. It is a menace to the live of pedestrians—old and young—and one human life is worth more than all the dogs in the country. A despatch from Ottawa says; "The prevalence of rabies among dogs in many districts of Ontario is causing the veterinary branch of the agricultural department considerable concern. Within the past eighteen months approximately 100 cases have been reported. In each of them the dog was promptly killed, but the disease is still prevalent, as several of the infected canines have got away. Where brain analysis has disclosed the germ, parties who have been bitten have been removed to the Pasteur Institute for treatment. The department is urging drastic methods to stamp out cases where there is the least suspicion."

One of the strangest things in connection with this matter is the amazing inference of too many owners of dogs as to whether their canines attack and bite at passers-by. Almost without exception their dogs are the gentlest animals about and never would annoy or bite anybody. They become angry if informed that their beasts have bitten somebody. Dog owners must be taught that if permitted to keep dogs within the city it must be on their own property, or under control when on the street, and the authorities should not relax any of their efforts to rid the city of this intolerable nuisance.

TURKEY AND GREECE.

The sharper note from Turkey to Greece over the Cretan business looks mightily as if Turkey was not averse to war. There may be something in the domestic situation in Turkey which would be a good asset or it may be that they desire to wipe from the memory of their people the impression created by the loss of Bosnia and Herzegovina at the very opening of their regime. A successful war against Greece would probably be followed by levying an indemnity upon that country or carving off a slice of territory; and either would be a good card to play in Constantinople.

Both German and English correspondents in Constantinople report that war talk is in the ascendent. The first thought of all observers will be to look for the inspiring hand of an outside power. Who has any interest in stirring up the pot again? If Turkey fights Greece, Bulgaria ought to be safely regarded as unconcerned, for the great Bulgarian complaint all along has been that Turkey was secretly aiding Greek bands to drive the Bulgarian bands out of Macedonia. This secret alliance—if it ever existed — would hardly survive a war between the two governments; and Bulgaria might expect to find itself with a free hand in the disputed province after its conclusion. On the other hand, Bulgaria might realize that any activity in Macedonia must be regarded as anti-Turkish, especially after the removal of the Greek check on its course; and so be tempted to invade Macedonia with its admirable army while the Turks were engaged in crossing the Greek frontier.

Austrian ambitions regarding Salonika are believed never to sleep, and it is possible that Austria might make of the rescue of Greece an excuse for marching south. This would be a decidedly novel role for Austria but then her alliance with Bulgaria was equally novel. Conditions change with kaleidoscopic rapidity in the Balkan peninsula. Moreover, if Austria marched to the aid of Greece, would have no peg to hang a helmet on. Things would be topsy-turvy, indeed, if Russia were to fight with the Turks against the Greeks. Nor is Russia any readier to fight than she was on the day when the Kaiser's ultimatum brought her to time in the Servian affair. Thus a disturbance on the Greek frontier might give Austria just the opportunity she desires to reach the Aegan while Russia is paralysed and the "triple entente" in a poor position to make a fight in the East.

And what about Crete—the presumptive cause of all the trouble? It would probably sit watching the fray well knowing that it would fall a prize to the victor.

THE STEALTHY TIGER.

When He Moves Quietly Death Does Not Seem More Silent.

I have seen a tiger, sitting up a hundred yards from me in the sunlight washing its face like a cat, move a couple of steps into the shade and fade away like the Cheshire cat in "Alice in Wonderland." But what is more extraordinary is that he can "move without some dry leaf or stalk crackling to betray" him. Often in a beat in the middle of the hot season the inexperienced sportsman's heart is in his mouth as he hears the crushing of a dead leaf, the slow, stealthy tread of what seems some heavy animal, but it is only "moa," the peacock, the first to move ahead of the beaters. Then after a period of strained watching, when the eye can and does detect the move of the tiniest bird, the quiver of a leaf, suddenly without a sound the great beast stands before you. He does not always care to move quietly, but when he does death is not more silent.

The question of how a white or otherwise abnormally marked tiger can take its prey is simplified by the fact that, as a general rule, the tiger kills at night or at dawn or dusk and that it is only the cattle killing tiger that takes his lordly toll of the village cattle by day. Again that wonderful voice, the most mournful sound in captivity, "which literally hushes the jungle and fills the twilight with horror," is a powerful aid to him in his hunting. Often as I have heard it the memory of one occasion is as vivid as the moment when it held me spellbound. I was stalking sambhur in the evening in a glade in the forest when suddenly, from not fifty yards above me, rang out a long, low, penetrating moan, which seemed to fill the jungle with a terrifying thrill and for a moment made the heart stand still. The native shikari, who, in spite of Mowgli's contempt, may know something of jungle ways, believes that the deer, hearing the tiger's voice and unable from the reverberating nature of the sound to locate the position of their enemy, stand or lie still and so give him the chance of stalking his prey. There is probably some truth in this, for unless you are following the tiger and have seen him it is almost impossible from the sound alone to tell with any certainty where he is.—Algernon Durand in London Times.

Harry Lauder's Bluff.

A pretty piece of "bluff" is attributed to Harry Lauder, the Scottish variety entertainer. During his first play in New York he was accused of stinginess. He heard that one journalist had severely commented on the manner in which he drew the purse strings. Not long afterward this man asked him for an interview. Lauder gave him an address and told him to come at 10 o'clock the following night. In the meantime the comedian rented a wretched room in the slum quarter of the city. When the caller came he was ushered into this garret. There sat Lauder, blue with cold, by the light of a single candle. "Arre ye goin' to put down what I say?" Lauder asked. The reporter assured him with pride that he never made notes during an interview. "My memory is excellent," he boasted. "Weel, then," said Lauder, "we'll save the light!" And he blew out the candle.

Would Have Done the Same.

Rudyard Kipling undoubtedly got his wit from his maternal grandfather, Rev. George B. Macdonald, a Wesleyan clergyman.

It is related of this gentleman that, in the days when he was courting the lady whom he afterwards married, the fatehr-in-law-to-be—an aged Methodist with extremely strict notions in regard to the proprieties—was injudicious enough on one occasion to enter the parlor without giving any warning of his approach. The consequence was that he found the sweethearts occupying a single chair.

Deeply shocked by the spectacle, the old man solemnly said:

"Mr. Macdonald, when I was courting Mrs. Brown, she sat on one side of the room and I on the other."

Macdonald's reply was:

"That's what I should have done if I had been courting Mrs. Brown."

The Shirtless Poet.

Mr. Arthur Coleridge, speaking at the summer festival of the College for Working Women, Fitzroy street, London, at which the Bishop of London presided, related that the poet Coleridge once journeyed from Highgate to Holborn to visit a nephew, Sir Wm. H. Coleridge. It was very cold weather, and the poet had on a double-breasted waistcoat which met just below his neck. It was discovered that he had got no shirt. His nephew remonstrated with him, to which the poet replied: "I'm very sorry, William, very sorry; but I've forgotten my shirt." Upon this Sir William kindly lent his uncle a shirt, "and," said the speaker, "I regret to say that very necessary garment was never returned to its original owner."

Scotch Craft.

A drunken man was once lodged in the cell of a Scotch country police station, when he made a tremendous noise by kicking the cell door with his heavy hobnailed boots.

The constable who had charge of the police station, going to the cell door, opened it a little and said:

"Man, ye micht pit off yer buits, and I'll gie them a bit rub, so that ye'll be respectable like when ye come up afore the bailie the morn."

The prisoner, flattered at the request, at once complied and saw his mistake only when the constable shut the door upon him, saying coolly:

"Ye can kick awa' noo, my man, as lang as ye like."

Took Precautions.

"You ran into this man at thirty miles an hour and knocked him forty feet," said the court.

"That or a little better, I suppose," answered the chauffeur.

"Why didn't you slow down?"

"More precaution, your honor. Once I shut off speed and hit a man so gently that he was able to climb into the machine and give me a license."

Woman's World

A GIFTED NOVELIST.

Home and Personality of the Author of "Red Horse Hill."

Sidney McCall (Mary McNeil Fenollosa), the author of "Red Horse Hill," etc., when scarcely more than a girl was living in another part of Japan when the late Lafcadio Hearn began his studies of that country. Independently she, too, was absorbing the mystic influences of beauty, and in a different form, that of verse, was shaping her impressions into concrete structure. A modest little volume of poems called "Out of the Nest" is thought by many of her friends to contain some of her finest work. Lafcadio Hearn, who later became one of her valued friends, was delighted with these poems. In her home in Tokyo, with its garden where grew pansies, magnolias and "moon flowers," Mrs. Fenollosa wrote her first novel, "Truth Dexter," a book which had a great success. "The Breath of the Gods" was the outcome of her impressions of the situation in Japan and Russia just before the crisis, but it was written after her return to America in the "big, low workroom of her southern home in Alabama, which looks out upon a garden where the blossoming cherry mingles its petals with those of the rose and the jasmine." Kobinata, or little Sunshine hill, so called after the Japanese home, contains much that is best in beauty both of the east and west. Here also was written Mrs. Fenollosa's latest book, "Red Horse Hill."

Mrs. Fenollosa comes of an artistic family. Both her parents were writers. Her father, William Stoddard McNeil, was a poet of ability and a lover and keen student of nature. Mrs. Fenollosa's home life in Mobile has always been one of the units in a very close knit, large, devoted family group. "Truth Dexter" was in part an outcome of that homesickness which, while absent in Japan, she felt for the dearly loved home circle.

To her husband, the late Professor Ernest F. Fenollosa, well known in art circles as an authority on oriental art, Mrs. Fenollosa feels that she is deeply indebted for criticism, suggestion and constant encouragement, although in the matter of plot and actual writing she always works entirely alone. Their life together, both in Japan and in this country, was characterized by independent but absolutely congenial work and by harmony of interests and tastes.

In her latest book, "Red Horse Hill," Sidney McCall, as she prefers to sign herself, has furnished another American setting, that of a southern mill town. The conflict of human interests, a deep love motive that runs through four related lives among the characters of this story and the power for good or evil held in the hands of the controller of southern mills all bear a vital part in the drama.

Beauty in Dandelions and Milk.

If you want to be beautiful drink lots of dandelion tea and bathe in scented milk. Any one who consents to drink dandelion tea is entitled to immortal beauty as a small reward. Still the stuff may be made palatable by putting things in it. For instance, a dash of brandy may be added, but the tea is better for the skin without that alcoholic addition. Several cups a day must be taken for the first two months of summer and then one cup a day throughout the year. Scented milk for the skin is recommended by those who study beauty scientifically. The milk must be boiled and then a few drops of violet water added. The fluid must be rubbed into face, neck and arms thoroughly and permitted to dry. Then the rubbing must be renewed. To steam the face with hot milk makes it soft and white as an infant's.

For the Tea Table.

A favorite dainty for the tea table is salted wafers or round, thin water crackers covered with beaten white of egg through which have been mixed finely chopped English walnuts. The crackers are baked in a hot oven and served instead of small cakes.

"Sausages Grown Here."

One of the natural curiosities of South Msabonaland is a "German-sausage-tree." It bears deep-crimson flowers, 3 inches long, in blazing bunches of twelve; but when the tree fruits into fat, substantial, sausage-like pods, there remain no leaves, and it looks like a sausage larder indeed.

These beans are 20 inches long, and 12 inches in girth, and are beloved of the native tribe of Shangaans and baboons. But the tribe of the Karanga are a very superior people, and would never deign to eat them. There can be no reason for this, as, at least, no one can accuse these "sausages" of being connected in any way with dogs or cats!

HOW TO WIN.

Determination and Unity of Purpose Will Work Wonders.

Once you have chosen your occupation or profession hold fast thereto. Let nothing allure you from the main traveled road. Having chosen, hold like steel. Make everything feed into the main current of your life. Even modest talents, organized and unified, have conquered great distinction and worldwide success. History is full of illustrations of the unifying power of a great purpose. Witness the poor child Hastings looking at a distant manor house that once had belonged to his father. The determination to win back that estate before he died lent power and momentum and produced Lord Hastings. Witness the influence of purpose upon that little Scotch boy, out upon a holiday on the banks of the Clyde, with three precious coppers as his entire possession. He determined to build a house on the hilltop overlooking the river and forty years later moved into the castle, from which he looked down upon twenty ocean steamers he had built. Witness the purpose of William the Silent, filling all the days and nights for the hero struggling to deliver brave little Holland from Spain. Witness Milton's vow to write a poem that the world would not willingly let die and who therefore lived an epic life. Witness Paul's resolution to do one thing and one thing alone and who, with that unit purpose, achieved democracy for all subsequent peoples and centuries. Aimlessness will make your life like a sand heap.—Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis.

FULL OF HUMAN INTEREST.

Landscapes of the Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century.

The Dutch painters of the seventeenth century were as little concerned with poetic feeling as with idealism. They used their eyes and painted what they saw, but neither their imaginations nor their feelings were touched. While most modern painters interpret how the scene has affected themselves, the Dutch looked at it as something entirely outside themselves.

Otherwise the Dutch landscapes present us pictures of a pleasant workaday world or of the quiet evenings that follow after the labors of the day—never a hint of disturbance, though war and rumors of war were constant; instead, the perpetual suggestion of prosperous peace and thrifty comfort, for they abound with the evidences of busy humanity. Not only is nature brought into touch with human life by the little figures, so charmingly lifelike, which animate the scene, but everywhere are the results of man's handiwork seen in little things as well as big—in the trimly kept fruit trees of a laborer's garden plot no less than in the handsome facade of a rich burgher's town house. There is no country in the world where the influence of man is so minutely imprinted upon every foot of ground, and as these artists were eager to represent the things they saw no landscapes are so full of human interest as theirs.—Charles H. Collin in St. Nicholas.

Her Home.

Some years ago, when a part of the Japanese imperial palace was burned at Tokyo, the empress was forced to flee to one of the old daimio houses near by. It was not at all comfortable, and, as the story goes, her majesty, appreciating that her subjects would be much concerned at her living in such a mean place, sat down and wrote them a little poem in which she denied that she had changed her residence. The poem, which was in the best Japanese language, stated that her majesty's home had always been in the hearts of the people and that neither the flames nor the cold could ever drive her from that dear abode.

The Dead Larks.

In Baluchistan even the wolves go mad. In his book, "The Frontiers of Baluchistan," G. P. Tate writes: "The shepherds give a strange reason for the epidemic of rabies. According to them, it was caused by the wild beasts eating dead larks. In some years, they said, the larks develop extraordinary vitality and pour forth such a flood of songs as they rise on the wing that they become suffocated and fall to the ground dead. A wild animal which eats one of these dead birds invariably develops rabies. This is a widespread superstition and seems not unfamiliar to the natives of India who were with me."

A Butchers' Common.

William, earl of Warren, in the time of King John, while standing upon the castle walls saw two bulls fighting in the castle meadow till all the butcher dogs pursued one of the maddened bulls quite through the town. The sight pleased the earl so much that he gave the castle meadows, where the duel of the bulls began, for a common to the butchers of the town, after the first grass was mowed, on condition that they should find a mad bull the day six weeks before Christmas day for the continuance of that sport forever.—London Standard.

Fine Crops.

"Do you raise anything worth while in your garden?" said the visitor from the city.

"I should say so," answered Mr. Cumrox. "It's the best place for fishing worms in the entire village."

Plain Talk.

"I think she's double faced."

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, these "inside" nerves fail. Then the Stomach, Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas bloating, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

FAMOUS WAX ARTIST

Mme. Tussaud Had an Exciting and Dramatic Career.

DURING THE FRENCH REVOLUTION.

During That Era of Bloodshed She Modeled Some of the Heads That Fell by the Guillotine and Was For a Time In Prison Herself as a Suspect.

This is the story of Mme. Tussaud, who was born in Berne in 1760 and died in London in 1850, and who, during the stormy time of the French revolution, modeled in wax some of the heads that fell by the guillotine.

Marie Grosholtz was the daughter of an aid-de-camp of General Wurmser in the Seven Years' war. She was born after the death of her father.

Her mother was the sister of Dr. John Christopher Curtius of Berne. This Dr. Curtius had made many anatomical and other models in wax and had attracted the attention of the Prince de Conti. This nobleman urged Curtius to come to Paris and establish himself as a modeler in wax.

The Curtius studio became the rendezvous of the fashionable world, and in connection with this he had a museum of curiosities. Among his patrons were Voltaire, Jean Jacques, Rousseau, Mesmer, Mirabeau, Diderot, Benjamin Franklin, Paul Jones and many other notable persons.

In his visits to his sister at Berne Dr. Curtius had taught his niece, Marie, many of the secrets of modeling in wax. She showed such ability in this that her uncle urged her mother to make a home with him in Paris and to allow him to adopt Marie as his daughter.

Marie began earnest study with Dr Curtius, and she was so skillful in the modeling of wax flowers that this art became a craze. Even the royal personages in the palace took it up, and Marie spent some time giving lessons to Mme. Elizabeth, the young sister of Louis XVI.

When the revolution broke out Dr. Curtius took the side of the people and sent for Marie to come from the palace. It was rather singular that two of his wax models should have played a foremost part in the opening scenes of that awful period. In his collection of models was a bust of the minister, Necker, father of Mme. de Staël, and one of Philippe, duke of Orleans. Two days before the storming of the Bastille a mob took these two busts from his museum in the Palais Royal, draped them in black crape to show their sympathy and started to parade the streets with these.

As the procession filed across the Place Vendome a troop of dragoons and one of the regiments charged. A sword stroke cut the bust of Necker in halves, and the man who was carrying it was hit by a musket ball in the leg and received the thrust of a sword in his breast.

The bust of the Duke of Orleans escaped injury, but in the fight to defend it several persons were killed. The soldiers made desperate efforts to demolish it.

At the taking of the Bastille Dr. Curtius was active and for his services to France was rewarded by the national assembly. A badge of honor was presented to him, and this was inscribed with the famous date and a memorial of his bravery and patriotism. His house was a favorite place of meeting with the leaders of the revolution, so Marie had an opportunity to see them all

There was only one time when Marie was in any danger during this desperate period. She was "suspected" and sent to prison. Here at the same time was Mme. de Beauharnais, who had barely escaped the guillotine and who was later the Josephine of Napoleon Bonaparte. Her uncle was able to get Marie's release from prison, and she came out in time to see the downfall of Robespierre, Danton and Desmoulins.

In the days of their power she had been called to model the heads of many who fell by the guillotine. She was obliged to take them just after the fall of the fatal knife. She did this awful work with the heads of poor Marie Antoinette and of the Princess Lamballe, the queen's friend. When the leaders suffered by the guillotine in their turn she modeled their heads.

After the revolution her uncle died, and in 1795 she married M. Tussaud. She could not overcome the shock of her experiences during the revolution, and she persuaded her husband to take her and the valuable collections of wax models left her by Dr. Curtius over to England.

They established this collection in the Strand. The collection was taken all about the country, and in 1883 it was brought back to London and made a permanent exhibition. Her sons conducted the business, and she took an active share in this till she was eighty years of age.

Naming Their Children.

It was a musical man who gave his four daughters the following names: Do-re, Mi-fa, So-la, Ti-do. The first escaped with the nickname Dora, the second answered Miffy, the third owned up to Solly, while the youngest generally got Tiddy.

The case of the musical man is matched by that of the provincial printer who named his children from the type fonts he used—Ruby, Pearl Diamond. The first two are no uncommon names for girls, only Ruby happened to be a boy. He followed in his father's footsteps and afterward became a printer's manager in London.—London Chronicle.

FOR PRETTY FINGERS.

Consolation For Women With Homely Finger Tips.

Now that the gloveless time of year is pressing hard upon the season that renders covering for the hands imperative the maiden who has been neglecting her dainty digits is in despair.

Injudicious ways of trimming nails are partly responsible for badly shaped finger tips, writes a manicurist of experience. Nails serve as a brace for the flesh, and if the prop is unwisely cut away the skin will sag. Thus the effect of cutting the nails too far at the corners is easily understood, for the flesh that should be upheld has nothing to cling to, and a broad, flat tip is developed.

It is absolutely impossible to make a wide nail almond shape, and, this being the case, the sooner heroic measures are dropped in effort to make the change the better. It is this unwise attempt to make narrow a surface which is wide that is the beginning of the trouble. An inexperienced person imagines that by cutting away the nail at the side its aspect will be altered. This is true, but only for the worse, a fact to be remembered each time a file or pair of scissors is used.

Consolation for a woman with homely finger tips lies in the fact that much improvement is gained merely in shaping the tops, letting the sides alone. If narrowness is achieved it will be by making them oval on the edge. A pointed top merely makes the rest of the nail look broader by contrast, whereas one slightly rounded does not call attention to the wide surface. It is always a mistake to clip the nails with scissors unless the final finish is given with a file. Even then scissors should not be used, for their effect is to thicken the nail and take away the transparency.

Once the use of the file is learned it works quickly, and better lines are made with it. Yet, excellent as it is, there is one disadvantage—that with it one can go lower in the edges, pulling down the corners more than is likely to happen with the scissors. If any rule can be given about when to stop filing at the side it is as soon as there is the least sensation, although it may not be a positive pain. But the instant live flesh makes itself evident any pushing or parting must cease.

HOTEL CIRCULARS.

The Genius Who Originates This Misleading Literature.

Does anybody's appreciation flow out in proper measure toward that descriptive genius who writes the summer hotel circulars? He is given as his theme a bleak, clapboard structure, an architectural blot of most unfireproofed material, of stuffy rooms divided by walls so thin that the corridors partake of the nature of dormitories, of inadequate bathing accommodations and noisy parlors, the whole offered at an exorbitant rate. It is his business to so describe this trap for the holiday seeker that without declaring that the hotel has what it has not or is not what it is it shall appear to the reader of circulars an earthly paradise, beyond all others in the country around. Now, how does he proceed? He begins with the attractions which may have turned the eyes of the traveler thither, the everlasting hills or the illimitable ocean. Regarding these he has all literature to support him, and he draws freely from his support. He works himself into a fine quotational frenzy. He mentions sunsets, rainbows and cool breezes, all such things for any failure to produce which Providence and not the innkeeper may be held responsible. Then he mentions the legends of the surrounding country—there are plenty of legends that may just as well become local in one place or another, as, for example, the "Lovers' Leap." And when at last the moment comes in which he must approach the mention of those attractions for which your landlord is alone responsible—cuisine and cleanly comfort and prompt service—does his description now become compromising? Not at all. Not for nothing has he learned the uses of indefinite enthusiasm. He chooses those matters in one comprehensive phrase and declares them "simply grand."

Inappropriate Diplomas.

No matter how proudly the fair coeds of the June graduating class of 1908 gaze upon the sheepskin diplomas they received at that time, that sheepskin tells them that "he" instead of "she" got the honor. This year the registrar is gazing over such manuscript to avoid a recurrence.

The joke of giving a masculine diploma to a feminine graduate was played all unmeaningly upon these fair co-eds by the engraving company which did the work for the University of Minnesota. Upward of 200 of these papers were issued. So far as is known, only two women of the entire class noticed a mistake in the wording. When the 500 diplomas intended for the class in question arrived at the university last May it was found that the engraving company had failed to take into consideration the fact that 200 members of the class were women and sent diplomas intended for men only.

In the space left for the name of the graduate the names of the girls were entered in a correct manner, but the wording which followed it was carefully stated that "he" had been found qualified by the regents to receive the diploma and that for this reason the diploma was granted to "him."

Staterooms and Portholes.

An experienced traveler warns the uninitiated against paying from $6 to $20 extra for an outside stateroom on ocean liners. The inside rooms she has found to be perfectly comfortable and perfectly ventilated, and the portholes in the outside ones she considers a doubtful advantage. "They are kept locked," she says, "most of the time unless the weather is very pleasant, and even in calm weather they sometimes ship a deluge of salt water. Dirty water too, swept from a deck above by the deckhands, may pour into a porthole of a room below and the noise from the deck is an annoyance. Why then should one pay extra for a porthole?"

A DREAM STORY.

The Startling Vision That Saved the Life of Lady Vernon.

The following dream story is told in "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare. The story was told to Mr. Hare in Rome in 1870:

Lady Vernon dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, crossing the entrance hall, and she awoke with a great start. After awhile she composed herself to sleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, on the middle of the staircase, and she awoke with a great shock. She got up. She thought she could not be quite well, and she took a little sal volatile. At last she fell asleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, standing at her bedroom door, and she awoke in a great terror, and she jumped out of bed, and she said, "I'll have an end of this; I'll have an end of these foolish imaginations." And she rushed to the door, and she threw the door wide open. And there at the door stood the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other. And when he suddenly saw Lady Vernon in her white nightdress, with her hair streaming down her back, he was so dreadfully frightened that he dropped the candle on the floor and rushed off down the staircase and off to the stables, where there was a horse ready saddled and bridled, on which he meant to have ridden away when he had murdered Lady Vernon. And he rode away without having murdered her at all, and he was never heard of again.

THERE WAS NO ACCIDENT.

And the Message She Received Was Not a Practical Joke.

She was reclining in a low chair in the drawing room, thinking about her dear Willie, who had been legally her property for the space of three months, when a telegram arrived for her. Hurriedly tearing open the envelope, she scanned the contents, then fell back in a swoon. The message was from her brother in the city and read:

Will run over today. GEORGE.

Her maid at last restored her to consciousness. Her Willie run over! She could not grasp the full significance of it. One thing she would do—go to him at once. So she hastily attired herself and at length reached her brother's office, who, having sent the news, would be able to tell her all about it.

"How is he, and where have they taken him?"

Her brother stared at her stupidly.

"Oh, don't keep me in suspense! Tell me where he is."

"Where who is?"

"Why, Willie."

"At his office, I presume. I haven't seen him today."

"Then what does this mean? Isn't he run over? Is this one of your silly jokes?"

George took the telegram from his sister, read his own message, then exploded with laughter. It was a long time before he could convince her that this simple intimation that he would run over and pay her a visit was not a detestable and practical joke.

The Talker.

You'll note the man who talks too much is always working round. He never seems to hold the job which some one else has found for him because he's bound to keep his tongue upon the wag and spend his boss' precious time in self bouquets and brag. He stays until his story's told and then told once again, and by this time the boss' ear is overfull of pain, and he is told to take his grip, although the boss feels sad, because he's lost his other grip upon the job he had. And yet he never, never learns, but talks his jobs away, because the habit's grown on him that he must have his say. And so he talks until he dies, up to his waning breath; he's talked his chances all away and talked himself to death.

Confessions.

The woman begged the bachelor girl not to go yet awhile. She was so urgent that the girl finally sat down again. Then the two sat perfectly still and silent, looking at each other.

"I know what you are thinking," said the bachelor girl by and by.

"What?" asked the woman.

"That, now you've got me to stay, you wonder why it was you insisted so. You don't know what to do with me or to say to me, now I'm here to stay."

"How did you guess it?" the woman laughed.

"I've felt just that way myself," said the bachelor girl "many and many a time."

A Bad Hole to Get Into.

A gentleman was going round a strange golf course with a local caddie, and after playing part of the way he pointed to a rather high wall and inquired, "Is there a hole over there?"

"Yes, sir," replied the caddie solemnly; "there's the cemetery over there. Don't put yourself into a hole there if you can help it."—London Scraps.

His Transformation.

Little Harold, aged six, felt very proud when he donned his first pair of trousers. Taking his three-year-old brother behind the door, he was overheard to say, "Willie, Willie do you remember me?"—Delineator.

SAFE FROM SLANDER.

Georgia Legislature Passes Defamatory Gossip Bill.

Atlanta, Aug. 15.—Georgia will soon have a law upholding the names and reputations of its virtuous women, the bill introduced by Senator McCurry having passed both senate and house, with the certainty of the governor's signature. So wide-spread has been the interest in and approval of this measure that the author has received requests for copies from South Carolina and Alabama legislators, who intend introducing similar bills.

The measure makes it a misdemeanor to willfully and falsely utter or circulate defamatory statements about women, and grew out of a case in Hart County in which slander nearly broke up a marriage between members of two prominent families.

Shortly before the date set for the wedding the young man in question was warned that his bride-to-be was of questionable character. Upon hearing this the girl's father refused to permit the wedding until he had investigated the charges. These were found without foundation, and the circulators admitted they had lied. There being no Georgia law covering the case, none of the interested parties prosecuted the defamers.

Representative Alexander of Chatham, in supporting the bill in the house, cited another instance in which a well-known and reputable girl's school had been slandered without legal recourse. Representative Joe Hill Hall thought the old remedy of "stick and shotgun" should still be effective, but Mr. Alexander replied that the bill was designed to particularly protect women without male relatives.

Many prominent women have supported Senator McCurry's bill, Mrs. Mary L. McLandon, vice president of the W. C. T. U., being a notable example.

A bill to prevent negro social or fraternal organizations from using the names, insignia or ritual of established "societies or corporations, whether social, benevolent or charitable," was passed by the house today and awaits the governor's signature.

The legislature adjourned tonight to the relief of the general public, after killing all the freak measures, cation, heavy taxing of foreign corporations and alternate biennial legislation. Dogs were assessed, but automobiles go free; the school appropriation was increased to $2,500,000, antitoxin will be stored in each county, and railway coaches will receive daily disinfection.

LANGFORD-KETCHELL GO.

Thirt-Five Cold Plunks Will Buy a Good Seat.

New York, Aug. 15.—The officials of the Fairmont A. C. have decided to enlarge the seating capacity of the arena for the battle between Stanley Ketchel and Sam Langford on September 3rd. The club house is not large by any means, but the architects say room can be provided for 2,000 members. The Ketchel- Langford affair will be so great an attraction that the club has reached the conclusion that extra prices must be charged for reserved seats and for that reason a tariff of $10, $20, $30 and $35 will prevail. The club officials say there can be no interference with this important fight. They secured a permanent injunction from the Supreme Court against the police department some time ago, and have been careful to comply with the law in conducting all of their shows.

Willus Britt, Ketchel's manager, says that Langford is afraid to meet the middleweight champion in a long fight, and that he accepted the Fairmont Club's ten-round bout proposition for this reason. Britt declares that if Langford had been sure of beating Ketchel he would have jumped at the chance to meet Stanley in a finish fight in Nevada for $5,000 as his share of the purse. If Ketchel can get into the condition he showed when he beat Jack O'Brien in jig time, he will have a big following, but if he makes a bluff at preparation he may find himself in some disfavor. Langford is training at Northboro, Mass., and says he will be in better trim than when he put Ian Hague, the alleged English champion, away in four rounds last May at the National Sporting Club of London. Langford is a tremendous puncher and a very scientific boxer. But it is conceded that if he does not beat an opponent into submission in four or five rounds he is liable to slow up. He has never tackled a fast, aggressive slugger of the Ketchel type, which has created the impression in some quarters that he will not prove such a world-beater after all Langford will be in perfect physical condition, however, which means that Ketchel cannot afford to take any chances with him, even in a battle of ten rounds.

A RUSSIAN PRINCE.

New York, Aug. 15.—Using every precaution to keep his identy a secret, Prince Lyoff of Moscow, one of the three members of the Russian duma who refused to sign the revolutionary address to the Russian people issued at Viborg on July 23, 1906 and who upheld Emperor Nicholas in dissolving the parliament, arrived in New York a few days ago, and is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria. The nature of the prince's mission is unknown at the office of Baron Albert Schlippenbach, Russian consul general.

A MARVELLOUS RECORD.

Engineer Fifty Years Without Single Accident.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 15.—With a record of more than 2,000,000 miles at the throttle of a locomotive without an accident during fifty-five years continuous service, James Voorhies Wilson, for fourteen years general master mechanic of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul system, and father of Alonzo E. Wilson, a well-known Illinois anti-saloon worker, died here today.

Broken in health after his long service, Mr. Wilson made his last run July 12. The veteran railroader was born in Glencoe, N. Y., seventy-three years ago. As a lad he came West and began work for the Milwaukee road at Madison. There he "got his engine" a half century ago. Seventeen years ago he was appointed master mechanic of the railroad system with headquarters in Chicago. Because of the many responsibilities of the position and a longing to return to the cab, he resigned three years ago and went back on the road. Since then he has run between Elgin and Chicago.

Surviving him are a widow, four daughters, Mrs. H. E. Fairchild and Mrs. Leslie M. Barkwell of Minneapolis, and Mrs. William C. Nichalson and Mrs. William R. Adams of Chicago, and one son, Alonzo E. Wilson of Wheaton. The funeral will be held at Forest Home Cemetery Chapel, Chicago, at 11 a. m. Wednesday.

PARLIAMENT TO MEET NOV. 4.

Franco-Canadian Treaty and Insurance Bill Will Be Dealt With.

Ottawa, August 15.—If the present plans of the Government are realized, Parliament will be summoned for Thursday, November 4. Unforseen circumstances may delay the opening for a week or two, but it will take place not later than November 18.

The various departments are preparing their estimates, which will be ready for November 4. The Insurance Bill is ready to be again submitted to Parliament. It has been under consideration during several sessions, and last year was passed by the Commons, but did not reach the Senate in time to become law. It will be passed this year.

The Speech from the Throne will contain a declaration regarding Canada's part in the naval defence of the Empire. Its precise conditions will not be decided on before the Government has had an opportunity of studying the report which Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. Mr. Brodeur will make on the Imperial Defence Conference, now being held in London.

The new Franco-Canadian treaty will form an item of the speech from the throne and the bill ratifying it will be voted before the Christmas holidays.

MOTHER SAVES BABIES.

Drags Children Through Seething Flames and Falls Unconscious.

Montreal, Aug. 14—Prompt and heroic action on the part of Mrs. M. L. Ranger alone saved her two small children from a terrible death in the flames which almost destroyed the family home on 13th avenue, Lachine last night. With her little ones safe in the street, Mrs. Ranger fell unconscious to the ground and was only resuscitated after some difficulty. The family home, which represents the savings of a lifetime, was almost a total loss.

The fire which so nearly ended in a terrible tragedy, started early in the evening while Mr. Ranger was away from home. Accidental ignition of kerosene which was being used to start a fire in the kitchen stove was the direct cause. In some way which Mrs Ranger is unable to explain, she can containing the oil was fired, and in an instant the entire room was a huge furnace of flames. Through this inferno, Mrs. Ranger succeeded in dragging her children to the street, only to fall unconscious when they were in safety.

Neighbors gave the alarm, and strenuous efforts on the part of the firemen managed to confine the fire to the one house, although the neighborhood is thickly built up with frame buildings. The Ranger home was completely gutted. Both mother and children escaped with a few slight burns.

Dredge Working.

The Government dredge Hastings is still working in the channel in the vicinity of Yankee Bonnett.

Your complexion as well as your temper is rendered miserable by a disordered liver. By taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets you can improve both.

A Great Shower.

Yesterday's shower was a great blessing to the country. No harm could be done to the grain harvest, while it was badly needed by the roots and pasture. The country roads as well as the city roads needed a shower of rain also.

FRUIT, FRUIT.

Now is the time to secure your fruit for preserving. See our cherries. We select nothing but the best and their flavor delicious. S. A. Cox, successor to Kennedy, 360 George street. Bell phone 276.

Harriers Meet.

Arrangements are being made by the officers of the Y.M.C.A. Harriers for an athletic meet to be run off at Nicholls Oval in the near future. The program will include eight events in connection with the Howden trophy.

Go to Brockville.

It has practically been decided by the officers of the 57th Regiment to take the corps to Brockville on the annual trip this year. The prospects are bright and the arrangements are about completed for a thoroughly enjoyable outing. It is expected that the weekly drill will be started next weeks so that the boys will be in good parade shape.

Mr. Publow Coming.

A feature of the next Cheese Board meeting to be held on Wednesday morning next will be the visit of Mr. Publow, superintendent of the Kingston Dairy School, and chief cheese instructor for Eastern Ontario. Ald. G. A. Gillespie is endeavoring to arrange this visit and if Mr. Publow can come that day he will give an address before the board.

Has Returned.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien has returned home from Chicago, where he has been attending the convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. The number of delegates was very large, and the doctor reports that the total abstinence societies are rapidly increasing in numbers and much good work is being accomplished in the cause of temperance.

GIANT INDIAN MADMAN.

Cree, Who Has Killed Many, is Brought 200 Miles in Canoe.

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 13.—After a journey of over one thousand miles by canoe through the wilderness from Missanabie on the C.P.R. to Moose Factory, on the shores of James Bay, and thence to Cochrane on the T. and N. O. Railway, John has terrorized the shores of Hudson Bay for a year past, will reach Hamilton Asylum today in charge of Detective Giroux and Dr. Dunneti of Ottawa. They were accompanied from Missanable by three white men and three Indians.

Chakason was brought to Moose Factory this spring by Indians, strapped to a dog sled, five hundred miles being travelled over the ice in two days and two nights without stopping. The mad Cree is supposed to have killed several Indians, and is a giant weighing two hundred and fifty-five pounds. He had to be chained in an open field at the post, and was a terrifying spectacle, stark naked and with hair eighteen inches long.

He was washed and cleaned up and brought out in a straight jacket with manacled limbs, the canoe journey of two hundred miles being made in ten days. Every night Chakason was chained to a tree and one night pulled a six-inch balsam up by the roots. His squaw died a year ago and he has five children who are being cared for by the Hudson Bay Company. The first three days of the trip the prisoner was very vicious, and gave much trouble, but after that was more tractable.

Unceasing vigilance was maintained by the party, however, and very little sleep was enjoyed.

Chakason tore up three suits of clothes on the way out, besides blankets and tent. Only [illegible] enjoyed standing out [illegible] without clothing.

At North Bay the party tested with Chakason in the cells, where he made night hideous with war-whoops, and pounding on the bars. The party were greatly relieved when the canoe journey ended, as they never knew what moment the mad passenger would upset the craft, even with his bonds.

DOGS TO TRAIL SLAYER.

Hunt for Strange Man Who May Be Concerned in Anna Schumacher's Death.

Rochester, Aug. 14.—The hunt for the strange man who has been living in the woods near Holy Sepulchre, on the chance that he may be the slayer of Anna Schumacher, the 17-year-old girl, whose body was found in a shallow grave on Monday is still in progress. This morning a sheriff's posse is working north of Barnard's Crossing in Greece, and beating the bush and swamps toward the lake.

The famous Doberman police dogs from Pittsford, N.Y., will be let loose on the murderer's trail this afternoon, when their breeder and trainer will bring in Bertel Von Hohenstein and Bertha Vankiel, the two best of his kennel. He will be Exchange street at 2 o'clock by Sheriff Gillete, who enlisted the cogs in his search and will be taken to the swamps between the Ridge Road and Lake Ontario.

These Doberman police dogs are famous the world over for their keen scent and courageous hunting qualities. In a recent car burglary case near Buffalo, they were of great assistance in tracking down a gang of thieves.

There was a conference this morning between Chief of Police Quigley, Sheriff Gillette and Inspector of detectives Whaley. The hunt for the slayer has narrowed down to one person, a young man known to be morally weak, who, it is said, has been in the habit of frequenting cemeteries and chasing women.

This man is missing and it is not unlikely the police believe he may be the person the posse is now searching for, the description given by farmers who have seen the fugitive tallying with that of the suspect.

FOUND $100,000 IN OLD SHANTY.

Pittsburg Police in Making Arrest Tumbled Over a Fortune.

Pittsburg, Aug. 13.—After a terrific battle between four policemen and Peter Lebauch, an aged hermit, while searching the old man's hut, the police found the walls and furniture bulging with money. A trunk was filled with silver dollars, bottles and jars held smaller coins, bureau drawers were stuffed with bundles of bills of all denominations. In all, the police found abound $100,000, and when the serch seemed ended, they stumbled upon a washboiler filled with quarters, half dollars and dollars.

Lebauch was locked up and will be examined to determine the condition of his mind. He is thought to be demented. The money was hauled to the Farmers' National Bank in a wagon, and so heavy was the load that the horse was stalled. Lebauch for years has been begging on the streets, as did other members of his family. He is the last survivor.

For several days Lebauch has been acting queerly. He has been watching his house, a rievety affair, with great care, and would allow no one to enter the yard. A piece of paper was blown over the fence by the wind and the old man became infuriated and chased some children who he considered responsible for the incident. It was then that the police were called to arrest the beggar.

MUSCLES LIKE STEEL.

Notwithstanding his advanced age Lebauch has muscles of steel. After he was locked up in the North Side police station the police made an investigation to determine his mode of living. It was then that they found money in every nook and crevice. The hearth was stuffed with old bills, and the walls had broken through although they were lined. An ancient muzzle loading shot gun stuffed to the brim with leaden slugs and primed and cocked ready for discharging, stood in the corner.

Lebauch, in addition to begging, pedledmint to saloons. Besides the money hidden in the house he had $25,000 in different banks.

Appetite Gone---Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—winter sorely tired her health and vigor. But now she is rosy, and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For some years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Waimere, P.O., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headache. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfected. For a good cleansing, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essence in vegetable life—are safe for young and old and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength of every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. The muddle in the Senior City League is by no means straightened out. Only one game was played on Saturday afternoon, and that was at the Oval The West Ends and Park Street came together and they played where they could get the best gate receipts, the officials of the league to the contrary. A fair-sized crowd was in attendance, and Park street won by a score of 13—3. The game was not particularly interesting. The batteries were:—

Aged Blind Man Shot, Boy Held as Suspect

Michael Hall, 80 Years Old, Shot Full of Bullets—Terrible Crime Shocks Village of Walsh

Simsoe, Ont., Aug. 16.—Yesterday afternoon about four o'clock, Michael C. Hall of the Township of Charlotteville, Norfolk County, met his death by shooting, and great excitement prevails in the neighborhood round about. A young lad, Emerson Shelley, aged 15 years, is under arrest at Simcoe jail, under suspicion of being the person who did the shooting. Hall, an aged man nearly blind, was leaning on the fence near his house when he received the fatal shot. It is not known now whether he received any more than the one shot which entered the back of the head. He fell to the ground and his wife ran outof the house to his assistance.

When she reached him he put up his hand towards her and immediately fell back dead.

WIFE'S NARROW ESCAPE.

While Mrs. Hall was on her way to her injured husband three more shots were fired, none of them striking her, however. One of them went through a window, another struck the casing and bounded off, no traces of the third having been found as yet.

Forsome time past young Shelley has been carrying a revolver and has been shooting it off, numbers of the neighbors, warning him to desist from such actions.

The warnings, however, were not heeded and yesterday afternoon, he rifle. Lyea?He was out gunning with a 22-calibre rifle. He says that he was not near the Hall property.

This morning his arrest was effected by Constable J. S. Abell, assisted by Constable Hill, and he was incarcerated in Simcoe jail.

An inquest is to be held on Thursday at the scene of the schootong, Dr. McIntosh of Simcoe, being the presiding coroner.

Shelley will come up for his preliminary hearing on Friday, August 20, before Squire John Murphy of Silver Hill.

Hall's farm is about two and a quarter miles north-west of the village of Walsh.

Hall and his wife have been in rather poor circumstances. His age is variously given at 75 and 80 years. Walsh, near which village they lived is about ten miles west of Somcoe, and six miles south of Delhi.

An early rumor says that Mrs. Hall had also been killed, but the facts herein given seem to be reliable. Another version gives the scene of the shooting as the hall doorstep; still another says that the bullet went through the window,but these are discredited.

The Cheese Situation in Peterboro' Section Improved by Rains

The refreshing rains of Sunday and Monday were of great value. The farmers are now assured of a large make of cheese for the balance of the season, and it should be of the highest quality. The quality of the cheese from the Peterborough section for the last few shipments, it is reported, have never been excelled for summer cheese. In the early part of the season there was complaining about the cheese from here being sweet and open, but the makers soon discovered the cause and have applied the remedy. The last few shipments there have been practically no complaints.

The instructor for this district, Mr. Ward, reports that the finest delivery of milk in his experience has gone into the factories this year. The patrons are realizing more than ever the necessity of sending their milk to the factory in a clear, cool and sweet condition. There is no doubt that the lectures of Mr. Geo. Barr of the Dairy Department at Ottawa, last fall, at the annual meetings of the cheese factories has been of great benefit and that they are partly responsible for the good condition of the milk delivered at the factories this year.

The quality of the Peterborough cheese has always been recognized as of the best, and this section is one of the most important and largest producing sections in the province. Of late years largely due to the cooperation of the instructor, Mr. Ward, the makers and the patrons, a great improvement has been achieved. In talking to the exporters, who have handled cheese from all sections, they will frankly admit that Peterborough is second to none for quality and uniformity of make in the province of Ontario.

The dairy incustry of today is of so much importance as a national industry that it behooves all engaged in the business to do thir utmost to increase the output as well as improve the quality. In 1908 Canada exported 1,785,096 boxes of cheese at an average price of $9.60 a box, making a total of $17,142,681 In 1903, which was the banner year and when all records were broken, Canada exported 2,395,932 boxes at an average price of $9.00per box, making a total of $21,563, 338.

According to reports from the cheese export men it is learned that in 1896, the export of cheese was just about the same as it was in 1908. From 1896 it began to increase until 1903, and since then the export has greatly decreased although export has greatly decreased although the price is higher. In 1896 the price was $6.75 per box, while last year it was $9.60 a box the highest mark yet reached.

Duriagthe past thirteen years however, the home consumption of cheese has greatly increansed and this accounts for the decrease in exports. The better quality is responsible to a large extent for the higher price. The farmers havenot however kept pace with the times. Canada's cheese export should not decrease. In fact it should increase every year, and instead of the export in 1908 being $1,780,000 it should have been nearly 5,000,000 boxes.

This year will show quite an advance of last year's production. The make up to the present time has been slightly in excess of last year, and now that good pasture is assuredfor the balance of the season the factories will be kept busy right through.

CHAPTER OF CRIMES.

Discovery in Maryland of a Man Who Had Apparently Been Murdered.

Baltimore, Aug. 16.—News reached here tonight from Muddy Branch, Montgomery county, of the discovery there this afternoon of a murder that had apparently been committed more than a week ago. The victim was Henson Poole, aged 23 years, and an autopsy showed death to have followed three bullet wounds in the head and a blow on the right side that fractured the skull. This was probably inflicted with a hatchet, which was found in the house.The body was in a horribly decomposed condition.

Not having seen him for some time the young man's father became uneasy and fruitless inquiries were followed by a search of the house where Henson Poole had liveo alone for about a year. The fact that a considerable sum of money, known to have been in his possession, together with his watch and diamond ring, are missing, leads to the inference that robbery prompted the murder.

Poole married about a year ago but he and his wife lived together only a short time. She was a daughter of Mrs. Clara Harris, who on Thursday night was murderously assaulted at Travilah, Montgomery county, by 19-year-old Allie Harris, her nephew.

About three years ago Poole served 30 days in jail for the killing of Josef Killock. No clue to the murder of the young man has been discovered

CALLS INHERITED RICHES EVIL

Aged Millionaire With Large Family Leaves Wealth to Church.

Louisville, Aug. 16.—Theodore Harris, the aged banker who died a few days ago leaving more than $1,000,000, left practically his entire estate to the Baptists of Kentucky. He left comparatively few cash bequests to his family, which is large. His blood heirs will have a life tenure in certain portions of his estate, enough to net them an income of $150 a month each.

In his will, written and signed on April 15, 1907, he provides further that should the beneficiaries he names die or become otherwise disqualified the portion set aside for them shall revert to the estate as a whole and be paid eventually into the hands of the Baptist Church organizations.

The discrepancy between his bequests to the church and those to his own children he explains by saying: "The observations of a long life have taught me that inherited wealth is seldom useful to the one inheriting it while, on the other hand, with the blessings of God, these benefactions will do good to thousands yet unborn."

A GREAT HERITAGE.

T. & N. O. Commission Make a Tour of the Line.

Toronto, Aug. 16.—"The more I saw of that country, the more I felt that the people of Ontario fail to appreciate the great heritage they have said Mr. J. L. Englehart, chairman of the T. & N. O. Railway Commission, who has just returned from a trip over the whole line with his colleagues, Messrs. D. Murphy and Fred Dane, and the chief officials of the road. They found the whole of the railway line in good shape, and the the crops looking fine.

SETTLERS GOING IN.

There were settlers going into the country along the railway and developing the district, and there was great activity right up to Cochrane, the junction with the N. T. R. There were about one thousand people at Cochrane, and substantial buildings were being erected. Settlers were pouring into the district nine miles north, and a line of railway will be extended up there.

Two old veterans, Col. J. M. Delamere and Surgeon Major Gillette were found establishing homesteads near Charlton.

The commissioners did a little fishing, and found it a veritable paradise in this line.

China is Destined to become Leader in World's Affairs

Victoria, B. C. August 16.—"Today China has an army of 100,000 men, drilled in all the latest tactics of European nations and armed and equipped with everything of the latest in the military world. This army is being increased steadily, and in numbers and efficiency, and in eight or nine years from now it will consist of a million men in the regular army,besides an immense reserve force which will be well drilled and "ready to meet any foe." That was the opinion expressed by Ny Poon Chew, managing editor of the San Francisco Chinese daily newspaper, Chung Sai Yat Po, when interviewed during a visit here.

"In ten years from now," continued the editor, "China will be the most progressive nation upon earth. The reason I am able to make this statement is because there are factors at work which are bound to bring about this result. China was at one time the most advanced and highly civilized nation on earth,and now that she is awakening she will again take the lead. There are at present something like 400,000 men, mostly youths, who are working to uplift China. They are willing to shed every drop of blod in their veins in order to bring about the desired result.

"China's great hope is in education Recently the educational system of the country has been re-organized. The old system has been discarded or modified to bring it into line with the rest of the world. We now have a system of examination of teachers and normal training without which no one is allowed to teach. This we expect will have a great effect on the regeneration of the country. Add to this the building of railways, of roads, of telegraph lines, so that and the old dialects broken down,and communication may be opened up with the young men devoting themselves to the building up of their country, and we have factors which are bound to bring great results.

"What we are trying to cultivate at present is a national spirit. By breaking down the old barriers of dialect, and opening communication educating the people through the schools, and then keeping the different parts of the country in touch with each other by means of the newspapers, we expect to be able to do this. In fact, we are doing it very fast, and it will be but a few years before the country is one united whole."

Cultivating Cheerfulness

Commenting on the tonic effect of cheerfulness, Dr. Madison C. Peters says:

"Cheerfulness is a mighty factor in winning success. John Wanna-maker's clerks have been heard to say: 'We work better for a week after a pleasand "Good morning" from Mr. Wannamaker.' Few things are more fatal to business than worry and irritation. Worry, anxiety and fear sap life of its best blessings. It is not the movement which wears out machinery—it is the friction."

There is a good deal of sound philosophy in these statements that is worth bearing in mind,but Dr. Peters apparently fails to allow for temperament and the force of environment.

He seems to think that cheerfulness is merely a matter of will, of a fiat mind, while physical infirmity and functional derangement weaken the powers of self-control, and poverty and concern for the future.

The result of economic conditions, is conceded to be the most common cause of "the worry, anxiety and fear that sap life."

It requires not only an individual but social effort to eliminate these causes and create the "tonic of cheerfulness."

It is a condition, however, to which everyone should contribute and a state of mind which the individual should as far as it is within his or her control, cultivate, for cheerfulness is to a certain extent contagious and, like sunshine, lightens dark places with its own radiance.

A Touching Scene in Lindsay Court

Lindsay, Aug. 16.—During the whole session of the preliminary investigation held here on Saturday in which James Hunter of Bobcaygeon, was pat on trial for his life, the prisoner scarcely moved, but sat upright beside his counsel

One of the most touching figures was the mother of theprisoner's murdered wife, Mrs. Rosanna Coulter, the first to give evidence. She sat with her head bowed, and, as others told the story of that awful morning,her frail body shook with sobs. And when she was called upon to give her bond that she would appear in September to give evidence against her son-in-law, she cried in weak voice, "If God spares me, I will be there."

After it was all over Hunter was allowed to talk with his child for a short time. The boy, a lad of about ten years of age, came over gladly, and sat on his father's knee, without the least hesitancy. For a long time they chatted of many matters dear to the boy's heart, of the fishing, of his pets and of home matters.

Then the man called his daughter Grace, who had been in the room when the murder occurred. She had been standing by her grandmother all this time. She came over,and the father made room for her on his other knee. But she seated herself two chairs away, and looked out the window. She answered in monosyllables, and at last the father, giving up the attempt to bring her into conversation, turned his whole attention to the boy. It was at this time that the man seemed to feel his position more than at any other. And when he parted from his son he spoke to him for a few minutes, and from the attitude seemed to be giving him advice and inviting his confidence. He then signed a few checks in a steady hand, and was led back once more to his cell to await the day when he will stand before his peers on trial for his life.

Hail Storm Did Much Damage at Indian Head Mr. McConnel's Loss

Mr. McConnell of Gilmour street, received a very discouraging letter from Mrs. McConnell yesterday in which it was stated that practically his whole wheat crop had been destroyed by the recent heavy rain and hail storms.

Mr. McCoanell has a large section of land near Indian Head, which is worked on shares, and Mrs. McConnell and son have been out there for several weeks looking after the business. The crop gave promise of being a bumper one, and to bind his share of the harvest. Mr. McConnell had ordered 3500 pounds of Binder twine. That will give some indication of the extent of the wheat fields he had under cultivation. He estimates his loss at about $9000.

LOW PRICE FOR SCHOOL PRIMER

The Youngsters Will Begin on Fairy Tales and Rhymes.

Toronto, Aug. 16.—The new public school primer is the latest addition to the series of revised text-books issued by the provincial Department of Education. At the rate of over 10,000 per day the T. Eaton Company is publishing the books, and a full supply will be turned out for the demand all over the Province.The rural schools open Monday, and a big initial order will be required, but there will be ample time before the town and city schools need their thousands of copies.

The primer is a marvel of bookbinding.Bound in full boards, whereas the old first reader was in limp; it contains 96 pages as compared with 84 pages in its predecessor. In addition there are 111 illustrations from original drawings. The book sells for the astonishingly low price of 4 cents. The old one cost ten cents.

As explained by Dr. D. J. Goggin, the editor of the new reader, this primer differs radically from the old one. It is simply a reading book, consisting of the best fairy tales, nonsenses, rhymes and stories, which every child is supposed to hear. The aim was simply to get an interesting book for the youngsters to read, not as on the old plan, a method book wherein arid word exercise are built up in the most artificial manner.

"Inspectors and teachers," explained Dr. Goggin, "have told me not to to give them free to fo,low their own methods. Now we have left the teachers absolutely free. Some successful teachers have one method and some another."

"In addition we are also getting out a handbook explaining some more difficult historical and litterary allusions in the readers. It also gives suggestions of the best way to treat the more difficult lessons, and tells how some of the most experienced teachers do. Our object is to help the teachers in every possible way.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Canada Demands Navy in the Pacific

Delegates Clash with the Admiralty on the Disposition of Ships—Australia's Cruisers —Control of Navy

London, Aug. 16.—The Imperial Defence Conference will hold its final meeting on Thursday, when the military sub-committee's report will be received. The naval conferences with Australia and New Zealand have been completed. With regard to Canada, however, some technical details are still to be arranged, particularly in reference to the local disposition of Canadian ships and services.

A despatch from Melbourne states the likelihood of Australia, instead of offering a Dreadnought is to provide a squadron of fast cruisers. These would be of service in local and Pacific waters, and would form the base of a large naval force.

ADMIRALTY VS. COLONIES.

The scheme for the army gave the Imperial Defence Conference little trouble, but the naval question proved a hard problem. All the colonies agreed to share the cost of the navy but in discussing what particular form the contributions should take, a sharp difference was disclosed between the admiralty and the Canadian and Australian delegates. Especially well defined was the difference regarding Great Britain's policy in the Pacific.

Since the Anglo-Japanese treaty, Great Britain has withdrawn most of her fleet from the China coast, while the North Pacific fleet has been entirely abolished. The Home Government refuses to see any danger in that part of the work., and can regard Japan in no other light than that of an ally. The colonial delegates, on the contrary, persistently describe Japan as a possible rival. They thought it likely that she might within the measureable future become anxious for more territory. Accordingly the colonials insisted on their own coasts and trade being adequately protected.

CONTROL OF NAVY.

The admiralty wish both Canadian and Australian fleets to be controlled from London, while the Canadian delegates wounld not agree to this, insisting that it be absolutely under federal control. The first Canadian vessels, it is said, will be fast cruisers. The admiralty want this stationed in the Atlantic, while the Canadian delegates think they should be placed in the Pacific.

Two Small Children Drown Near London

London, Aug. 16.—The bodies of the two children missing since yesterday were found at noon today in the river within a few yards of the tent where they had been camping. The bodies were in about 5 feet of water and close together,

The whole countryside near London, Springbank and Byron was searched for Phelma and Madeline Corbin, who strayed away from a camp at Wonderland yesterday and have not been seen since. The two little ones are five and six years of age, and are the children of Mr. Bert Prichet of South London and of Mr. William Corbin. The two families have been camping at Wonderland all summer. Yesterday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock the two little ones were seen going off together. At tea time they had not returned and the parents grew uneasy andsearching parties went at once. The pond at Wonderland was dragged for fear that they might have fallen in, but no trace of them was found. Parties then took each side of the river and searched along to Byron, but this was likewise fruitless. At midnight after the whole country side had been scoured, word was received from Byron that two children were seen in the vicinity, but when a large party of the campers searched the country surrounding no trace of them could be found. Later they were found in the river.

BLOW AT RACING.

American Horses Must Pay Duty to Return.

Montreal, Aug. 16.—As outlined by one of the incorporators, the Metropolitan Racing Association which, it is announced has just received a Federal Charter, is working out a big scheme. The Association according to the gentleman in question, has ample funds to go ahead and already has been actively working for the securing of proper grounds in the four cities in which it intends holding racing meets. In Toronto, Dufferin Park is regarded with favor, and it is most likely their racing will be carried on there, while in the other citiesoptions have been secured on desirable property. The racing will be of a mixed variety, running and trotting, but running will predominate

MRS. C. S. DOLLEY

New York, Aug. 16.—Dr. Charles Sumner Dolley, formerly professor of biology in the University of Pennsylvania and at Swarthmore College, arrived here from Vera Cruz, Mexico on the Merida, of the Ward line,with his bride, who was Mrs. Adelaide Gorman. Dr. Dolley, who has been living in Mexico City for some years and who is a scientific expert for a packing firm in that city, is well known in educational circles in this country. Mrs. Dolley is the widow of James Francis Gorman, of Mexico City.

Mutual sorrow brought the couple together eighteen months ago. At that time Mrs. Gorman's husband died and death claimed Dr. Dolley's wife.

The couple laughed when they told on the Pier in Brooklyn about their marriage in Mexico City. It took them nearly a month to get married. First they had to be married by a religious one. The State demands a civil ceremony, while society recognizes only the other.

Sciatica

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY.

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored By "Nerviline."

We have all read and heard of the agonies of Sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day and got relief. In order to build up my general health and CURED and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one SIX tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment YEARS four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline." 25 cents per bottle or five for $1.00, sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 1

THE CASE OF CRETE.

The government of Greece would doubtless like nothing better than to stave off indefinitely the Cretan problem. But both Crete and Turkey are forcing the issue, and Greece must probably soon make a decision which will mean either war or something which will seem to her much like dishonor.

Crete is almost entirely Greek by race, religion and sympathy. It is Turkish by nominal suzerainty. For ten years it has been under the supervision of representatives of France England, Russia and Italy, with a resident Greek commissioner at the head of the government. The term of the supervision has expired, the four powers have withdrawn, Crete has proclaimed itself Greek. Turkey has demanded of Greece a formal declaration of noninterference in Cretan affairs, and the next move is Greece's, with the certainly that if Greece does not do what is asked Turkey will sever diplomatic relations. A mobilization of Turkish troops, as if for war against Greece, has also been reported.

It is a most unhappy situation. The young Turks feel that to retain their dominant position at home they absolutely must keep hold on Crete. Cretans feel that any form of Turkish domination will inevitably means tyranny. The Greeks have all the calls of race sympathy as well as national pride to make them take a firm attitude. But both Crete and Greece must know that Turkey will quickly crush them if it comes to war.

It will be a great misfortune if the supervision of the four powers cannot be extended for another ten years. Without that the outlook promises much unnecessary suffering for every body concerned. If Crete could admit Turkish suzerainty while the young Turks could restrain themselves to such an extent that they would let the Cretans govern themselves without interference, all might be well. But such restraint on either side is hardly to be expected.

AN IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

A sensible suggestion is made in the Empire Review by the editor, Sir Clement Kinloch Cooke, who is also chairman of the Central Emigration Board. The suggestion is the holding of an Imperial conference on emigration and immigration. Sir Clement writes from the point of view of one seeking a solution of the British unemployed problem, and there is much that could be accomplished in that connection by such a conference. But it is even more vital from the standpoint of the overseas Dominions, for here it bears upon the problem of Empire building.

It is of great importance to Great Britain that her people, who desire to carve out their fortunes in the newer parts of the Empire, should have the opportunities which the older and more crowded country cannot give them. It is of transcendant importance to the Empire—to Great Britain, and to the oversea Dominions—that the Colonies should be settled by British citizens. Canadians have already pledged themselves to take steps to give the British immigrant a warmer welcome and a better chance in the Dominion. An analysis of our immigration statistics shows that we are in real danger of having poured into our national life too large a percentage of non-British blood. The problem of the retention of the British spirit is for us a serious one; and we will welcome all the help we can obtain from our brother Britons. The same problem is pressing in South Africa, and in a different form in Australia. So that it is eminently a matter for an Imperial Conference.

Only the other day the cables gave us an instance of the need of an understanding between the Home and the Colonial governments on the subject. The Premier of West Australia, in reply to a deputation of returned settlers with grievances, told them emphatically: "I have had more trouble with British immigrants than with any other class of settlers and I am going to tell the Agent-General not to send out any more immigrants, no matter how much capital they have, unless he is thoroughly satisfied that they are men who can make a success on the land." Now, it is not good for mutual friendliness between the different parts of the Empire that such harsh words should be used. Unfortunately in some cases there has been reason for them. But if the Home Government were working hand in hand with the Colonial authorities, more accurate knowledge of the settler as well as of the Colonial opportunities would be possible, and thereby fewer such regrettable cases would occ

THE OLD VILLAGE GAMES.

The system of passive amusement comes, no doubt, of living in large towns and of the ease with which any one can reach them. In a large town, where the holiday-maker can see the best of anything, he is discouraged from doing anything in the same way himself. And villagers, who once could have got no amusement except what they made for themselves, can now go on an excursion to the nearest town and see all the modern specialization of life, which has now been carried so far that it is becoming one of the chief enemies of civilization. Every man has his peculiar task and gives up all his energy to it. It is the business of some to amuse the world; never any man's business to amuse himself. But now that we are growing conscious of this over-specialization and its dangers, we are beginning to fight against it. We can only learn to amuse ourselves once more by a conscious effort, but in many places and in many ways that conscious effort is being made. There still remain the old village games, and here and there the old village dances are being revived. There is also a great revival of popular music, the more promising because it is half spontaneous. These revivals will only have a full success if they bring the rich and the poor together again in their amusements. If they do that, they will perform a great service to the State, for a country in which the tastes of the rich and the poor are utterly different is divided against itself. There is nothing that brings people together so much as common pleasures, and nothing that estranges them more than a contempt for each other's pleasures. Where there is this kind of estrangement, the tastes of the cultured become priggish and the taste of the crowd become coarse. Culture when it is fugitive and cloistered grows pharisaical, thinking rather of what it dislikes than of what it likes. It provides a hot-house for art in which art sickens and dies. Wherever there is a great, thriving and popular art, it is a symptom that a whole people knows how to amuse itself in common; and perhaps the common amusement is of greater value even than that art which it produces—London Times.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.
I am the one physician who says to the sick "I will cost of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you health."
And for 20 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively stocked in every community—and every where.
Then why pay the cash, and pay your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines?
Thousands upon thousands have in the most successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative.
When the Stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails to return, Dr. Shoop will pay the cash himself gladly for that.
And for that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted. But write me first for an order.
This will save delay and disappointment.
All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test. So drop me a line personally for I have considered no special cash inducements. My advice and the book I want to send you free, are for every sufferer of those ills, be they slight or serious. Simply address me personally, Dr. Shoop, Box 5, Racine, Wis.
Perhaps a word or two from me will offer no more obligation than a penny postal. And my valuable book you may have for the asking. Then if you will surely open up my way and learn what folks who are sick and ailing, who suffer and despair, owe to one small penny and the world over, I am sure you will write me. Don't delay. Write me personally, Dr. Shoop, Box 5, Racine, Wis.

THE MOUND BUILDERS

Mystery of the Great Monuments Found in This Country.

RELICS OF A VANISHED RACE

The Strangely Shaped Structures Are Thought to Be More Than Two Thousand Years Old—The Enigma of Those Who Reared Them.

Scattered through the middle west and in other parts of the United States are more than 10,000 monstrous, odd shaped "mounds." Some are built like forts, others in queer, sharp geometrical figures, others shaped like huge serpents, crocodiles, buffaloes, turtles, eagles, lizards, dragons with eggs in their mouths, etc. Some of these mounds are a mile long, some much smaller. In Newark, O., stands a continuous mound, constructed in a perfect circle, more than 5,000 feet in circumference. The mounds are often covered with trees that are many centuries in age. These strangely shaped structures are thought to be more than 2,000 years old.

Who built them?

Certainly not the North American Indians. The Indians have ever been a lazy, roving race, making their livelihood chiefly by hunting and fishing, seldom remaining long in one neighborhood and using tents or the rudest huts as their dwelling places.

The mysterious people who built the mounds were not a race of rovers. An infinitely long time must have been required for erecting each huge earth shape. Nor were they ignorant savages, for the mounds show deep knowledge of geometry as well as of astronomy and of the principles of building. Carefully laid out military fortifications abound in the mound builders' country, indicating that the aborigines had martial lore and engineering skill and that they understood many modern principles of attack and defense.

There are also sepulchral mounds, some of them sixty feet high. These contain human bones, skulls, etc., as well as copper utensils and bits of pottery. The bones when exposed to air crumble at once to dust. As the bones of Europeans who died twenty centuries ago are often found intact and strong, many authorities believe the mound builders date back at least several centuries before the time of Julius Caesar.

Cleverly made pottery and copper or bronze implements of war and peace are found all through the mounds. Ancient abandoned copper mines on the banks of Lake Superior show that the mound builders well understood the art of mining. The workmanship of the copper bracelets, bronze knives, etc., prove their skill at the forge.

In one of the prehistoric Lake Superior mines has been found a mass of copper weighing eight tons, resting on a high platform, ready for removal to the upper earth. This implies the use of well constructed mine machinery. Pictures that have been found etched upon copper and ivory portray much artistic skill.

From all this it seems that in some remote age the central part of North America was inhabited by a race of warlike, industrious, decidedly civilized beings who had splendid skill at building, at the arts of mining, engineering and higher mathematics and who flourished apparently during numerous centuries. Yet so long ago did the mound builders cease to exist that in all Indian folklore there is no mention, no memory, of them.

None know where the Indians themselves came from. Yet they apparently settled in America long after the mound builders had vanished. The skulls discovered in the mounds are not shaped in the least like skulls of Indians nor even of Europeans. Some archaeologists claim to find strong resemblance between the mound builders' skulls and those of the ancient Egyptians. If there were any connection between the two, who can explain how an Egyptian race chanced to flourish in the middle west?

The fate of the mound builders is as mysterious as the strange people themselves. After reaching so high a civilization and thriving for so long a time it seems strange that they should have been completely destroyed. No satisfactory explanation has ever been offered. Perhaps the mound builders moved south and became merged with the Mexican Aztecs or Peruvians, or some savage race from the north may have swept down and utterly destroyed them, or a wholesale pestilence may have wiped out their nation.

The weird looking earthen monuments (the purpose of most of them a puzzle to the best archaeologists) are the sole remaining proof that this great lost American race ever existed.

How He Managed.

A man in an up state county owns a number of horses and has a great reputation for skill in the treatment of them. One day a farmer who wanted some valuable information approached the horse owner's little boy and said:

"Look here, my little man, when one of your father's horses is ill what does he do?"

"Do you mean slightly ill or seriously ill?" asked the boy cautiously.

"Oh, seriously ill," said the farmer.

"Because," said the child, "if a horse is only slightly ill he gives it medicine, but if it is seriously ill he sells it."

Troubles must come to all men, but those who are always looking for them will have the largest share.

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The pale, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" those the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

TEACHING HORSES TO JUMP.

There Are Three Methods Used—Coaxing, Lunging and Driving.

There are three methods of teaching a horse to leap—coaxing, lunging and driving. In the coaxing method the young horse is turned into a small paddock having a low hedge or hurdle across the center. In plain view of the pupil a rider on a veteran jumper should take him over the hurdle several times.

The trainer then goes to the opposite side with a measure of corn or oats and calls the horse, shaking up the grain and pouring it with his hand back and forth in the receptacle. The boundary will soon be cleared, and when a few mouthfuls have been eaten the station of the instructor should be at the other side of the hurdle and the lesson repeated. If this be done daily the hurdle may be gradually heightened.

The habit of jumping is thus acquired without those risks which attend a novel performance when a heavy burden oppresses the strength and whip and spur distract the attention. The horse's body, says Country Life in America, is not partially disabled by the imposition of a heavy load before the powers are taxed to the utmost and his capabilities are unfettered.

The second method is termed lunging. A long rein or cord is attached to the bit, and the animal is exercised in a circle in which a hurdle has been placed or a shallow ditch dug. A long lashed whip, used only to keep him in motion or lightly applied at the proper moment, will keep him up to his work. Soon the horse will enter into the spirit of the occasion and by unmistakable signs will manifest his enthusiastic enjoyment of the exercise.

The third method, driving, is exactly what its name implies. At first the obstruction should be slight. Any open space will answer the purpose, an earth or sod surface or tanbark being preferable. Long reins, a straight bar or snaffle bit, a long whip and patience and perseverance are required.

All things considered, the driving method is the quickest and surest way of teaching the horse to leap. When he has become somewhat proficient, having thoroughly learned what is required of him, the saddle may be called into requisition and the practical lessons begun.

Almost any young horse can be taught to leap. Of course his proficiency will depend on the care bestowed on his training and on his general characteristics of wind, limb and nerve. An ordinary cob or Morgan will attain the proficiency of an Irish hunter, but any horse that is used for a saddler will be of far greater value to his owner if he can be taken occasionally for a cross country ride and put over ditches and low obstructions.

Ethics and Morality.

If a woman's husband has been silly enough to take more wine than is good for him, morality would lead her to send him to bed. Ethics would lead her to send him to Coventry. And ethology would probably lead her to send him to a penal settlement for inebriates.

If a man's wife throws a teapot at him (as happened recently in the aristocratic neighborhood in which I live) morality would lead him to go out of the house for an hour or so and give her nerves a chance. Ethics would probably induce him to go out of the town and write to her from a garden city that their temperaments were incompatible. What ethology would make him do I hardly dare to think.—Chesterton in Illustrated London News.

More Accurate.

The pastor and his wife had called upon a member of the congregation, a widow with a small but exceedingly lively boy, and were on their way home. "Well," said the preacher, "she seems to be a very intelligent woman anyhow."

"Yes."

"And very positive in expressing her opinions."

"On the contrary," said his wife, "she struck me as being strongly negative."

"Negative? How?"

"Everything she said to her little boy began with a 'Don't, Johnny!'"—Exchange.

Sympathy of the Flowers.

More or less credence is still given in England to the old belief in the sympathy of the vegetable kingdom for human suffering. "I prayed all night," writes a gardener whose employer was very sick, "and the flowers on my window sill drooped, and I said to myself they were dead. But toward morning they picked up, and I was sure enough the master was better. And the same thing had happened to the flowers I had sent to his bedroom. They were dying, and they came to life again. And I knew when those flowers picked up that the master was better."

The Pins.

"Oh, dear," sighed her husband's wife, "I can't find a pin anywhere. I wonder where all the pins go to anyway?"

"That's a difficult question to answer," replied his wife's husband, "because they are always pointed in one direction and headed in another."

Painter's Colic.

Mamma—What's the matter with Fido? Tommie—Oh, I was playing with my soldiers, and he came in and insisted upon licking the whole army.—Yonkers Statesman.

Take a rest. A field that has rested gives a beautiful crop.—Ovid.

The Bladderwort.

The aquatic plant the bladderwort feeds on animal life. The tiny bladders attached to the leaves and leaf stalks are each furnished with a door, the whole acting on the eel trap principle. Any small water creature that ventures to peep in is seized in the clutches of the murderous plant and is at once swallowed and assimilated.

Ant Proof Woods.

Tea is made in the south sea islands of boxes made of camphor wood or American white cedar, because ants and other insects have an aversion for these woods. The natives use such boxes for trunks.

BARNUM'S METHODS.

The Showman Always on the Alert For an Advertisement.

One morning the newspapers announced that grave fears were entertained for the safety of an agent of Barnum's big show who had gone to Africa to seek attractions for it in their native lairs. News had come, it was said, that he had last been heard from in a predicament from which escape was practically impossible. It was a very sad piece of business altogether.

Mr. Barnum was at a hotel in New York city at the time, and there a relative of the unfortunate agent found him entertaining a squad of reporters with a most interesting version of the African tragedy. The caller knew his man and waited patiently until the interviewers had departed. Then he anxiously asked for news.

"Oh, don't be worried," said the showman. "I've just got intelligence that he's safe and sound and will be back here in a few weeks."

"But he has a great many friends here," objected the visitor, "and this report of his death will cause them much sorrow."

Mr. Barnum looked solemn for an instant, and then he chuckled. "Well," he exclaimed cheerfully, "just think of this—they'll be all the happier when he gets back here alive."

SEA MONSTERS OF OLD.

The Marine Monster That Was Thought to Cause Tidal Waves.

The kraken was one of the sea monsters of old, and if all the stories told about its wondrous size and doings are true it overshadowed the serpent as much as the latter does the common garter snake. An old writer says that this marine giant caused tidal waves by swallowing a goodly part of the waters of the ocean and then belching them out again. He also makes mention of the fact that its gigantic horny beak was often mistaken for mountain peaks suddenly shoved into sight by the internal convulsions of the earth.

Bishop Pontoppidan, a truthful member of the Copenhagen Royal academy, is much more conservative in his estimates of its size, giving it as his opinion that they were seldom found more than "the half of an Italian mile in length and not larger in diameter than the cathedral at The Hague."

He also says that its body was frequently mistaken by sailors for an island, so that people landed upon it and were engulfed in a maelstrom of water when the creature sank to its hidden ocean den." Other authorities testify that its beak from the eyes to the point "was longer than the mainmast of a man-of-war."

The Sewing Machine.

The invention of the sewing machine is one of the most interesting evolutionary romances in the history of human progress. Stone, Henderson and Greenough had experimented extensively with the double pincher idea, one to seize the needle below and one above. Heilmann used a double pointed needle, with the eye in the center, and Thimmonier and Ferrand had invented a chain stitch machine. In 1834 Walter Hunt originated the extension arm idea with a needle similar to the one now in general use, but before he applied for his patent in 1854 he had been forestalled by Elias Howe, who will always be known as the inventor of the sewing machine. If Hunt had not been so great a laggard he might have won fame as an inventor, but Howe is entitled to all the credit that has been given him. Like all great inventions, however, the sewing machine was the product of many minds.

Throwing the Shoe.

The peasants of southern France have the credit of originating the familiar custom of throwing an old shoe after the newly wedded pair. It was, moreover, the rejected suitor who first made it popular. The peasant bride is conducted by her friends to her new home, while the young husband is made to halt a couple of hundred yards from the house. If there is a rejected suitor he then arms himself with an old wooden shoe and flings it, with his best aim, at the bridegroom as he makes a dash for the house. When the shoe is thrown it is understood that the last feeling of ill will has been flung away with it.

An Easy One.

Billfuss—If I had $3 and you asked me to lend you two, how much would I have left? Jubb—Oh, I know the answer to that. You would still have $3 left, granting it were possible that you ever had that much at one time, because you wouldn't lend me any. Ask me something probable.—Pathfinder.

One on Papa.

Caller—Harold, when you get to be the head of a family what will you say to your children when they are naughty? Harold—Oh, I'll do like papa. I'll tell them how good I was when I was a kid.

Cheap Living.

She—I'm living on brown bread and water to improve my complexion. He—How long can you keep it up? She—Oh, indefinitely, I guess. He—Then let's get married Result of Rashness.

"Out of a job, are you?" asked the first girl. "Boss catch you flirting?"

"No; I caught the boss. Say, what sort of a wedding dress do you think is real swell?"

Truly this world can go on without us, if we would but think so.—Lowell.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach troubles must surely result. For druggists everywhere are now prescribing a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Right there where the Stomach, Heart and Kidney nerves fail. Then you have Heart Palpitation, or failing days follow. Don't drug the Heart, or stimulate the Heart or nerves. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you are realizing the gain. A test will convince. Sold by all dealers.

MAN'S ENEMIES.

The Small Foes Are the Most Deadly and Destructive.

In one of Herbert Wells' brilliant stories the terribly scientific and practically invincible Martians who have invaded the earth and conquered England are stopped in the midst of their victories and utterly destroyed by the attacks of microscopic foes, infinitely small organisms, germs of diseases to which man has become in some degree immune slay the wonderful warriors of a planet never invaded by these earth foes. What the greatest battleships and the heaviest guns could not do the unseen and unknown living seeds of death accomplish.

More clearly every day the world understands that in the life and affairs of mankind the most deadly and destructive foes are extremely small. All of the fierce mammals and poisonous serpents of Africa do not kill as many human beings in ten years as the tsetse fly slays in one. The tigers and cobras of India kill their thousands every year, but the rats which spread the germs of the bubonic plague destroy their tens of thousands. In this country the common housefly undoubtedly causes more deaths than all the venomous snakes, wild beasts mad dogs, runaway horses and ill tempered bulls ten times over. The actual proportion is probably much higher than ten to one.

MAN AND MONKEY.

Difference Between the Human and Animal Method of Thought.

The difference between the animal and the human idea of what constitutes "knowing" comes out nicely in a piece of work done at Clark university—A. J. Kinnman's study of rhesus monkeys, the Bandar-log of the "Jungle Book."

The monkey, following the usual procedure, learned to get his food from a box, the lid of which fastened with a key. The key, however, could not be withdrawn from the lock After the monkey had become familiar with the device and could operate it as readily as a man could do the experimenter took the key out of the lock and laid it on the floor in front of the box. The monkey picked up the key, played with it, but made no attempt to use it. Then the experimenter took up the key, and, fifty times in succession, with the monkey two feet away watching every motion, he unlocked the box. The monkey would have starved before he imitated that simple act. He had learned to open the box by making certain movements He had no idea of the key as an instrument in the process. We sometimes think instruments and means and causes. The animal thinks largely motions.—E. T. Bronston in McClure's Magazine.

A Rare Opportunity.

When the circus came to Bushby the large attendance was a surprise to Squire Bemis, and he said so to William Hamlin, the postmaster.

"It is natural that men and children should wish to go," remarked the squire in his formal tone, "but I must confess to a feeling of amazement on hearing that the ladies of the town had flocked to see wild beasts and that young woman who leaps from one wire to another, with no regard for her personal safety."

"Tell you just how 'tis, squire," said Mr. Hamlin confidentially. "I don't think many of the women folks planned to go till Jed Potter came in here one mail time and told Miss Emma Bolles he understood the show was enough to scare anybody out of ten years' growth.

"Miss Emma's getting on, and you wouldn't expect her to let a chance like that go—nor any of the other women, now, could ye?"

Keep Your Temper.

Which of all the domestic virtues is most essential to a happy married life? The ability to keep one's temper, beyond all question.

There is nothing which leads more to misery, not only for its possessor, but also for those about him, than an ungovernable and unreasonable temper. No one is worse to live with than an ill tempered man, except perhaps an ill tempered woman.

Bad tempered people completely spoil the lives of those who associate with them. The feeling of strain is ever present. One never knows just when the storm will break, although apparently the weather, metaphorically, is "set fair." Life in these circumstances becomes a burden almost beyond bearing.

Caught Her.

"I am looking for something nice for a young man," said the young and pretty shopper.

"Why don't you look in the mirror?" asked the gallant clerk.

And she was so flustered that he managed to sell her four different things that she did not want before she knew what she was doing.

Misgivings.

"That was a very lucid document you prepared,' said the friend

"Yes," answered the statesman dubiously. "I made it so lucid that I am afraid the public will fail to regard it as able and profound."

A Reminder.

Mrs. B.—If I should die would you ever forget me? Mr B.—I think not. The doctor said that I will suffer from dyspepsia all my life

HISTORIC WEAPONS.

Trophies Wrested From the Crusaders Found in the Sudan.

Among the trophies of arms displayed on the walls of Windsor castle one of the most interesting of the long series is a group of weapons and armor sent to Queen Victoria by Lord Kitchener after the Dongola campaign on the upper Nile in 1896.

The trophy consists of a coat of chain mail, a number of spears and a long cross hilted sword. On the straight steel blade of the sword there is an inscription in odd fashioned letters: "No me saques sin rasca. No me entraines sin honor."

The words are Spanish, but the same motto was inscribed on sword blades in the days of chivalry in most of the languages of Europe. Its meaning is the knightly rule for all who bear the sword: Do not draw me without reason. Do not sheathe me without honor.

The weapon was taken from the abandoned camp of Wad Bishara, the dervish general, after the battle of Hafir (Sept. 23, 1896). How came a blade with such a motto to be found in a Moslem bivouac in the heart of the Sudan?

The presence of these crusader swords in the Sudan is not so difficult to explain. In the thirteenth century the Mohammedan caliphs of Egypt not only carried on successful wars against the crusaders in Syria, destroying the last vestiges of the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem, but also defeated two attempts of the Europeans to invade Egypt itself, one of them led by St. Louis of France.

Enormous quantities of western arms and warlike equipments must have thus passed into the possession of the Mohammedan conquerors.—Chambers' Journal.

BABY TALK.

An Infantile Habit That Sometimes Sticks and Breeds Trouble.

Once in awhile a rare stammering case comes to the laboratory where there's nothing the matter with the child—the matter is with his dear mamma. In 1905 Dr. Witmer examined a boy of twelve who talked baby talk—a bright, alert youngster, to all appearances normal. But nobody could understand a word he uttered—except mamma; she understood it all perfectly. "I—aw—ow—ay" was to her ear "I want to go out to play" as plain as anything could be. It was her tender custom to reply likewise, and she took pride in the thought that she had never allowed her Willie to associate with the children on the block. She had encouraged him to be her baby and "kept him from growing up too soon" by prattling to him.

Except for his unintelligible language, the examination did not reveal a defect, physical or mental, in the boy, and Dr. Witmer was forced to the conclusion that the trouble lay in the persistence of an infantile habit of articulation for which the mother was solely responsible. Through sentimentality and overindulgence "she had almost ruined his chances for a useful and possibly successful life." (Psychological clinic, March, 1907.) Months of painstaking, expert labor had to be expended upon him to break up the habit his mother had carefully developed before he could even begin to make himself understood by any one else.—Dr. Witmer of Yale in McClure's Magazine.

Almost Disbelieved Her Eyes.

"Among the memories of my boyhood," said a New York man, "there is one odd episode that is particularly vivid. It is a conversation that I overheard one morning as I walked toward the Boston high school between two women.

"The women were talking about babies—their size, weight, health, and so forth.

"'Why, when I was a week old,' said the first woman, 'I was such a little baby that they put me in a quart pot and put the lid on over me.'

"The other woman was amazed and horrified. 'And did you live?' she asked.

"'They say I did,' her friend answered.

"'Well, well, well!' exclaimed the second woman. And she glanced at the other almost doubtfully."

In the Wrong Place.

A one legged Welsh orator named Jones was pretty successful in banteering an Irishman, when the latter asked him:

"How did you come to lose your leg?"

"Well," said Jones, "on examining my pedigree and looking up my descent I found there was some Irish blood in me, and, becoming convinced that it was settled in the left leg, I had it cut off at once."

"By the powers," said Pat, "it would have been a very good thing if it had only settled in your head!"—London Mail.

The Fool.

He was a noble lord, and he was in an awful rage with one of his footmen.

"It is intolerable!" he exclaimed. "Are you a fool, or am I?"

"Oh, my lord," replied James, with humility, anxious to appease the great man, "I am sure you would not keep a servant who was a fool."

The Greatest Inventor.

Teacher—Who is the greatest inventor? Shaggy Haired Pupil—Pat Pending, I guess. I see his name on more inventions than I do any other man's.

A person who talks with equal vivacity on every subject excites no interest in any.—Hazlitt.

What to Push.

"Any one," remarked the old gentleman, "can build up a fortune if he has plenty of push."

"That depends upon the way the push is applied," rejoined the wise youth. "There isn't much money in pushing a pecart or a lawn mower."—St. Louis Republic.

Their Training.

"I should think baseball men would be particularly useful in the army in actual warfare."

"Why especially baseball men?"

"Because they would know better than others how to fight a pitched battle."—Boston Transcript.

BUSINESS METHODS.

A man may have several carloads of ability. He may have brains and ideas and other desirable things. But all the ideas ever "ideated" will not avail to raise a man who neglects that all important item of advertising. You simply must get attention. Of course you can get attention by firing off a revolver during office hours or you can do it by wearing loud clothes and proclaiming your kinship in the sporting fraternity. But most men who have risen from the ranks have carefully neglected to use methods of this kind.

Every office man must act as his own salesman. He must first prepare himself by increasing his efficiency. He must be able to do the work for which he is hired. Not only should he do that for which he is hired, but he must do that work better than it ever was done before. When that item has been attended to if is then time to look about for more work.

The wise employee will keep his eye on the job ahead or, better still, will look at a job which does not exist, but which should exist for the good of the business. The next step is to think out a selling talk that will get the attention, arouse the interest, create a desire and bring about in the mind of the employer a desire to do what the live employee desires him to do.—Bookkeeper.

FORGOT HIS OWN LINES.

A Quotation That the Poet Campbell Failed to Recognize.

That poets, like other folks, sometimes forget their own creations is shown by an incident related by Sir Frederick Pollock. At a dinner where Thomas Campbell and Lord Nugent were present the conversation drifted from the use of Latin words in English to monosyllabic verse. Some one expressed a doubt whether two consecutive lines composed of words of one syllable could be found in our language. Lord Nugent at once quoted:

"By that dread name we wave the sword on high,

Campbell said he did not believe in the lines and asked where they came from. Lord Nugent said, "From your own 'Pleasures of Hope.'" "How do you know that?" asked the poet. "I know it all by heart," replied Nugent. "I'll bet you a guinea you can't repeat it," said Campbell. The bet was taken and Nugent started declaiming. The poet soon got tired and said: "I see you know the poem. Don't go any further." The other insisted upon repeating the whole poem or claiming double stakes, and Campbell paid the extra guinea in order to be spared the recital of the poem which had made him famous—which he had forgotten.

How to Patch a Canoe.

There are several different "homemade" methods by which to repair a crack or leak in a canoe. Perhaps the most permanent is varnish or shellac and silk. Put a little varnish over the crack, place a small silk patch over the varnish, letting it dry, then varnish or shellac over the silk. Two coats will be sufficient. If it is a varnished canoe, use white silk, and the patch can hardly be detected, the silk being transparent. This may be put on both inside and outside if necessary. White lead and varnish mixed well and put in the crack is also a good permanent repair. If on a cruise in the woods and without the necessary articles to make a permanent repair, get a little spruce gum off the trees, heat and add a little grease and put over the crack. The grease has a tendency to keep the gum from getting very hard, and it will not break so easily. The silk and shellac repair is the usual remedy for a puncture in a canvas covered canoe. —Recreation.

The Dogs of Turkey.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing mumbles.

When Youth Wanes.

Old age has many definitions, and middle age more. But you may take it that you are not really an old man so long as you take an interest in your personal appearance. There is not a nurse who does not know the sign of convalescence—when the patient wants to be shaved and put a good appearance in this world. And so long as the man of sixty can take an interest in the latest tie—and tie it—he is preserving his youth.—London Chronicle.

He Had a Reason.

"I notice you are very cautious in what you say about people."

"Yes"

"Why is this?"

"Well, I ain't prominent enough to claim I was misquoted."

VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $21 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

HOW COBALT EXPANDS.

Trenching in the Limits, Development in South Coleman.

Cobalt, Aug. 16.—Circumstances are expanding this camp day by day. The promise of big things in the future is being long drawn out, and the vision of the end is not yet.

Indeed, the vision of the beginning is just appearing, and the person or persons with any amount of imaginative qualities can readily paint a picture in their minds of what will be inveare to come.

With a big four-storey station in the place of the one now standing, and the vast range of hills to be seen dotted thickly with tall stacks of sheet iron and steel construction work, and behind and sandwiched in between this power of industry, a hustling, bustling town that shall stretch for miles up the Haileybury road, is a picture for the sane-minded to gently agree on, and for the smiling optimist to loudly commend.

Of course the pessimist must exist, and there were people in days gone by who sat by calmly and said nothing could expand. They are here with us, but an indulgent population only pokes fun at them.

EVENTS FROM DAY TO DAY

It is the seemingly insufficient events that occur from day to day that go to make up this great expansion process.

It's the man with the pick and shovel, with the brawn in his shoulders, who plugs away day in and day out, while the thinking men, at the "front," dive deep into their pockets for the wherewithal to bank it up.

Nobody knows today what the man in the sun-baked trench, down in the Gillies limit, is going to unearth tomorrow, and who knows that the diamond drill, rattling away underground, is near a pay streak?

And the day after, or some days after, the news leaks out, and these small circumstances are the units that go to make up the big scheme.

GILLIES LIMIT.

That part of the Limit on which work is now being rapidly pushed has shown up in a wonderful way, as is exemplified in the find on the Waldman claim, on the Young and O'Brien and many others.

And now it is rumored that the How Cobalt expands week by week Limit will be thoroly prospected, and the reason of this action on the part of the Government is without a doubt the logical result of the above finds.

It's a simple case of where the optimism of one man has set agog a whole government.

Now the chances are the Gillies Limit will be sold from one end to the other, and this will take place after the sale of the Provincial mine and the 350 acres left over from the last sale.

The Limit is made up of 64,000 acres, and it is truly stupendous to think of the result the opening up of such a large parcel of land will have on this camp, that last year produced 10 per cent of the world's supply of silver, or, to put it in figures, 25,462 tons, and in dividends the satisfactory sum of $3,923,615.

Despite the fact that the Government has not allowed any man to lawfully prospect in the Limit, there are reports that certain finds have been made and covered up— which was inevitable—until the time of sale was announced.

And perhaps it is well for the country that the Government has almost decided to dispose of the property by a sale and on a royalty basis from the pit mouth.

What a grand heritage for a people and what a chance to place this country on the highest standing possible!

INFLUENCE OF COBALT.

There is not a mining journal published which truthfully reflects the workings of the mining world as a whole, from the Orient to the Occident, that does not now reckon with this camp.

The influence of Cobalt is far-reaching. After five years' growth it is a decided menace to Mexico, where silver mining is carried on at a tremendous expense compared to Cobalt.

Another telling blow is the one delivered straight from the shoulder to New Caledonia, which can no longer produce the mineral cobalt, because Cobalt camp has entered into competition with her along Cobalt producing lines.

New Caledonia's output of cobalt ore was considerable until the Canadian market entered the field.

At this date, New Caledonia cannot produce at a profit on account of a restricted market, and the unlimited quantities mined here as a by-product.

FORTUNE INDEFINITE

That a party of level-headed New York capitalists should come quietly into this camp, unheard of, unheralded, and deliberately set about to spend two millions of dollars on a project is a significant fact and good for the unbelieving.

The reference is to the Cobalt Hydraulic Company, who have just about completed a plant that will supply compressed air to the mines.

The plant is situated at Ragged Chutes, eight miles from Cobalt, along the main pipe line, already laid, with pipes that were made expressly in Germany at a cost of $200 a length. When the "loop" is completed there will be thirteen miles of piping, and when South Lorrain develops sufficiently the pipes will go there, and when the Gillies Limit shows up the pipes will go there also altho the main line now runs thru the Limit.

The capitalists behind such a gigantic scheme must have unbounded faith in Cobalt, and this faith was inspired by reports of eminent engineers.

This new proposition will more than double the extent of mining in Cobalt, and will assist the smaller mines to develop, without the expense of installing individual points.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

HIGH PRIESTS OF THEOSOPHY CLOUDS CONSCIOISNESS::

Talks of Reincarnations—Once a Blind Girl in India, She Tells Reporters.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—"Dreams that give warning should be heeded," said Mrs. Anna Besant in the course of an interesting interview at the Congress Hotel yesterday afternoon. The high priestess of theosophy, whose home is in far off India, stopped in Chicago to deliver an address yesterday and a lecture tonight.

"The theory of dreams turns on the view of the consciousness of men," said Mrs. Besant. "Only part of our consciousness comes down to the physical brain. When we dream, if it is a clear unobstructed dream, it can be depended upon as being the action of the full consciousness made possible through a separation from the physical brain.

"I have in mind a miner who dreamed that while he was going down a shaft the chain that was attached to the bucket broke. His wife, on hearing him tell of the dream in the morning, persuaded him not to go to work that day. Sure enough, the chain broke and the bucket, containing another man, fell, resulting in the death of the man.

"There are, however, dreams that cannot be depended upon. Such dreams are those caused by indigestion, and blood disorder. They are not rational, but grotesques. Various personalities and dispositions, also, are differently affected by dreams. The highly impressionable and imaginative person is naturally differently impressed from the calmer disposition."

"The soul that is contained in the body of every person," said Mrs. Besant in the course of an extended explanation of the theory of reincarnation, "has at some earlier time inhabited the body of some other person. A knowledge of these prior personalities may be gained by an introspective study and a development of the memory. We have no spiritual revelations or intimations of such things. It is a matter of memory."

"And do you remember that your soul ever dwelt in the body of any other particular person?"

"Yes; my soul has inhabited hundreds of bodies of both men? Do you know their names?"

"Yes, I know their names and all about them, but I cannot tell who they were because it would be charged that I had boasted a previous existence in the body of some of the celebrated men of the world and I would not be able to prove the train of what I had said."

"Well, who were some of the women, and when did it happen?"

"I remember," answered Mrs. Besant, "that I was once a poor blind girl in India. That was during the reign of Queen Elizabeth in England. After that I was a young woman of no consequence in India. I was an obscure student, and no one paid any attention to me."

That was as far as Mrs. Besant would go on the subject of her previous states of existence. No amount of coaxing would induce her to reveal the names of the great men who had made great, mayhap, by the fact that her soul resided within their bodies.

GLADSTONE ONCE CICERO.

"It is not unusual," she said, "for the soul of a woman to be reincarnated of human beings is confined to human beings, but the sexes may be reversed. Or it may happen that the soul of a woman will always reside in the bodies of women, and the soul of a man always in the bodies of men Gladstone, you know, was one Cicero, and Mahomet was once Zoroaster."

Mrs. Besant said that she was in favor of a restricted suffrage for women. She expressed the belief that both men and women should serve an apprenticeship, as she expressed it, in legislative office.

"Your congressmen," she said, "should be taken from the ranks of your state legislators, and your state legislators from among men who have served the municipality.

AIRSHIPS 4,900 YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Besant said that much of the literature of the ancient Hindus should not be discarded as unauthentic. One book called "The Epoch of the Great War," which took place 3,000 years before Christ, she said, told of airships that had been used in warfare. These ships, she said, were caused to rise in the air, not by making the ship lighter than the air, but by pouring down a liquid, somewhat of the nature of electricity, that that was heavier than the ship and pushing the ship up. Modern science she said, will rediscover the discoveries of the ancient Hindus.

Mrs. Besant took a fling at John D. Rockefeller and his Institute for Scientific Research.

"That school forms the greatest crime Mr. Rockefeller ever committed," said Mrs. Besant. "An institution that is given over to vivisection is criminal. It is the worst possible use Mr. Rockefeller could make of his money."

ISLAND DISAPPEARS.

The Strange Natural or Unatural Actions in Lake Michigan.

Lake Orion, Aug. 16.—One of the deepest mysteries to be found in this part of the State is the island that every summer comes to the surface of Lake Orion over beyond Park Island, and every winter goes back aggin to the depths from whence it arose.

Its periods of appearance and disappearance are nearly regular. It comes to the surface along about the middle of August and goes down again about Feb. 15. What causes it to act thus strangely is a conundrum that none has been able to solve, and the best efforts that have been put forth to keep it with us or compel it to remain in the depths have been alike without results.

On one occasion a number of farmers and teamsters resolved to put the island out of the floating business. In their efforts to do so they hauled many loads of stone and deposited them on it during the early part of the winter, believing that when it went down in February it would go down for good, weighted as it was with the stones. But the following August saw it bob up serenely from below—minus its load of stones.

At another time an effort was made to keep it on the surface and it was chained to the surrounding country with heavy log chains. When its time for departure came it departed—and the log chains departed with it. The log chains were never recovered.

The island is composed of soft mud and rushes, and there are some sceptical souls who attribute its formation and appearance and disappearance to the gathering of vegetation in one spot by the currents of the lake and its subsequent decay.

DAUGHTER'S POLITICS.

So Rich Father Cut Her Off With a Modest Annuity.

London, Aug. 16.—The unusual event of a daughter being disinherited because she embraced Socialistic principles is revealed in a will of Mr. Alfred Richards, of 47 Gordon square and 19 Finsbury circus, auctioneer, who died leaving an estate of the value of $320,000.

Mr. Richards had two daughters, Ethel Mary and Gwendoline Florence To the former he left an annuity of $1,000, while she remained a spinister, and in the event of her marriage a legacy of $2,500, and thenceforth a life interest in a trust fund of $25,000, Subject to these provisions he left the resicue of his property to his wife, with ultimate residue to his children, other than his daughter Gwendoline, in equal shares. He had made by his will the same provision for each of his daughters, but revoked Gwendoline's inheritance by a codicil dated April last, giving as his reasons:—

"Whereas his said daughter Gwendoline had recently joined in the ranks of the Democratic Socialists, with whose principles he was not in accord, he therefore revoked all provision made for her or her husband or issue by his will and in lieu of such provision left to her a life annuity of $520 only."

BED A MAN'S DEATH TRAP.

Falls in Sleep and Head is Tightly Wedged, Killing Him.

Frankfort, Ind., Aug. 15.—Thomas Sims, an aged citizen of this city, met death in a peculiar manner last night. He was found today by neighbors, his head tightly wedged between one of the side rails of his bed and the top of a washstand, where he had evidently fallen in his sleep.

SAYS THIS MEDICINE HAS MYSTIC POWERS.

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust Hearty Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless.—Hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state read what J. W. Jervell, well known in Morristown, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health ailed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, pale and anæmic looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—They possess mystic powers surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am in perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature to the form of vegetable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. TO KISS OR BE KISSED.

Knotty Points of Law Provided for Learned Judges in Vienna.

Vienna, Aug 16.—The Commercial Court in Vienna had yesterday to consider the knotty problem whether the law recognized a distinction between kissing and being kissed.

The question arose out of a suit brought by a bookkeeper named Meyer against his late employers, who had discharged him without notice on the ground that he was in the habit of kissing typewriten girl in the office. The firm urged in defense that this was conduct which seriously disturbed the course of business.

Herr Meyer's counsel did not attempt to justify kissing in office hours as a habit but he brought ungallant witnesses who swore that they had seen some of the scenes complained of, and noticed that it was the girls who began kissing Herr Meyer, though they could not say whether he did or did not respond.

The court accepted this evidence and condemned the firm to the payment of a month's salary, on the ground that a person must be said to have kissed the other who began the kissing, and that a return of kisses on the part of Herr Meyer, even if such were given, which was not proved, would not, under the circumstances, count as kissing in the eye of the law.

DYING, CLEARS RECORD.

Engineer in Wreck Insists on Verification of Sobriety.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 16.—Passengers who were on the Southern train wrecked near Bristol, Va., last evening arrived here tonight, bringing details of the bravery of Engineer Samuel Bush of Knoxville, who died today as a result of his injuries.

Bush was slowly and painfully working his way out of the wreck of his engine, scalded and frightfully bruised, when the few passengers who retained their senses dug into the mass of twisted and burning iron to meet him.

As the passengers began a hunt for whisky to stimulate him and were breaking open suitcases in their search Bush asked for a last look at his old engine, as hopeless a wreck as was its engineer. When they came to him with the liquor he begged them to look after the comfort of the passengers. Told that no passengers had been injured he said:

"That's good. But before I take this whisky I want some of you to smell my breath and testify it need be that I had not been drinking when this happened."

Although, suffering horrible agonies, the brave engineer would not touch the stimulant until four of the men had smelled his breath and promised to bear witness to his sobriety.

"All an engineer has is his record," he said feebly, "and he cannot afford to have anything against that."

Bush had been in the service of the Southern Railway for more than thirty years. He leaves an estate valued at $100,000.

MILLIONAIRE DRAWS NUMBER.

Omaha, Aug. 16.—Born lucky as well as rich, is the way W. P. Stillman figures it out. He is a young man who wears a blue jumper and overalls six days a week in the Union Pacific shops at Omaha learning rail-roading, and is a nephew of James P. Stillman, said to be worth $50,000,000. He has a billion of his own and his father is reputed to be worth ten times this sum.

Three weeks ago young Stillman took his vacation, going West. Last week in returning he registered for a claim on the Flat-head Indian reservation. Tonight he received a telegram announcing that he has drawn a claim and that his number is under 2,000, which will entitle him to a quarter section of land worth at least $8,000.

Asked if he would farm and live on the land for five years, the length of time required, Stillman replied that his job in the shops pays him $50 a month and that he can hardly afford to give it up with winter so close at hand.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY AT NORWOOD---FATHER AND DAUGHTER FOUND DEAD

Little Sarah Willoughby was Shot Through the Heart

The Body of Her Father Found Lying in the Parlor beside Her---Cause of His Death is a Mystery---Little Girl was Shot in the Woodshed and Carried to Parlour

(Special to The Times.)

Norwood, Aug. 17—One of the most shocking and most mysterious crimes in the history of this town or district was discovered late this afternoon by a neighbor's wife of Thomas George Willoughby, a farmer living about two miles out of the town, and as a result Mr. Willoughby and his 8-year-old daughter Sarah, are both dead The little girl was shot through the heart, but the cause of the father's death is a mystery as there are no wounds nor marks nor are there any signs of him having taken poison.

The tragedy was discovered late this afternoon. The son Harry, aged eight, went into the house, and seeing no one around went out again. Then a woman living near by went in and was looking around when she discovered the father and daughter lying on the sofa in the parlor. Willoughby called to her to come in, he was alive then. The woman went in and when she found the little girl dead she rushed out and gave the alarm. When some of the neighbors arrived Willoughby was lying on his back on floor dead.

Medical assistance was at once summoned from Norwood, but the two doctors who arrived could do nothing. Coroner Dr. Grey of Peterborough, was notified, and he came down on the evening train and at once drove out to the scene of the tragedy.

The coroner upon his return to the village stated that it was a most mysterious affair. The little girl was evidently shot in the woodshed, the charge of shot entering her body about the heart and passed through and lodged in the floor of the woodshed. The father and little girl, were the only ones about the place. Mrs. Willoughby with her 6-year-old son and nine months old baby, was in town shopping. It is evident that the father washed the blood stains from the girl while still in the shed and then carried her into the parlor and laid her on the lounge, and wrapped a sheet around her as that was the position of both when the neighbor found them. When life became extinct in him he evidently rolled off the lounge to the floor. A double-barrelled breech loading shot gun was afound in the shed with one barrel empty.

The person who killed the little girl is unknown. There is no reason why the father should have done the deed either. None of the neighbors heard the shot fired, and cannot tell just what time it happened. The cause of the father's death is also a mystery.

Coroner Dr. Grey has ordered an inquest and post mortem to be opened tomorrow at one o'clock in the town hall.

One story circulated is to the effect that Willoughby has been ill and despondently and that he may have become insane and committed the deed himself.

Coroner Dr. Gray returned home from Norwood at an early hour this morning and told a Times' reporter that the shooting of the little Willoughby girl and the death of her father was a deep mystery. Dr. Gray said that it was the saddest affair he has ever witnessed during his whole 34 years as coroner. When he reached the Willoughby home neighbors and friends from far and near were there trying to calm a wife and mother frantic with grief.

Young American Hot on Murderer's Trail

Liverpool, Aug. 17.—There has just landed here a young American from Alabama who has crossed the Atlantic to scour Europe for the man who killed his brother-in-law three years ago. It was mainly through the story of a wandering gypsy that he set out, post haste, on this quest, which brought him first of all to this country this morning.

A dark-eyed alert young southerner, he had only caught the Cunard liner at the other side by the fraction of a minute on the very point of steaming. His name appeared in the list of additional passengers at G. H Janney.

Speaking of his mission of revenge Mr. Janney said: "I am seeking for the man suspected of the murder of my brother-in-law, John D. Spencer, three years ago in Virginia. I am a down-right southerner, from Montgomery, Ala., where I live with my wife and three children. One night in August, 1906, my wife's brother, John D. Spencer, of Danville, Va., was taking care of his brother's home at Martinsville, a typical Virginia village, in the absence of the family.

DEATH STRUGGLE IN BUNGALOW.

"He was the sole occupant of the house, which was a two-storied building, of the kind you call bungalow in this country.

"At dead of night my brother-in-law who was sleeping on the ground floor, was roused by feeling something soft touch his face.

"He thought it was a cat and tried to brush it aside. The next thing he felt was a hand on his head, so he reached up and gripped the hand.

"Then he and his assailant realized that a death struggle was before them.

"John Spencer clung gamely to his attacker and when the latter found he could not shake him off he drew a revolver and shot my brother-in-law in the mouth.

"Though suffering terrible injuries, my brother-in-law managed to get to the window, through which the miscreant had made his escape, and contrived to obtain help to staunch his wound.

"He lived in great pain for about two weeks afterward, and as he was entirely bereft of speech he wrote down an account of all that had happened.

"He was removed to the Johns [illegible] Hospital, Baltimore, but medical skill could not save him, and he died afterward at his home in Danville, leaving a wife and [illegible] beautiful children.

"We left no stone unturned to bring his murderer to justice, but so far have failed. We have spent thousands of dollars in the search.

FORTUNE TELLER'S STORY.

"A reward of $5000 for the murder [illegible] dead or alive. We [illegible] is still offered by Harold Spencer, his younger brother, while the State of Virginia also offers a reward of $500.

"No fewer than twenty men have been arrested in connection with the charge, but they were all able to prove their innocence, and the crime remains unavenged.

"Nearly three years have passed and now comes the strangest part of the story.

"About two months ago a wandering fortune teller—I don't know whether you would call her a clairvoyant or a gypsy—called at my home, and when face to face with my wife described exactly how the crime was committed and what the murderer looked like.

"She was a stranger to the district and had never seen my wife before.

"The most remarkable thing is that her description of the supposed criminal coincides with that of a man whom both my wife and I suspect.

"This man disappeared from the district directly after the crime, and I have good reason to believe that he is in this country or on the continent.

"I am determined to do everything humanly possible to find him.

"If I come up with him there will be something doing quick'" he concluded characteristically.

Medical Association Approves Plans for Isolation Hospital

The city Medical Association have approved of the plans of the architect for the isolation hospital, and have instructed their secretary, Dr. Amys, to write the council to that effect. A largely attended meeting of the association was held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Monday night when the plans were examined at the request of the Property Committee of the council. The committee made this request of the medical men so that the new hospital will be made as complete and modern as possible, and also to get the personal views of all the doctors.

Needless to say every doctor present was in favor of an isolation hospital and were glad that the council had advanced the business this far as the lack of such an hospital has been greatly felt this summer.

Architect Hackwell was present at the meeting also and he went over the plans with the physicians. A few slight changes the physicians recommended, and these the architect took note of and will make in the plans. On the whole, however, the plans were approved.

It was moved that the general plans for the isolation hospital as submitted by the architect to the City Medical Association be approved—Carried.

The following committee was then appointed to confer with the council in the carrying out of the plans—Dr A W. McPherson, medical health officer; Dr J. Malcolm McCullough and Dr. McNully.

Reception of Young Ladies into Sisterhood of St. Joseph

The retreat of the Sisters of St Joseph, which has been held at Mount St. Joseph during the past two weeks, was marked yesterday morning by the beautiful and impressive ceremony of the reception of eight young ladies and the profession of five novices.

The beautiful new chapel at the Mount was filled with the relatives and friends of the novices and postulants who assisted with the greatest reverence at the holy ceremony and listened with marked attention to the touching ceremony delivered by the Rev. Father Naish, S.J.. The ceremony opened with the procession of the eight young ladies robed in bridal attire and carrying bouquets, and followed by the little maids of honor. These came forward to the altar rail and made the request to be allowed to lay aside the vanities of the world, and don the poor habit of the Sisters of St. Joseph. They were followed by the five novices, who had successfully passed the two years of their novitiate here. The mass was celebrated by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor, assisted by Rev. Father McColl of the cathedral, and Rev. Father Scanlon, P. P., of Grafton. In the sanctuary were also Rev. Father Naish, S.J., of Loyola College, Montreal, who preached the retreat; Rev. Father Dowdall, P.P., of Eganville, and Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Father Kelly, and F. C. McFadden of the cathedral. During the mass, and also at the conclusion, the Sisters' Choir rendered several beautiful anthems. The postulants who received the habit were;

Turf Club's Side of the Affair

This matter of the Peterborough Turf Club asking the West Peterborough Agricultural Society for $100, for the use of the track at the DrivingPark, is more complicated than the mere statement of the affair might make it appear to the casual observer.

As stated in The Times containing the report of the last meeting of the society, the fair directors refused to make the payment of the money the Turf Club wants for rental of the track. The directors claim that they are not bound to do so, in view of an agreement made between the society and the Turf Club, that the use of the track be given for the days of the fair to the society, on account of the Turf Club being allowed the use of the society's section of the grounds at their race fixtures. Without expressing an opinion on the merits of either side of the argument, it would perhaps be of interest to publish the Turf Club' view of the matte.

A prominent official of the latter body, stated to The Times yesterday morning that the agreement referred to was made between the society and the old turf club, which existed before the new one was formed. The official said that the understanding was a verbal one at any rate, and was made only to apply to conditions existing at that time. Having every respect for even a verbal contract, he stated that it was not reasonable to expect it to be good for all time under totally different conditions.

Last year there was some friction over paying prize money to Hodgins of Orillia, the owner of Walter G., the horse that was protested. A law suit resulted and the circumstances and facts in connection with the law suit and the protest were so generally reported, and are so well known that it is not necessary to explain them again. To avoid any such occurrence again it is imperative this year that the Agricultural Society should join the National Trotting Association and forward the entries for the speeding events to Secretary Gauthier of the association. He is naturally, by reason of his office, conversant with the racing situation and is in a position to advise the society against blacklisted horses, and thus afford the society a protection and save them from imposition by crooked horsemen. And another advantage of membership with the National Trotting Association is that the owners of such horses referred to above will have more hesitancy in taking part in events under the auspices and jurisdiction of the National Trotting Association than if they were simply conducted by the local society.

The Agricultural Society, it is claimed, were notified at a special meeting that it would be necessary for the society to become members of the National Trotting Association before they would be allowed the use of the track. The track is a National Trotting Association track, and the association thinks it is justified in asking for this, and it is common for fair societies holding speeding events on National Trotting Association tracks, to be members of the association.

The Turf Club has been notified by Secretary Gauthier that in case the Agricultural Society refuses to join the membership list to take out an injunction and take action for trespass. The Turf Club states that an amicable adjustment and understanding would be the most preferable thing from its standpoint.

The above information is given in order that both sides of the case might be presented to the public as nearly as can be learned from the information supplied, and not with the idea that any discussion of letter writing campaign should be instituted by either of the bodies interested. Space will be given by The Times, however, for further explanation by either parties.

Fierce Beer War in London Saloons

London, Aug. 17. — Remarkable scenes have taken place in a poor quarter of the east-end of London in consequence of the rivalry of liquor sellers. A beer war is being waged between the "tied houses and the "free" houses owing to the refusal of the latter to agree to the demand of the brewers to raise theprice of beer.

The "tied" houses are owned by and under the control of the brewers, while a "free" house is the property of a private individual. Owing to the extra tax on beer and the increased license duties specified in the budget proposals, the "tied" publicans at the instance of the brewers, decided to raise the price of beer from eight cents to ten cents a quart. The "free" houses refused to follow suit, and retained their old price of eight cents.

In spite of boycottings and rebuffs on the part of certain brewers to supply orders, the "free" house tenants obtained their beer supply from the private brewers, whose interests are not only identical with those of the big brewing companies, but in many respects directly opposed to them. The next move on the part of the brewers was to order their "tied" tenants to come down four cents a quart in the hope of cutting out the free tenants. The result is peculiar and suggestive The district is invaded by thirsty men and women from all the neighboring boroughs, drawn together by the possibility of having a cheap drink.

The tenants of the "free" houses are determined to stand firm and fight to a finish. Meanwhile the "tied" house tenant, by selling his beer at six cents a quart, is losing 24 cents on a barrel, but the brewers, it is said, have agreedto make the loss good, while the fight lasts. Popular sentiment seems entirely with the "free" houses.

New lines of dolls, games, toys of every discription, just opened up, and at very low prices. You can make your child very happy for the small sum of 5, 10 or 25 cents. by buying at Times Bookstore, Hunter street.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

Hamilton Crook in Grip of Law

Hamilton, Aug. 17.—The police of Brantford, made an important capture on Friday, when they arrested David Irvine, a Hamilton man on a charge of vagrancy. Irvine is one of the most desperate and notorious criminals in the country, and at the present time is wantec here on a charge of assault and attempted highway robbery. He is believed to be the man who, with Mark Tompkins, now serving a ten years' sentence in Kingston Penitentiary for the offence, held up Fred Porteous one Saturday night, as he was entering his home on Bay street, and attempted to relieve him of his bank roll. Porteous was struck over the head with a piece of scantling and a billy, but was not rendered unconscious, and succeeded in getting away from his assailants and giving an alarm. The two men ran away, but Porteous followed one of them, and succeeded in catching him, who proved to be Mark Tompkins, and who has since pleaded guilty to the charge and sentenced to ten years in Kingston. At the time the police suspected Irvine of being the second man, and started out on a still hunt for him. He got out of the city, however, and not until Friday did the authorities get any trace of him. Friday afternoon the Brantford police arrested two men on a charge of vagrancy. At the time they had no idea that one of them was Irvine, the prisoner having given an assumed name, but he was later identified by Chief Slemin, who notified the Hamilton police. Mr. Porteous went to Brantford the same night, and identified the prisoner as one of his assailants, and as soon as the Brantford police get throught with him he will be brought back to Hamilton to stand trial. Irvine has an unenviable record. He is about 48 years of age, and the local police records show that he has spent nearly thirty years in jail. He was first sent down in 1874, when he was but a mere boy on a charge of larceny, and since that time he has no sooner got out of one trouble than he gets into another. After serving a number of short terms, ranging from ten days to two years, he was in 1880 convicted of burglary and sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary. Shortly after finishing that term, he, with a man named Smith, who got out of Kingston at the same time as Irvine, committed a daring day light robbery. Breaking the plate glass window in Taylor's jewelry store, King street west, the grabbed what jewelry they could reach and made off with it. A few days later they were captured, and Irvine got another five years' term. The local police heard nothing of him until 1894, and between that year and 1898 he was frequently convicted and sentenced to short terms of imprisonment for assaults, petty thefts and vagrancy. Early in 1898 he, with a man named Thompson, committed a daring burglary at Elora, breaking into the G.T.R. station and blowing ouen the safe. They also robbed the post office. Both men were captured by the Hamilton police, and were taken to Guelph for trial, and Irvine was sentenced to fourteen years. He was liberated only a couple of months ago, a couple of years being knocked off his sentence for good conduct, and at once returned to Hamilton. Tompkins, after his release a couple of years ago he having served twelve years for assault and highway robbery, got married, and, as far as the police know, lived a respectable life until Irvine appeared on the scene. The two men are known to have associated together since Irvine returned to the city, and it was for that reason that suspicion rested on Irvine when Tompkins was arrested. Irvine home is in Hamilton, and he is looked upon as a dangerous character. Nearly every time he hasis Nearly every time that he has been arrested he has been well armed. When arrested for the Elora affair he had two revolvers, a bottle of nitro-glycerine, and a burglar's kit in his possession, and when arrested in Brantford on Friday he had a loaded revolver in his hip pocket ready for business. In view of the serious charge hanging over his head there, it is likely the Brantford police will hand him over to the local authorities without delay.

Strange Stories in Connection with Shooting Tragedy Near Simcoe

Did Any Person Fear What Hall Might Tell? He is Said to Have Information Concerning Ugly Rumors

Simcoe, Aug. 17.—A weakness for firearms and the smell of gunpowder seems to have run in the family of Emerson Shelley, the 15-year-old boy who is held on a charge of shooting Michael C. Hall, the 80 year-old blind man near Walsh.

Young Shelley's mother, who since her husband's death married a Simcoe citizen, was up in court some years ago charged with shooting her husband in the leg with a revolver, it was said to be the result of a quarrel, but the court did not take the evidence as conclusive proof of her guilt and allowed her to go. Shelley's father had the reputation of being hot-headed but was well liked here.

Many theories as to the cause of the action are floating about. An opinion often heard from those who are familiar with the circumstances is that Sheeley did not commit the crime at all, but that residents of the township who feared Hall's evidence in charges soon to be brought against them were not altogether ignorant of the perpetrator of the deed. The township has recently been stirred by ugly stories implicating more than one of Hall's friends. It is claimed by many that Hall's knowledge of the circumstances in several of these charges, which looked as though they might come into a court of law, made him feared by many. This is, however, only in its rumor stage, the Crown authorities refraining from discussing their view of the case.

LOVED ADVENURES.

What counts against Shelley is the several eagerness of residents in and about Simcoe to recount dare-devil adventures to the lad, in several of which it is claimed the lives of farmers and their families were endangered. One story states that he was several times apprehended while standing on overhead road bridges dropping obstacles on trains as they passed beneath. That he spent nearly all spare time with his rifle wandering about the country shooting at anything and everything that would give him an excuse is another allegation.

Jesse James exploits seemed to be his pattern and the more trouble he escaped per him into the more he gloried in them, and tried to excel them by something more spectacular and bolder. Since the boy's arrest, several have come forward with the statements that Shelley in his quixotic adventures had fired directly at them, apparently with a desire to inflict injury. He has been seen all over the county and is looked upon as a youth who has been left pretty much to his own designs.

NO DIRECT PROOF

There is so far no direct proof that Shelley committed the deed. Mrs. Hall, who was apparently the only person near the scene besides her husband, I was able to identify anyone as the slayer. Her only definite knowledge seems to be that the shots came from about a hundred feet away, and in the darkness she could see nothing. Shelley still stoutly protests his innocence, claiming that he was not near the Hall home on the day or evening of the fatality. The story that Sheeley had been heard to make threats against Hall recently, and that the old man and boy were on bad terms, is not backed up by anything substantial so far. Upon this point the evidence of Mrs. Hall will count heavily. At post mortem was held yesterday by Coroner Nicholson when it was found that the bullet pierced the back bone of the head, and caused death by not by penetrating the brain but by breakpenetrating the brain but by breaking a blood vessel. The body of Mr Hall will likely be buried today.

Infant Mortality in Toronto and Montreal

Toronto, Aug. 17.—Sadness came into many Toronto homes, when the sultry sunshiny weather of the first two weeks of August was holding away. Many a baby departed. The infant mortality records at the city Hall show that the death of 101 babies occurred in August from the 1st to the 15th. The hot Saturday and Sunday of the 7th and 8th were fatal to many little ones who were ill and not strong enough to survive the weather.

The number of baby deaths record ed here in 15 days is 101 Nearly all were children under one year of age and none over two years.

The death toll, among the aged people was also heavy during the hot spell.

The death occurred of 148 children under five years of age at Montreal last week, 53 of whom were less than six months old. The causes attributed mainly to poor milk, bad water and unsanitary surroundings.

Jail Car is Latest, on Harvesters' Train

Montreal, Aug. 17.—A message was received at the head office of the C. P. R. this morning stating that the first of the harvesters' excursions from the East has arrived in Winnipeg, bringing four thousand harvest hands. There was an agreeable absence of the disorderly disturbances that marked the course of these excursions through Ontario on previous occasions. This was owing to a new arrangement. The rear car on the train being occupied by special service officers, and was used as a temporary jail. All disturbers of the peace were promptly arrested, handcuffed, and placed in the temporary cells. After half a dozen were in the cells it served as a warning to the others.

Art My Career, Says Evelyn Thaw

New York, Aug. 16.—Evelyn has said it's art and scripture for Mrs. Thaw hereafter. She looked herself up when she heard that Harry was go back to Matteawan, in the hope, perhaps that her attitude, her—ah—modesty, would have something dramatic in it. For Evelyn loves to be theatrical.

A reporter climbed the three flights of stairs to the studio flat of Mrs. Thaw at 31 West Thirty-third street at 9 a.m., and began to knock on the studio door. The reporter knocked at regular intervals of ten seconds for an hour and five minutes, when the pretty but tired face of opening. Her hair had been hastily the wife of Thaw appeared in the done up, and, as the door was opened a few inches, the caller could not fail to notice that the wife of White's slayer was dressed in a morning gown of lavender silk.

ADJUSTED HER HAIR

"Mrs. Thaw," said the caller, "I have come to inform you that Justice Mills has handed down his decision."

With this announcement the door was opened wide, and the wife of the prisoner sustained, as her face beamed with expectancy;

"Oh, has he let Be come? What is his"

Thaw that the Justice had sent her husband back to Matteawan, the wife was asked if she would not tell what she thought about it.

"Well," she replied, as she adjusted an obstinate strand of hair. "I really don't know just what to say." Then after a moment's thought, she added;

"Yes, I will say this; I think that under the circumstances a man, who will take the advice of his counsel to wilfully neglect his wife, is radically wrong. It means years of litigation to the advantage of Mr. Morschauser."

ART, FORSOOTH

"Now, Mrs. Thaw," said the caller "perhaps you may now want to say something about the report that you may begin divorce proceedings."

"I positively decline to make any statement on that matter," she replied.

"I shall have to first consult my attorney."

"What will be your plans now?" queried the reporter.

Mrs. Thaw drew her hands across her large, tired eyes, and then replied languidly;

"Oh, I guess my plans are fixed. I shall devote myself to the study of art and sculpture. That seems to be my future. It's the only course left open to me as the stage seems to be out of the question. I shall devote myself to my sculpture work. I am getting on fairly well, and hope sometime to make something out of it."

PREPARE FOR LUMBAGO

If You Have "Nerviline" Handy One Rubbing Will Cure the Pain.

THOUSANDS USE "NERVILINE."

The "strike" of lumbago is like a bolt of lightning—you never know when it is coming or where it is going to strike. Probably the one certain thing about lumbago is the fact that it can be cured by Nerviline—the only liniment that penetrates deeply enough to reach the congested chords and muscles.

LETTER No. 4875. "Years ago I strained my back and suffered considerably with weakness over the spine," writes Darius P. Millan, a well known farmer, residing near Kingsville. "Then lumbago attacked the weak spot, and for days at a time I would have to lie up in bed, unable to move or turn. Liniments, poultices and hot applications failed to bring the desired relief, and I was in despair of ever getting really well again. I at last decided to test "Nerviline". I got five bottles from the drug store and had it rubbed on three times a day. The stiffness and pain left my back quickly, and by continuing Nerviline I was completely cured of Lumbago."

This is similar testimony to that of nearly five thousand Canadians who have written unstinted words of praise to the manufacturers of Nerviline. For the cure of lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia and rheumatism there is no liniment with one-fifth the pain relieving power of nerviline.

Refuse any substitute. Large 25c bottles of Nerviline, or five for $1.00 at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 2

THE CRIMINAL INSANE

No fair-minded person can read the opinion of Justice Mills in the Thaw case without admiring its strength, its reasonableness, its lucidity and its impartially. The question whether Thaw is now insane is, of course, a question of fact, and unfortunately the evils of our "system" of expert testimony make it as hard as possible to penetrate to the facts of any case as complicated and obscure as that of the notorious Matteawan patient. But if all judges were as careful, as judicial, as able as Justice Mills society would have little reason to complain of the results of abuses of the habeas corpus writ by the families and friends of the criminal insane.

That the writ has been flagrantly abused in this dangerous class of cases admits of no doubt. In his last annual report the superintendent of the Matteawan Hospital gave the history of forty-three such New York cases, and a disquieting, extraordinary record it was. In thirty-four instances the courts released inmates who has been convicted of crime but adjudged insane. Of the number fourteen found thir way back to prison or asylum, eight showed or asylum eight showed signs of serious mental disturbance, six soon disappeared from view, two committed suicide and one was to some extent self-sustaining.

It seems that of late resort to the writ of habeas corpus the writ of habeas corpus has been more than ordinarily frequent in New York in behalf of the criminal insane, and very likely the success of so many "relators" in securing discharge through verdicts of judges and juries impressed with their apparent sanity during the trial is responsible for the abuse of the writ. Legislation restricting the scope and frequency of habeas corpus proceedings in this direction has been earnestly advocated by some lawyers and laymen, but there is a strong and deep aversion to any "tampering with the ancient writ" that has so well served, under other conditions, the cause of personal and civil liberty as against tyranical rulers and official usurpers.

A golden mean between license and undue restriction should, however, be devised and provided for by statute. There is grave possibility of scandal peril and disgrace in a system which enables possessors of long purses to run from judge to judge, obtain writ with or without plausible ground, in the hope of finding a weak magistrate or a sentimental, susceptible, easily misled jury. The criminal insane have rights under the law, but so has society, and so have its members who are neither insane nor criminal.

SHOULD UTILIZE SLANG

A magazine editor comments regretfully on our failure to utilize slang, which he describes as an "overlooked conversational asset." He points out, as other have done before him, that the tendency of speech is toward formality and stiffness, and that language is enriched by the lower, busy, uneducated world that cares nothing about precision and much for raciness, picturesqueness, brevity, force in expression. He notes, not without surprise, that much of our slang is derived from "elegant and more genuinely literary than its creators or coiners are ever likely to suspect. In short, he thinks that slang is a joy and a perpetual, fresh stream whence language, spoken or written, derives vitality, color and beauty.

Significantly enough, however, nearly all the illustrations given by the editor in his article in praise of slang militate against his view. Not one of the expressions he rejoices in is now current; they have completely passed out of circulation; they are "bee-beens" and "back numbers." Language, clearly, is not "enriched" by phrases and idioms, turns and terms dropped as they are caught up and that are caught up and given vogue. Frequently slang makes for poverty of expression and for overworked phrase of the ordinary and correct kind.

The truth, of course, is that there is slang and slang. The old-fashioned purists have long since surrendered to the liberal and rational school, which cheerfully welcomes the co-operation of the "lower, uneducated world" in fashioning and quickening language. Few novelists, essayists and orators now taboo slang; the asset, in g word, is not overlooked by anybody. But astonishingly little slang survives as a matter of fact and gets itself incorporated into language. Thus the very test to which the appeal is made—popular usage—condemns nine-tenths or more of the slang that we busily manufacture, and we therefore need other means of preventing stagnation and decline of language.

Fortunately, science, art, international intercourse, interaction of various tongues, the advance of civilization by means of conflict, experience, contrast and reflection provide such means continually and without conscious effort. Where the life is rich and full, where thought is active, language will be strong and fresh and colorful. Progressive peoples have progressive, evolving tongues, and the dead or dying languages are languages in which no emotions, moods, impulses, ideas are pressing for expression.

A Heavy Cost to the Thaw Family

New York, August 17.—The grand total sum which court proceedings have cost the Thaw family since the killing of Stanford White on June 2, 1906, is estimated at $400,000. The chronology of Harry Thaw's life and the chief items involved in the cost of fighting his case in the courts, are as follows:

Born 1871, son of William Thaw, of Pittsburg. Forced out of Harvard in 1891 for high stakes at poker.

Spent from 1891 to 1901 touring Europe.

Met Evelyn Nesbit in 1901, when she was a chorus girl.

Entertained chorus girls lavishly from 1901 to 1906, spending as much as $50,000 on a single dinner, it was reported

Married Evelyn Nesbit in 1905 against his mother's wishes. His father had died meanwhile, practically disinheriting him, but his mother so arranged things that Harry got an equal share with the rest in the form of a trust fund income of $66,000 a year.

Started an active campaign against Stanford White in 1905, spending thousands of dollars on detectives, etc.

Killed Stanford White on the Madison Square Roof on June 25, 1900, at the opening of "Mam'selle Champagne," in full view of hundreds of persons.

Tried for muder from February to April, 1907, the jury disagreeing, at a cost in counsel and incidentals estimated at more than $200,000.

Tried again for murder in January 1908, the jury acquitting him on the ground of insanity. Estimated cost of counsel, etc., $150,000.

Committed to Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane on February 1, 1908 by Justice Dowling.

Commitment confirmed by Justice Morschauser at Poughkeepsie in October, 1908. Estimated cost of that proceeding $65,000.

Commitment confirmed again by Justice Mills on Thursday, after a month's hearing, in which 127 witnesses were examined or their testimony read. Estimated cost of this last proceeding, $50,000.

Incidental expenses of Thaw's confinement, luxuries while in the Tombs, and so on, about $15,000.

Money alleged to have been paid out by Clifford W. Hartridge, as counsel for Thaw, to keep some people quiet, $125,000.

Expenses of Thaw's mother in proceedings, estimated $150,000.

Evelyn Nesbit's cost, estimated since the murder, $30,000.

Incidentals in the way of detectives etc., $15,000.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—A metal box containing the incinerated body of Mrs. Rosa Payton, was sunk in Lake Michigan yesterday from the deck of an excursion steamer while throng of passengers looked on with bare heads. Twenty-nine years ago the husband of Mrs. Payton was lost, with scores of victims, in the wreck of the steamer Alpena, and it was the wish of his widow that her body be cremated and the ashes thrown in mid-lake near the place of the wreck.

Tell Some Sick One

It Is Free If It Fails.

Will you do an act of Humanity?

Will you tell some sick friend of this, my remarkable offer?

Tell him, or her, that you have learned of a medicine so certain that its maker dare say to the sick, "If it absolutely and unconditionally fail it is free."

And you, no doubt, already know of Dr. Shoop's Restorative and its remarkable.

For 20 years it has been the standard remedy for Stomach, Kidney and Heart ailments everywhere in America.

When the "inside" or controlling nerves of these vital organs begin to fail, it is Dr. Shoop's Restorative that has quickly vitalized, and strengthened, and brought these nerves and organs back to health again.

I do not dose the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys—for that is all wrong.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes direct to the cause of these ailments—the failing, disturbed, feeble or enfeebling nerves. And herein lies the keynote to my success.

When these nerves are again made well and strong, then that is the certain end of all such ailments.

To me it is a great satisfaction that I am the only physician able to say to the suffering sick, "Take my prescription for full 30 days, and if it fails to help you, the entire expense is mine—not yours."

Then why should the sick take any chances on any other medicine, when maker dare not book it just as I do by this remarkable offer?

Take home a Restorative Remedy—and you promptly to approved by the same identical health, no pay" protective plan.

Besides, you are free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the benefit below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is ready to your absolute command.

So let me send you an order on some. Take the message to some sick friend.

I feel sure I will have the opportunity.

I will have an honest and trustworthy girl to whom you can conveniently go for the 6 day's use.

Then first, ask me for the order, for all these are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So write me now and save all further misunderstanding. Address me personally.

THE STAGE IN JAPAN.

There is a legend in Japan that the theater had its origin in that country in the ninth century by reason of an earthquake which took place in the province of Yamato. A large crevice was formed by reason of the upheaval, from which emanated poisonous vapors which spread death and destruction all around. An awful scourge was the result until the priests conceived the idea of performing a symbolic dance of incantation on the grass covered hill outside the temple. As if by magic the death vapors vanished, and peace and happiness were restored to the country. The legend concludes that this is how Japanese acting originated. The Japanese word for theater, shibai-ya, is supposed to have come from its origin, shibai, meaning sod, and ya, a house.

In Japan when a Japanese lady intends to go to the theater she is called upon the day previous by a hairdresser to build up the artificial structure which is the pride of every Japanese highborn lady. This necessitates her spending the night in her state dress, reclining her head on a wooden block, called makura. A few hours before going to the theater she covers her lips with a thin layer of gold, as it takes several hours for this paint to change into the cherry color which lends charm to the artificial white complexion of the face.

As a rule, Japanese performances last from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m., although certain historical dramas which follow the life of the hero through all his vicissitudes to his death go on for several days.

In Japan, officially, the social position of the actors is that of the lowest class of society, but in reality they enjoy great consideration and are idolized by the general public.

HUGO AS AN ARTIST.

The Great French Writer's Opinion of His Own Drawings.

When Victor Hugo's "Marion Delorme" was read before the troupe of the Porte-Saint-Martin theater, the actor Laferriere, then a young man, protested against the insignificant role assigned him, in which he would have only ten lines to recite. Hugo promptly reduced him to silence by thundering, "Ten lines of Victor Hugo are something not to be refused—for they endure." Hugo attached a similar exaggerated significance to everything he did and to every object that was in any way associated with him.

For instance, he considered his drawings, which were for the most part commonplace enough, of sufficient importance to make them the subject of a testamentary provision. In his will of Aug. 31, 1881, he wrote, "I give my drawings and everything which shall be drawn by me to the National Library of Paris, which will be one day the Library of the United States of Europe."

Hugo's drawings are said to have been produced more often than not in the following manner: If a blot of ink chanced to fall on his paper while he held his pen aloft in quest of a word or rhyme, he enlarged the spot absentmindedly and made additions to it instinctively under the influence of a species of subconscious direction until he had produced a sinister moonlight scene or a "venerable bourg dominating with its bristling ruins the shuddering waters of a river of legend." He elaborated with great care, however, during his irksome exile at Guernsey certain crude impressions he had transferred to his sketchbook during his journeys in the valley of the Rhine. Furthermore, being a great lover of children, he drew figures of the most extravagant sort for the amusement of the young people of his household.—Alvan L. Sanborn in Bookman.

Ending a Letter.

The simplicity of "Yours" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His best is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and clearness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant," or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest perorations of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter today.—London Tatler.

A Division of Labor.

Witness—One day I had some shrimps to sell, and I asked the plaintiff to help me. He said, "I can't push the barrow because my arm is bad, but if you like I'll come along with you and holler."

Counsel—Why was that?

Witness—Well, it's like this, sir. A man can often shout when he can't shove.—London News.

Unreasonable.

"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"

"Your dog barks a good deal. Can't you do anything to stop him?"

"Confound it, such unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"

The Result the Same.

"Gimme some of that prune pie."

"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."

"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache."

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside troubles depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

THE STAGE IN JAPAN.

Origin of the Drama—Women's Arduous Preparations of Dress.

There is a legend in Japan that the theater had its origin in that country in the ninth century by reason of an earthquake which took place in the province of Yamato. A large crevice was formed by reason of the upheaval, from which emanated poisonous vapors which spread death and destruction all around. An awful scourge was the result until the priests conceived the idea of performing a symbolic dance of incantation on the grass covered hill outside the temple. As if by magic the death vapors vanished, and peace and happiness were restored to the country. The legend concludes that this is how Japanese acting originated. The Japanese word for theater, shibai-ya, is supposed to have come from its origin, shibai, meaning sod, and ya, a house.

In Japan when a Japanese lady intends to go to the theater she is called upon the day previous by a hairdresser to build up the artificial structure which is the pride of every Japanese highborn lady. This necessitates her spending the night in her state dress, reclining her head on a wooden block, called makura. A few hours before going to the theater she covers her lips with a thin layer of gold, as it takes several hours for this paint to change into the cherry color which lends charm to the artificial white complexion of the face.

As a rule, Japanese performances last from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m., although certain historical dramas which follow the life of the hero through all his vicissitudes to his death go on for several days.

In Japan, officially, the social position of the actors is that of the lowest class of society, but in reality they enjoy great consideration and are idolized by the general public.

HUGO AS AN ARTIST.

When Victor Hugo's "Marion Delorme" was read before the troupe of the Porte-Saint-Martin theater, the actor Laferriere, then a young man, protested against the insignificant role assigned him, in which he would have only ten lines to recite. Hugo promptly reduced him to silence by thundering, "Ten lines of Victor Hugo are something not to be refused—for they endure." Hugo attached a similar exaggerated significance to everything he did and to every object that was in any way associated with him.

For instance, he considered his drawings, which were for the most part commonplace enough, of sufficient importance to make them the subject of a testamentary provision. In his will of Aug. 31, 1881, he wrote, "I give my drawings and everything which shall be drawn by me to the National Library of Paris, which will be one day the Library of the United States of Europe."

Hugo's drawings are said to have been produced more often than not in the following manner: If a blot of ink chanced to fall on his paper while he held his pen aloft in quest of a word or rhyme, he enlarged the spot absentmindedly and made additions to it instinctively under the influence of a species of subconscious direction until he had produced a sinister moonlight scene or a "venerable bourg dominating with its bristling ruins the shuddering waters of a river of legend." He elaborated with great care, however, during his irksome exile at Guernsey certain crude impressions he had transferred to his sketchbook during his journeys in the valley of the Rhine. Furthermore, being a great lover of children, he drew figures of the most extravagant sort for the amusement of the young people of his household.—Alvan L. Sanborn in Bookman.

Ending a Letter.

The simplicity of "Yours" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His best is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and dearness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant," or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest perorations of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter today.—London Tatler.

A Division of Labor.

Witness—One day I had some shrimps to sell, and I asked the plaintiff to help me. He said, "I can't push the barrow because my arm is bad, but if you like I'll come along with you and holler."

Counsel—Why was that?

Witness—Well, it's like this, sir. A man can often shout when he can't shove.—London News.

Unreasonable.

"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"

"Your dog barks a good deal. Can't you do anything to stop him?"

"Confound it, such unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"

The Result the Same.

"Gimme some of that prune pie."

"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."

"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache."

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly shaken by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The pale, sickly look will supply before. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Quickly, the Restorative drives out the "inside poisons" from the stomach. Heart, and kidneys will usually fall. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

SUPERSTITIONS.

They Play at Times an Important Role in Human Affairs.

When Sir Charles Napier had conquered Mehemet Ali, he found it impossible to force or coax the wily Egyptian into signing the treaty which only would make his victory effective. He had nineteen interviews with Mehemet, in which the Englishman by turns argued, flattered and threatened his antagonist, who listened day after day with the same immovable, smiling countenance.

One day Sir Charles in speaking of England said casually that it "was governed by a lucky woman." A shrewd flash passed over the pasha's countenance, but he made no answer. As soon as Napier had gone Mehemet sent for the English consul, who was an Egyptian, and demanded:

"You were in London when the English queen was crowned. Were the omens bad or good?"

"All good."

"You think that good luck is written on her forehead?"

"I did not think upon the matter before, but now that you ask me I believe that it is. When she asked Allah to help her in her work, her eyes ran over. Allah loves the innocent."

"No doubt of that," said Mehemet anxiously. "She must be lucky."

Early the next morning he sent for Sir Charles and signed the treaty. English power and English cannon he could brave, but not "the luck" written upon the forehead of a good woman whom he had never seen.

General Gordon's remarkable influence over the Chinese was in a large degree due, it is stated, to their belief in his extraordinary luck. During the Taiping rebellion he was followed by an army which did not comprehend either his ability or his religious zeal but which believed that he was protected by an invisible being who led them to victory. No sword could wound him or bullet kill. A certain black ebony cane which he carried was supposed to be the magic talisman which brought him victory, and General Gordon was shrewd enough always to carry this cane when he led them into battle.

These superstitions seem absurd to us, but they show that the ignorant men who hold them believe in an invisible power who can give good or ill fortune at his will.—London Truth.

MAN EATING TIGERS.

The Killing Methods of These Terrible Brutes in India.

The theory that a man eating tiger is always an old tiger, more or less toothless and feeble, which has found the strain of catching vigorous wild game too much for its failing strength, has been upset by the bagging of notorious man eaters which were found to be young animals in the full pride of their powers. And it is likely that the taste for human flesh is passed on from mother to child, the tigress, herself a man eater, teaching her cubs to hunt as she hunts. How terrible a thing a man eater may be can be judged from the fact that a tiger generally kills every second night, whether its quarry be man or beast. Having killed, it makes one meal that night, then drags the carcass somewhere into cover and more or less conceals it as a dog may hide a bone. On the next night its habit is to return to the same kill, and it is in that second visit that the hunter usually finds his opportunity. It is not the rule for a tiger to return again a third time, not because it is above eating carrion, but seemingly it tires of the carcass, which it has already twice mumbled over.

Thus one tiger in India has been known to kill regularly its fifteen natives a month with almost mechanical punctuality. Another, which seemingly did not confine itself entirely to human flesh, devoured an average of eighty people, men and women, for several years, while yet another is reported to have killed 127 people and to have stopped traffic on a public road for many weeks. There have been both Englishsportsmen and native shikaris who have accounted for their hundred tigers and upward, but many a tiger has killed more human beings than any man has ever scored tigers.—London Times.

A Reasonable Request.

"Arabella," said old Billyuns as he finished his dinner, "I am going to ask you to do me a favor. I want you to give your young man—Mr.—Mr. Whatshisname—a message from me."

Arabella blushed and looked down at her plate.

"Tell him," the kind old millionaire went on, "that I don't object to his staying here and running up my gas bills, but that I do object to his carrying the morning paper away with him when he leaves."

Force of Habit.

"I'm surprised that you should be so interested in watching those silly dudes."

"Force of habit, I guess. I'm president of a real estate improvement company."

"Well?"

"Well, they're a vacant lot."

Lost and Found.

"Found a dollar yesterday."

"Lucky boy!"

"Not so lucky. In stooping to pick it up I dropped and broke my eyeglasses."

The Physicians of Dyspepsia have been thoroughly routed by the Mandrake Pill. When these "Prickly nerves" of the stomach, liver and bowels are regulated, digestion and strength follow, surely, result. For this purpose they are unequalled. First, these pills "do away with" the stomach. Blood and Nerves derive nourishment from the food digested. Then you have perfect health. Don't let the Blues, or Dyspepsia get the better of you. That is wrong. Strengthen your failing nerves with Dr. Sheep's Nervedine. It is the nerves, not the stomach that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting this Restorative treatment you will notice the gain. A test will cost only 25 cents. Sold by all dealers.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to succeed, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

ANNE'S GREAT DISCOVERY.

A Call That Made Her Sure About Her Own Heart.

By EMILY HODGES.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

"You're very foolish and very headstrong, Maisie, and you're going to be sorry some day," Anne said severely.

She was sitting before the glass, putting cold cream on her face, and Maisie was watching her from the bed.

It was to pretty Maisie a very funny performance—Anne's nightly comforting of her complexion with cold cream. She wondered if she would do the same when she was thirty-six and unmarried. But she would not be unmarried at thirty-six. Of course not. There was Dick, and she was determined to marry Dick, no matter what Anne or Aunt Hannah said. It was about Dick that Anne was talking now.

"You know as well as I do," Anne went on, "that you are too young even to think of marrying, and, anyway, Dick Launt isn't a person you should consider for one moment." Anne closed the cold cream box, with a sigh. "When you do marry I want you to have some one who is worthy of you."

"Is that the reason you've never married?" Maisie asked innocently.

Anne flushed under the cold cream.

"That was the reason," she returned steadily.

"Haven't you ever been sorry?" Maisie persisted. She wished Anne had not hidden her face by turning out the gas—the voice, Anne's voice, told so little.

"I—I don't know that I have been. Good night, dear." And Maisie had nothing to do but answer obediently, "Good night, Anne."

But long after Maisie was asleep Anne lay awake thinking.

Sixteen years—what a long time that was! She was twenty that summer, just out of school, and she had a pink dress afloat with ruffles. One day when she had been wearing that dress she had met Dwight Marshall. He was a good deal like Dick Launt—big, clear eyed, ready to laugh. Like Dick, too, he was a plain workingman and had come from a long way off to find work in Hassell. It did not take Dwight long to fall in love with the pink dress and her, and it did not take her long to see it. He was her first beau, and straightway the world was made over for her.

But her mother was watch and ward. She had had to make many sacrifices in order to educate Anne, and she was worthy of the best. Mrs. Hall did not by any means consider Dwight Marshall the best, and she was determined that he should not have Anne. She appealed to Anne's pride and reason and after a time had the satisfaction of seeing her arguments prevail. Anne gave up her lover. He was hurt, disappointed, bitterly angry.

"This is your mother's doings," he said.

"No," Anne lied proudly; "it's mine. You aren't good enough for me."

"You'll be sorry for this some day," he returned. And that was his last word to her. She had never seen or heard from him since. She probably never would again. And now here was Maisie in the same boat in which she herself had been. But Maisie's heart would not be broken. Hers had not been. There had been times, indeed, when she was glad that she had not married Dwight. Maisie would come to feel the same way about Dick.

Anne scarcely slept all night.

"That cold cream makes you pale," Maisie said next morning. "What makes you use it, Anne? Are you afraid of wrinkles?" Anne winced, and Maisie went on wickedly. "Mrs. Warne says it doesn't make any difference how a woman looks if she isn't married or doesn't intend to be."

Mrs. Warne was the young matron who lived across the street. Because she and Maisie were very friendly and she was known openly to sympathize with Maisie's love affair Anne and her mother had not called upon her, though she had lived in the town almost a year. Now of a sudden Anne felt almost hatred for the gay little woman who seemed so happy in her married life and obviously had no need of cold cream or any other preparation for her charming face.

Anne was out of sorts all day. Her painting class did badly, her head ached, and she tore her walking skirt by stepping upon it in her hurry to take a car. Tired and utterly forlorn, she was sitting in her room trying to repair the skirt when Maisie came running upstairs and entered panting with her haste.

"Oh, Anne," she gasped, "there's a man in the parlor waiting to see you! I told him you'd be right down."

A man in the parlor to see Anne was almost an unheard of thing. Yet she took three stitches deliberately.

"Aren't you going to fix your hair or—or anything?" Maisie demanded.

"Why should I?" Anne said. "It is only some one to see about lessons probably."

The parlor door was open, and she went in softly. The man was waiting with his expectant face turned toward her. She gave him one glance and turned as white as her linen collar.

"Dwight—Dwight Marshall!" she said. Then she seemed to remember nothing more until she found herself on the sofa, with him close beside her.

"You never expected to see me again, did you?" he demanded. "And I didn't expect you would, but ever since my little cousin, Maud Warne, has lived here she and Dave have been teasing me to come and make them a visit. So I made up my mind I'd come. And here I am. You don't know Maud, do you?"

"No," Anne said feebly, wishing she did.

"Maud told me you hadn't acted very neighborly. You should know Maud. She's one of the best little women that ever lived."

He had been talking rapidly. Now he stopped and drew a long breath.

"Do you remember the last time we saw each other? I was right mad that day. It had never occurred to me that I wasn't the equal of the best girl living—and you were that, too—until you said what you did. So I swore I'd make myself good enough—and make you sorry. But now that I've seen you I only want to make you glad, Anne. You see, I like you just as well as I ever did, though I didn't expect to. And if you like me"—

"Oh, Dwight," Anne sobbed. "It's I who am not good enough! I'm homely and old and soured and—and disagreeable and narrow minded—and you're worthy of some one better."

Maisie had been in bed three hours when Anne came up and woke her with a kiss.

"Why, Anne, you look real pretty," Maisie said, yawning. "But your hair is mussed up awfully."

"Maisie," Anne said solemnly, sitting down upon the edge of the bed and taking hold of Maisie's hand in a most unusual way—"Maisie, I want to tell you something. I've been a fool for years and never found it out until tonight. And I don't mean you shall be the same kind of fool. That man who came tonight was the one I might have married sixteen years ago—and didn't. But I'm going to marry him now.

"And—and, Maisie, I've been talking to mother, and you can have Dick any time you are ready. Dick's all right. He—Dwight knows him; they come from the same place.

"I thought I could forget," Anne went on gently after Maisie's ecstasy of surprise and joy had somewhat subsided, "and I've tried hard for sixteen years, but when you really love there's no forgetting in this world. I've been loving Dwight right straight along, and the minute I saw him tonight I knew it. I've missed a good many years of happiness, and I meant to make you miss a good many years of happiness in the same way. It wasn't because I was wicked, dear, but because I didn't know. I do know now."

Maisie smiled wisely.

"I knew all the while," she said.

Peculiarities of Crime.

One of the strangest peculiarities of human nature is its inclination to imitate the misdeeds of others. Crime is epidemical. A particularly dreadful murder, the details of which are set forth in all the newspapers, often has the effect of inducing similar crimes. One of the reasons and probably the chief reason why public executions were abolished in England was that instead of acting as a deterrent the execution had the contrary effect of inciting to murder.

Some years ago a woman of Geneva, named Lombardi, killed her four children. She admitted that she had been reading of a woman who killed her husband, and the very circumstantial account had made her wish to imitate the crime, but as her husband was dead she killed the children. This is only one instance out of hundreds which have come to our notice.

The infectious nature of self murder receives a striking testimony in the following incident: Dr. Oppenheim, of Hamburg had to examine the body of a man who had cut his throat and had died after some days of suffering. The medico told his assistant that death would have been immediate if the man had made the cut in a way which he illustrated, and he was startled two days later to learn that his assistant had attempted to commit suicide by lacerating himself in that very manner. The man admitted that he had never thought of suicide until the day of the examination and the doctor's remark.—London Globe.

Crawford's Care as a Writer.

Mr. F. Marion Crawford, we are told, once agreed to write for the London Sphere a novel with Dante for its hero. "The Harvest of the Sword" was to have been its title. The letter which he wrote to Mr. C. K. Shorter explaining his failure to fulfill his promise testifies to his conscientious care in authorship:

"I can only say that it is in no sense my fault if I cannot give you the book after all at the time appointed and that if I succeed in writing it you of course have the first claim to it for serial publication if you still wish to use it next year. I have worked at the manuscript unremittingly for months. I began it four times. I have done everything in my power to write it and have done no other work since Aug. 1, and the result is so utterly unsatisfactory that after allowing the first three chapters to be sent to you I decided to cable and throw up the contract. It is the first time I have ever done such a thing, and I am driven to it by the great difficulties of the subject and not by any neglect. I decline to allow a book so imperfect to go before the public, while feeling that by renewed labor I may succeed in the end. That is my whole and only excuse. Make it public in any way you please, together with the great regret I feel at disappointing you."

Literal Aid.

"Do you make your wife do all the carving at dinner?"

"Sure! Isn't it a wife's duty to be a helpmeet?"—Baltimore American.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Kingston, Aug. 13.—Consumption is alleged here as the cause which has led to the patrolling of William Long, the negro sent to the penitentiary for a murderous assault and burglary. Whether he has left the prison is not known, but he has not been seen about for the past few days. His work was lawn mowing in the yard and grounds. While incarcerated he was docile and willing. His health has not been good for some time.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets gently stimulate the liver and bowels to expel poisonous matter, cleanse the system, cure constipation and sick headache. 3

Widows' Caps.

Widows' caps are as old as the days of Julius Cæsar. An edict of Tiberius commanded all widows to wear one under the penalty of a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Shooting Flying Birds.

In Smith's "History of Kerry," published in 1754, is found the statement that the art of shooting flying birds was taught to the Irish people by the French refugees who came over after the revocation of the edict of Nantes and that to this circumstance is due the decline and disappearance of falconry.

Bicycles.

The first bicycle with pedals was made about 1840.

St. Paul's, New York.

The oldest public building in New York is St. Paul's chapel, at the corner of Broadway and Fulton street. It was built in 1766, ten years before the Declaration of Independence.

A Nincompoop.

A nincompoop was originally a person of unsound mind (non compos mentis).

England Is Exclusive.

The Victoria cross has never been awarded to a woman. It is not designed for female decoration. In Germany heroines are decorated with the iron cross and in France with the Legion of Honor.

Land and Water.

There is three times as much sea as land in the world.

Hats Were Once a Luxury.

In the reign of Elizabeth the wearing of hats was considered a sign of luxury. By an act of parliament every person above the age of seven years and under a certain degree was obliged on Sundays and holidays to wear a woolen cap made in England and finished by some of the fraternity of cappers.

Icebergs.

For every cubic foot of an iceberg that is above the surface of the water there are eight cubic feet below.

Personal Taxes in Holland.

There are five kinds of personal taxes levied in Holland, as follows: Government tax, including business and income tax, and capital tax, city income tax and provincial tax.

Haydn's Drum.

The drum which Haydn once played at a festival in 1780 is still preserved in Hamburg.

The Boomerang.

The Australian aborigines are not the only users of the boomerang, nor were they the first to use that missile. The Egyptians knew all about it, just as they seem to have known all about everything else.

The Gravitation Theory.

The theory of gravitation is a discovery attributed to Newton and bears date of 1687 notwithstanding that the same idea was advanced by Kepler seventy years before.

Great Britain's Crown.

The present crown of Great Britain was constructed in 1838 with jewels taken from old crowns and others furnished by command of the queen. It contains 4 large pear shaped pearls, 273 small pearls, 147 table diamonds, 1,273 rose diamonds, 1,363 brilliant diamonds, 5 rubies, 11 emeralds and 17 sapphires.

A Dutch Custom.

A piece of white muslin tied round the bell handle of a house in Holland informs intending visitors that a case of infectious disease is in the dwelling.

The Shape of the Earth.

That the earth is round was not a generally accepted theory in the time of Columbus, though Thales taught and Pythagoras demonstrated the theory several centuries before the Christian era.

South African Winter.

Parepa Rosa's Voice.

At the peace jubilee in Boston, 1869, Mme. Parepa Rosa's voice was distinguishable above 12,000 singers, an orchestra of over 1,000 instruments and in a hall where the audience consisted of 40,000 people.

Uninhabited Islands.

Between Madagascar and the coast of India there are about 16,000 islands, only 600 of which are inhabited, but most of which are capable of supporting population.

Korean Grass.

The Korean grass used in the manufacture of grasscloth is grown very thickly and is usually cut the second or third year after planting the roots. The grass reaches a height of four to five feet and with a proper start and under favorable conditions yields, it is roughly estimated, about 2,000 pounds to an acre.

Mexican Postal Law.

The Mexican postal law does not require the postal department to deliver mail addressed to a city on which the name of the state also does not appear.

A Rough Diamond.

An uncut diamond looks very much like a bit of the best gum arabic.

MEAN MAN.

Great Barrington, Mass. Aug. 15.—Another "meanest man on earth" is the person who stole the clothing of David Faye Whitcomb after he was drowned at Brookside Pond. The dead man's effects were moved from the shore of the lake to the home of Frank Elsner, from where they were taken by a member of a circus troupe. About $250 worth of jewelry was stolen, also, but only a pair of trousers, which were identified, were recovered. The thief escaped.

What Every Woman Requires for Headache Languor

Has your strength given out?
Do you feel languid and tired this spring?

Are you pale, somewhat nervous, finding it hard to do your housework?

Thousands feel just the same. — Some simply feel the enervating influence of latent symptoms of disease and weakness. You should do like Mrs. Flanagan of Essex Junction—here is her experience. "I will never again suffer the torture of deadening spring illness—never will I have headaches, such sleepless nights, such pale cheeks and lack of appetite. I lived through it all several times, but now I know the medicine that cures. I urge every person, young and old, to try the invigorating effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. When I was so played out, listless,— Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me appetite— I relished my meals and grew strong. Rosy color came to my cheeks, every day I felt brighter and better. All my old strength has been restored and the great tonic, blood purifying powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills did it all."

Women who are continually page, blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, aching muscles, bearing down pains, lack of sleep and loss of appetite—they are the poor women that sorely need Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c at all dealers.

The construction of the new Catholic church in the south end is nearing completion, and during the past few weeks the tower has slowly taken form until now the cross is in position. A frame work was erected around the tower, following up its construction, and the men have now reached the highest point and from a distance appear but pigmies to the observer. The progress on the church has been rapid.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Chief Howard Elected Secretary-Treasurer of Provincial Association

(Special to The Times.)

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 18.—Chief Howard of the Peterborough Fire Department, was today elected secretary-treasurer of the Fire Chiefs Provincial Associations with Chief Teneyak as president. The convention is attended by a great crowd of fire chiefs from all over the American continent and business is being rushed through in great shape. The past year has been a most successful one and the future prospects are very bright. The exhibition of fire fighting apparatus is wonderful."

The citizens of Peterborough will be indeed pleased to learn of the distinction Chief Howard has gained among the fire chiefs of America. The position he holds in one which he might well be proud of and the people of his own town will congratulate him upon the honor conferred upon him. Chief Howard is a fire fighter of the first water. He knows his business and his ability in recognised by the other chiefs of fire departments. He and Ald. Butler, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, are representing Peterborough at the Grand Rapids convention and two better men could not be chosen.

Peterboro' Won from Campbellford Nine

Peterborough won from Campbellford in the ninth innings yesterday, when M. O'Brien scored off Giroux's single to short stop. The Campbellford ball nine came in on the excursion yesterday morning and in the afternoon payed at Riverside Park with a team representing the T.A.S. The final score was T.A.S. 7, Campbellford 6. The first four innings were good snappy ball and the crowd, though it was small, was interested. In the first innings Umpire Robinson of Campbellford, got twisted on his job and gave a very bad decision by calling O'Brien out at the home plate after the catcher dropped the ball. This nearly broke up the game. It was only the next innings that the same thing happened again and the runner was called safe. From that on the boys on both teams seemed to lose interest in the game and it lagged.

Mike O'Brien was the heavy hitter for the locals. He got two three bagger and a double, and a single in the ninth. In the fifth Callaghan worked a nice double when he caught M. West's fly to short, and threw to third and got Naylor before he had time to reach the base.

The visitors played a pretty fair game all round. M. West in the box had the locals going on his drops. Had the town boys stuck closer to the game in the final stages they would have pulled out a victory.

The Evidence Taken at Inquest Into the Norwood Tragedy

Inquest Opened Yesterday Afternoon—Nothing New Produced---Belief is That Father Shot the Girl and Died Himself from Shock—Mrs. Willoughby's Grief

The inquest into the death of Thomas George Willoughby and Stella May Willoughby, his 8 year-old daughter, was opened at the Willoughby home, about two miles outside of Norwood yesterday afternoon at one o'clock Coroner Dr. Gray of Peterborough, presided.

The evidence of the members of the family was taken alongside with the two doctors who were first called to the home after the tragedy. Nothing was brought out and the story as contained in yesterday morning's Times was as near correct as possible.

The case is however one of the saddest in the history of the county. The little girl undoubtedly met her death at the hands of her father and as near as can be learned now, died as a result of the shock. The wife is heart broken and is suffering greatly from shock. The first she knew of what had happened she discovered upon entering the parlor where her husband and daughter lay dead. She was prostrate with grief and has since refused to be comforted. She was still in a bad condition when called to give evidence at the inquest. The greatest sympathy is expressed for her in the neighborhood.

THE INQUEST.

The Jurymen selected were:—Robt. Gollober, Wm Andrews, Joseph Mosell, Wm H. Parker, Wilbert H. Bell, Jas Gollober, Ed. Hutbell, Geo. Ross, Wm. McMillan, Hugh McDonald, Andrew McMillan, Wm. D. Robson, foreman; Gordon Ross, James Long.

After the jury was selected they adjourned to view the two bodies.

DR. SUTTON.

Dr. N. F. Sutton was the first witness, and he said that he received the call to Willoughby's at 3.45 o'clock. He was accompanied by Dr Pettigrew, and they found the girl lying on the couch wrapped in a sheet and the man lying on his back on the floor beside the couch, both were dead. He examined the girl's body first. Her clothes had been taken off. He found a wound in the left breast about two inches long and one inch wide, near the heart. It was a ragged wound and appeared to be caused by shot. It extended through the body and out the left shoulder. The heart was touched but no other bruises were found. He found blood stains on the woodshed floor and shot in the wood. The blood on the floor was about 12 feet from the wood pile. He also found a double-barrel shot gun. The right barrel had been discharged. He had no positive opinion as to the child's death. From the position of the shot in the wood and the wound in the child he would say the gun had been fired from a lower position to both. The father was fully dressed. The tongue was bruised as if bitten, and there was blood about the clips. No other injuries were observed. His body was not in a healthy condition. Nothing was found to indicate cause of death. The condition of the arteries would indicate if heart disease caused the death.

DR. PETTIGREW.

Dr. G. A. Pettigrew was next called. He said Willoughby had not been well for some time. He had treated him for stomach trouble. The deceased claimed to have heart trouble although witness had never examined his heart. He gave deceased medicine three or four weeks ago.

DECEASED'S SON.

Harry Garfield Willoughby, the six year old son of the deceased was the next witness. He said he was home on Tuesday afternoon and heard a gun go off. He went to the house and his father and sister were the only ones there. He saw his father first. He was going out to the stable with a cup. When witness first went in his father said; "I shot Stella." The father then put the cup in the stable. The father carried Stella to the parlor and had a sheet wrapped around her when Mrs. Ruttan arrived. The father had been cleaning the gun. Mrs. Ruttan wet her hand with water and rubbed it over Stella's face. The father carried Stella into the parlor and put the sheet over her and then lay down on the sofa beside her and told witness to go and mind the baby. The father never got up again, but told Mrs. Ruttan to send for a doctor. There were drops of medicine in the cup.

THE WIFE AND MOTHER.

Mrs. Willoughby, wife of the deceased, was sworn, and told about her being in Norwood looking for a house. On the way home she saw Mrs. Bice who told her that there was company at the house, and that the little girl had fallen and broken an arm or leg, but she would not tell definitely what happened. Witness then hurried home, where she found a lot of people. They would not tell her what happened. Here the witness broke down and said she did not know. He had a gun and had used it recently, but he did not know it loaded on account of the children. At times he was dispondent and wanted to go to the village to live. She knew of no poison in the house.

Dr. Sutton was authorized to get form the post-mortem and he was given an assistant in Dr. Pettigrew.

This closed the evidence taken at the inquest and it was adjourned by Dr Gray until Thursday, August 26th, in the Norwood village hall at 1 o'clock p.m.

The jury then viewed the scene of the shooting.

Norwood, Aug 18—Tragedy fell with terrible and mysterious suddenness on the home of Thomas G. Willoughby, a mile and a half from here, yesterday afternoon, when Stella Willoughby, eight years of age, was shot through the breast at close range by a gun in her father's hands, and the father died either from shock as a result of the terrible death of his child or from poison self-administered. There is a good deal to support the latter theory and if it proves to be correct, then there might also be added that he shot his little daughter deliberately, the whole killing being the result of a mania resulting from despondency and melancholy.

WIFE'S GREAT AGONY.

Whatever the explanation of the tragic affair, the whole neighborhood has been over-shadowed with gloom at the occurrence. The most intense sympathy is felt for Mrs. Willoughby particularly. Her sorrow is almost more than can be borne. Since the news was broken to her last night, she has been in a semi-hysterical condition moaning continuously. "Oh, my poor husband and baby, my poor husband and baby!" And in the next room they are lying side by side just as they were found. The pitiful form of the little girl on the sofa wrapped in a sheet, the great gaping wound mercifully covered from sight, the father lying on the floor beside the sofa, his hands folded across his breast.

The father, after the little girl was shot, undressed her, washed her wounds and wrapping her in a sheet, placed her on the sofa in the parlor. Then he lay down beside her, and when found was dead, there being no marks of violence to show the cause of his sudden departure from life, and carrying with him the story of the affair, which will probably never be definitely known. The post mortem will of course show whether his death was due to suicide or not. Coroner Gray of Peterborough, made an examination of the body last night, and failed to find any evidence of poison. Drs. Pettigrew and Sutton of Norwood, who were first on the scene, give it as their opinion that death was caused by heart failure due to shock. The point is an important one under the circumstances, as Willoughby had $2,000 insurance, $1,000 with the Equitable Life, and $1,000 with the Canadian Order of Foresters. The inclination here is to discredit the suicide theory as much as possible, and some are even objecting to a post-mortem being held. Dr. Gray has stated that there will be a post mortem and in all probability the inquest, which is being held this afternoon, will be adjourned for that purpose.

BROUGHT STRYCHINE.

The facts give considerable ground for the suicide theory. Willoughby has been having considerable trouble financially in several deals with which he afterwards was dissatisfied. In addition he has been in ill health, and has several times stated that he was feeling very despondent.

"He was over to my place not long ago," said Mr. David Andrews, a neighbor, "and he said he was feeling so despondent and down-hearted that he was afraid he would do harm to himself. I gave him a good talking to, and told him not to speak about such things."

But the most significant incident point to suicide is the fact that two weeks ago he bought some strychnine at a drug store in Norwood, saying he wanted it to kill rats.

Cruisers and Torpedo Boats for Canada

Ottawa, Aug 18.—The announcement in the cables from London as to the plans for the naval defence of the Empire as outlined at the Imperial Defence Conference, does not occasion any surprise in official circles in Ottawa. While there is no one here with power to speak with authority, it can be said that the plan outlined is about what was to have been expected, in view of the semi-official announcements made before the departure of the Canadian representatives at the conference, Sir Frederick Borden and Hon. L. P. Brodeur.

It is expected that Canada will commence the working out of her naval program by the construction of a few first-class cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines, which would prove invaluable in time of war, and to a large extent relieve Great Britain of the necessity of defending Canada's coast. The initial expenditure on an interest basis should not prove to be a great burden.

According to the latest word received here, Hon. L. P. Brodeur will sail for Canada on August 25th. It is likely that shortly after his arrival a definite announcement as to the number of vessels Canada will undertake to lay down in the first few years will be forthcoming.

New York, Aug. 18.—That James K. Hackett and his wife, Mary Mannering, have become reconciled and that Miss Manning, who in private life is Mrs. Hackett, has taken steps to withdraw an action for divorce which she instituted in June last year has just become known.

Mrs. Hackett, with her young daughter, is now abroad. Mr. Hackett is in this city, and the announcement that the differences which resulted in the separation had been adjusted came from a authoritative source.

Mr. Hackett and Miss Mannering were married March 2, 1897, after they had appeared in sweetheart roles in several plays.

The estrangement arose more than two years ago, and in July last year it became known that Mrs. Hackett had begun suit for divorce. After this action was started Mrs. Hackett retained custody of her young daughter. Mr. Hackett seeing the child frequently

ANNA SCHUMACHER.
(IN LIGHT COAT)

The Murder of Anna Schumaher a Mystery

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 18.—Much mystery surrounds the murder of Anna Schumacher, a pretty 17-year-old girl, whose remains were found in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery here. The police have been unable to find any clew as yet that will lead to the slayer of the unfortunate young woman.

One of the features of the inquest today was the examination of a cemetery employe who accompanied relatives of the dead girl over the grounds Saturday night in search of her. The cemetery is divided by a main thoroughfare, and during the day this employe saw the girl on both sides of the road.

Shelley was Using Gun on Sunday

Simcoe, Aug. 18.—All this morning Detective Greer worked around the cottage where old Michael Bull was shot, last Sunday. Young Emery Shelley, who is under arrest, said that he had been shooting at a bird on the edge of the bush, perhaps two hundred yards from Bull's doorstep, and the detective and several newspaper men went over the ground as carefully as its rough nature would permit in an endeavor to find some loose shells. None, however, was found.

Tracks there were in plenty, leading across the buckwheat field to the edge of the woods, and half a dozen pinces were found where a clear view of the Bull cottage could be obtained.

CROWDS ARE CURIOUS.

Yesterday the dead man was buried in Pine Grove cemetery, and the crowd surged all over the place seeking a possible explanation of the mystery, but apparently without avail. This morning old Mrs. Bull had a fainting attack, probably brought on by the reaction from the shock, but recovered later, and was about the yard.

A reporter saw John McLean, general merchant at Walsh, this morning, and from him learned of the old man's request for a revolver.

"He said he was getting old, was alone, with his wife, and had sometimes some money about him," said Mr. McLean. "He asked me to get him a revolver and a box of cartridges, and added something about there being a rough crowd about. I just thought he was getting old and nervous, and did not get any revolver."

FEARED FOR BABY.

John Overhalt saw the boy on the afternoon of the tragedy. "I had been asleep when I heard shot in the bush behind my place, and a bullet struck either the barn or a chicken coop in the yard.

"My little girl, a baby just able to walk, was outdoors, and thought suddenly that she might be hit. My wife and I both ran out. She got the baby and took it in, while I went back in the bush and met young Shelley. He had his gun and dog with him, and a tin pail tied to his belt. I told him he had no business to go shooting like that, particularly on Sunday, and added that he could be prosecuted for it. He said he was just shooting at a bird. was not fancy at all, and went on towards home."

Mr. Overholt was asked whether young Shelley had a dead bird with him, as he stated to the constable that he had shot one, afterwards taking it home, and giving it to the cat, but Mr. Overhault stated that he saw no dead bird in the boy's hand.

SCANDAL IN WEST AFRICA

A considerable sensation has been produced in England by the discovery that on the West Africa Gold Coast negro juries held the power of life and death over white men, and that the latter have in several instances been sent to prison by the blacks. The information was elicited from Col. J. E. B. Sealy, M.P., undersecretary of State for the colonies, in a series of questions by Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., who has thereby done something to show cause for his presence in parliament. The danger of black men, supposed to be swayed by hatred of a superior race, having the power in a British colony to send white British citizens to prison, or even to the scaffold, does not need to be emphasized. Nor does the present government, with all its fondness for natives, wish to defend the proceedings, for an investigation has been promised into the whole question of the propriety of native juries trying Englishmen; and there can be little doubt that the practice will be abolished wherever it is proved to exist.

The case in point is that of three Englishmen, employed by the African Gold Dredging and Mining Company on the British Gold Coast West Africa. Their names are Vivian W. Denton, Albert W. Watson and Leobold W. Leeder, the former being dredgemaster and the others winchmen. A year ago today a box of personal effects, containing a revolver and $200 in money, was stolen from the white men's camp at the mines, the theft being committed when the three were at dinner only thirty yards away. Suspicion fell upon one of the black employees, a huge negro, answering to the name of William Johnston. He was missing when an attempt was made to apprehend him, was hunted down, and confessed. The next day he escaped, but was pursued by a posse of negroes and recaptured after a fight, in which, it is said, he was badly beaten. No white man was present at the arrest, however, and if the manwas illtreated the blame must be lodged with his fellow-negroes.

Neither the money nor the revolver was found on Johnston, but he promised to lead Watson to the spot where he had hidden the booty. Accordingly a party went out in the bush next day, and after traveling a considerable distance from camp Johnston halted them, and bade them dig. After considerable time a large bullfrog was exhumed, but nothing more valuable. Johnston was, therefore, led before the nearest magistrate, Justice G. E. T. Purcell, at Axim. Although it was proved that Johnston had confessed the crime, and that he was also an escaped convict, he was let off withe no day's imprisonment by this exceedingly lenient judge. The disgust of the white men over this fiasco was quickly changed to indignation and rage when Judge Purcell issued warrants for their arrest, charging the three of them with brutal assault upon the negro.

Denton and Watson were taken into custody on the spot; but Leeder, who had not been present at the trial, was apprehended some sixty miles away from Cokondi, where the trial was to be held. In an open canoe, with the tropical rain coming down in torrents throughout the journey, Leeder was taken fifty miles up the river to Sekondi. There he was lodged in a cell, recently made vacant by the death from blackwater fever of a Frenchman. Leeder slept in the cell one night, and the next day had to be removed to a hospital where he died of the fever within the week. Thus he escaped a trial before Judge Purcell and a jury of seven blacks, which was ordered undertaken by Denton and Watson. After being out ten minutes, the black jury returned a verdict of "Guilty" and Judge Purcell sentenced the prisoners to three years' imprisonment.

In the meantime the statement of Judge Purcell is awaited with the utmost eagerness. Apparently upon him rests responsibility for the death of one white man and the imprisonment of two others. It was in his power to say whether the jury should be composed of seven negroes or of four negroes and three white men. If injustice has been done, it is upon his head that punishment will fall.

Suffragette Banner.

Very pertinent the lords of creation will doubtless think the adoption of a parrot as a motif for the design of the suffragette banner that decorated St. James' hall, London, where recently was held the first quintennial meeting of the International Suffrage alliance. Mrs. Ida Husted Harper was one of the distinguished representatives from America. For the English Writers' league Mme. Sarah Grand made a magnificent address, and when her time was up the audience pressed her to continue. She asked how it was that women had had strength to bear obloquy, insult and slander from enemies, some of whom would gladly have seen them stoned to death—what was it that urged them on? Women were demanding to be enfranchised simply because they could not help it, and the movement was not national, it was racial and it was evolutionary. Everything had been tried to stem the decay of nations except this of giving a woman a moral influence in all lands. Man could not work or live or think alone. Woman was the heart of his heart and his other wing, without which he could not fly upward.

A Scrap Book For Building Ideas.

To arrive at a decision as to just what one wants in the new home is no easy matter. So many things suggest themselves as desirable that the owner finds himself confused and unable for a time to distinguish the essential from the unessential. Probably there is no better plan than to keep a scrap book for the recording of ideas in the home. Every time some happy idea occurs to you or you see in print a suggestion that is valuable or notice in some one's home a device that is useful the scrap book should be brought out and an entry made. For the sake of convenience and to avoid confusion these scrap books should be made under distinguishing heads, such as "the sleeping unit," "the living unit," "the meal unit" or any other divisions that the owner may choose to make. The point is to avoid confusion. By the time the owner is ready to build his ideas will be clarified. He will have got over his momentary enthusiasm for this or that particular device, and he will be in position to judge calmly and critically the value of each suggestion. —Circle.

Pictorial Ancestry.

An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket and, pointing to the head engraved upon it, said, "My great-great-grandfather was made a lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."

"What a coincidence!" said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great great-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."—Christian Endeavor World.

Don't Risk even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help."

And for 38 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have done that very thing.

Get Health

Each used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are practically stocked in every community—and everywhere. Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for those unrecommended and unproven? Those who are in poor health, who suffer from any of the many ills that Dr. Shoop's Restorative will relieve, should gladly pay the druggist for it. And for that use a half or day's test is freely granted.

But make me first for an order. This will save delay and disappointment.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Blood Medicine, or will get them promptly, if not in stock. Don't hesitate. Don't delay. Don't let any druggist persuade you to take a substitute. Don't let any druggist or dealer tell you he can't get it. Don't let him tell you he doesn't want to get it. Don't let him tell you he has something else that is just as good. Tell him you want Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Blood Medicine, and if he can't supply you, write me and I will tell you where you can get them. Don't let him tell you he doesn't want to bother with you. Tell him you want your health, and you want it quick, and you want it right away, and you want it at once, or you will write me and I will tell you where you can get it. Don't let him tell you he doesn't want to bother with you. Tell him you want your health, and you want it quick, and you want it right away, and you want it at once, or you will write me and I will tell you where you can get it.

Then Pay

Don't let him tell you he doesn't want to bother with you. Tell him you want your health, and you want it quick, and you want it right away, and you want it at once, or you will write me and I will tell you where you can get it.

Afterwards

Don't let him tell you he doesn't want to bother with you. Tell him you want your health, and you want it quick, and you want it right away, and you want it at once, or you will write me and I will tell you where you can get it.

Clever People Who Can't See.

The history of the past assures us that there are few, if any, departments of human knowledge in which the blind have not distinguished theselves, says The War Cry.

Two of the world's greatest poets—Homer and Milton—were sightless; while Dr. Saunderson, once professor of mathematics in the University of Cambridge, lost his eyesight when twelve months old, but, although his parents were poor, he advanced so greatly in knowledge that he became an expert Greek scholar.

Then John Metcalfe, of Knaresbor ough, another blind man, became a [illegible] musician, and an engineer, who distinguished himself in building bridges and making roads.

There still exists, we believe, a monument to the memory of Dr. Hugh James, the blind physician of Carlisle; while in Birmingham there is a blind man who cleans and repairs clocks, and has even constructed new ones.

Queen Victoria's Journals.

Lord Esher has been giving some interesting particulars of Queen Victoria's journals. There are said to be over 100 volumes of them, all written closely in a small cramping hand. The last entry is dictated and was added two days before the Queen died. The journals, it is said, will never be seen by anyone in their complete form.

FADS OF CRIMINALS.

Murderers Who Were Particular as to Personal Appearance.

Oscar Slater, who murdered Miss Gilchrist in her Glasgow flat, proved himself a typical dandy even in the condemned cell and also a stickler for the proprieties. He insisted, for instance, from the very beginning in being called "Mr." Slater, and each morning he changed his linen, varied his neckwear and demanded polished boots.

Similar exhibitions of strutting peacock vanity are not uncommon on the part of men doomed to die on the gallows. Wainwright on the day preceding his execution absolutely refused to dress because his clean linen had not arrived from the laundry, and a new shirt and collar had to be bought for him. When the evening arrived—his last on earth—he craved a smoke. A pipe and tobacco were brought to him, but he rejected them with disdain. He would have a cigar. And he got it.

Lefroy, who murdered poor old Mr. Gold in a railway carriage on the way to Brighton, wore an evening dress suit during the whole of the period that elapsed between his condemnation and his execution; also he was greatly upset at the refusal of the authorities to allow him to be hanged in a new silk hat presented to him in court.

As a rule, however, the thoughts of the condemned turn mostly toward food Rush, the Stansfield Hall murderer, was an educated man. "I want my slippers and The Times," were his first words on returning to jail after his conviction. But a little later he called for pen and paper and wrote out an order for his next day's dinner. 'Pig and plenty of apple sauce."

In those days it was the custom to give capital convicts whatever they asked for in the way of food. But the rule was abolished soon afterward, one of the first delinquents to come under the new regulations being a certain Jeffrey, who murdered his six-year-old child by hanging him in a cellar in Seven Dials. He was unaware of the alteration and called for a roast duck directly he entered the condemned cell, and when it was refused him he behaved so violently that he had to be put in a straitjacket.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Genesis of the Cravat.

Cravats date from the incursion of the Croats into French territory during the Thirty Years' War. The French termed there invaders "Cravates," and a freak of fashion made their somewhat clumsy neckgear popular about 1636. The fancy must have spread very rapidly, for we find lace cravats with bread ends hanging in front replacing the wide collars of the cavaliers during the earlier stages of the civil war in England. Charles II. made white cravats a part of the uniform of his life and dragoon guards. The palmy period of the cravat was early in the eighteenth century, when these articles were made of the very finest lace and were so expensive that even the richest of fashionable young men could not afford to have more than two of them in their wardrobes. —London Standard.

The Time to Save.

As a general rule the question whether a man's career is to spell success or failure is settled between the ages of thirty and forty-five.

If a man cannot attain prosperity at forty his chances after that age are remote.

At fifty the sensible man plays for safety rather than for high stakes, for after that age not one man in five thousand can recover his financial position if he should come a cropper.

At sixty 98 per cent. are either dependent upon their daily earnings or upon their relatives.

It is evident, therefore, that no man should put off saving for old age after he has passed his fortieth birthday.

Twenty-First Century Wooing.

The grave young medical man entered the front parlor with sober mien. Unfastening his small black satchel, he produced a little purple vial, and, taking therefrom a tiny bag, he slipped it into a hypodermic syringe and advanced toward the shrinking girl.

"No, no!" cried the pretty Penelope. "It cannot be! I could not love you in the world!"

"You just wait until Mr. Cocosamonitis gets busy in your delicate blue veins," said the young doctor, injecting the love germ.

Their devotion is now almost proverbial.

Consistent.

In a hospital in one of the large cities of central France the physician in chief, in the course of his round of inspection, approached a cot and after feeling the patient's pulse remarked, "H'm—he is doing very nicely, his pulse is much better."

"It is as you say, doctor," replied the nurse, "but it is not the same man. Yesterday's patient is dead, and this one has been put in his place."

"Ah," said the doctor, "different patient, eh? Well, same treatment." And he walked on.

He Had the Best of It.

Nervous passenger (on lake steamer)—It must be really terrible to think of an accident happening to the boat while you are away down there in that hole.

Stoker—It's just the other way, ma'am. If the boat sinks I won't have to go through more'n about half as much water as you will 'fore I get to the bottom of the lake.

A Way Out.

Servant—A newspaper reporter wishes to interview your sir.

Great Man—Did you not tell him I was hoarse—could hardly speak?

Servant—Certainly, sir! But he assured me he would only ask questions which you could answer by a nod or a shake of the head.

Great Man—Then tell him I have a stiff neck.

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course, full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

CARE OF FLOWER BEDS.

How to Keep Them Beautiful All Through the Summer.

All flower beds should at this season of the year be kept in proper shape and condition. All seed pods and withered and yellow leaves should be carefully cleaned and picked off. Frequent stirring with the hoe is good, but not deep enough to in any way injure the roots. It is a good idea every time you mow the grass to take a sharp spade and cut the edge of all your flower beds. It keeps the grass from encroaching on the beds and also keeps the beds in their proper shape and form and makes them have a fresh and neat appearance.

By August many of the soft growing foliage bedding plants, such as coleus, alternantheras achryanthus, etc., will be growing freely and should be kept cut back and not allowed to become straggling. To be pretty, beds having plants of this kind should be uniform. The various colors should not be allowed to intermingle. Golden colored plants should not have red foliage ones sticking their shoots up through the yellow, etc. This is easily prevented by constantly pinching. The main point is to commence pinching early and take the tip out of the young growth. In this way you can scarcely see that the work is going on. If, however, you neglect them until the plants are very tall then you leave stems showing and the beds are unsightly for awhile.

Some beds are greatly benefited by a mulching of well rotted stable manure. It is necessary to shake out all the long straw before using, and if the manure is in large pieces chop it with a spade. Rose beds, cannas, hardy herbaceous and herbena beds are all benefited by mulching. We do not believe it is necessary to thus mulch soft plants, such as the coleus and geraniums, as they grow very well without it. The work of mulching is very simple. All you want to do is to spread the manure over the bed carefully to the depth of about one inch.

How often flower beds in the open air should be watered depends to a great extent upon the character of the soil and variety of plants. If the soil is good stiff loam and you have frequent showers you do not need to water at all. If it is sandy, as near the coast, and the weather dry it is beneficial to water every day. Geraniums seldom need watering when growing in good garden soil. With much water they grow too much to foliage. Cannas and plants of this character do not require much water. For them and geraniums we prefer much hoeing.

If using a hose sprinkler to water have just force enough to water without washing the ground. Hold the sprinkler near the ground so the water goes first where you want it. Geraniums should not have the flower heads watered if you can avoid it, as it spoils them completely. The evening, after sundown, is the best time to water, as the plants have all night to take up the moisture, and artificial watering is soon evaporated under the combined effects of wind and hot summer sun.

Rainbow Tinted Fishes.

The remarkable brilliancy of color in the fish living about the coral reefs in tropical regions has been often noticed. Brilliant blue with fins and tail of bright yellow, vivid crimson shading off into a more subdued hue, bright green spotted and banded with red, green with long parallel stripes of blue and red, green marked with red above and bright blue below—such are some of the colors displayed by the fish of the Great Barrier reef of Australia. In order to explain such brilliant hues on the principles of natural selection they have been described as "warning colors." The fish are thought to be nauseous or poisonous and to proclaim this by their bright colors. As regards those of the Australian coral reef, however, many of them are said to be excellent eating.

A Bold Defence.

"An enlisted man once put the president of a court-martial in a difficult position," says a writer in Cassell's Magazine. "The court-martial was trying the soldier for some fault or other. When the evidence—and it took an unusually long time—had been given, the president asked the prisoner if he had anything to say in his defence.

"'Well, sir,' said the man, 'I can't see how this 'ere court can sentence me, for Major Jones 'as been reading a paper under the table the 'ole blooming time, and Captain Smith 'as been making me into karicatoor on the blotting pad, and, as for Lieut. Brown, 'e 'asn't 'ad his commission a year and don't count anyways!'"

Casting Metals.

As is well known, some metals are unsuitable for casting, while others, like iron, can readily be cast in any desired shape. The property of casting well is said to depend upon whether the metal contracts or expands on solidifying from the liquid form. Iron, like water, expands in solidifying, and hence the solid metal may be seen floating in the liquid iron about it. The expansion causes it to fill the die into which it is poured, and so it can be cast easily. Gold and silver contract in cooling and therefore are not suitable for casting.

The London Pageant.

The site selected for next year's London pageant in that part of Chingford Plain which adjoins Connaught Water has been approved by the pageant authorities. Between the lake and the old hunting lodge of Queen Elizabeth a great horseshoe stand will be built, three times the size of that erected at Fulham for the church pageant. There will be 15,000 performers.

Canadian Securities

The quiet but successful placing of $5,000,000 of Dominion Iron and Steel Co. bonds with English banking houses affords another demonstration of London's capacity for the absorption of Canadian securities.—Toronto News

Thedepriests of Dyspepsia have been literally traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "little nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, there is little Stomach. Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas bloating, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen those failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are ailing, for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

9,000 Shares 7 Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 a Share Offered at Par with 40 Per Cent Immediate Bonus of Common Stock We Reserve the Right to Withdraw Offer Without Notice and to Return any Subscription Received Too Late. Previous Offerings Were Immediately Oversubscribed.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to succeed, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additianal capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

TACTFUL CHAPERONS.

How They Should Dispose of Undesirable Young Men.

The perfect chaperon is born, not made, because to be at her best she must be constantly on guard without the appearance of watching her charges, and that means a poise and self control and an ability for self effacement that the average woman does not possess. And because of this lack of sufficiency chaperons are frequently maligned either by parents of young folk, for if she is too strict the latter are annoyed, and if not sufficiently so parents are displeased.

The most difficult problem that a chaperon has to manage is what to do when men whom she considers undesirable talk to her charges. To give them the cut direct is rude and places her in a most unfortunate position.

To show her displeasure quietly is not apt to be effective, for girls are likely to champion those whom they deem downtrodden, and, if the men have the least charm of manner or know how to make themselves agreeable, to snub only makes them more interesting to the average young girl. While no chaperon is so silly as to think that every man who meets her charge wishes to marry her, the older woman has nevertheless to remember that he may be a possible husband, and it is imperative that the girl should be guarded from undesirable associates. Probably the best way of managing such a situation is for the chaperon to be constantly in the foreground, without the appearance of being so, not giving the man any opportunity to develop the acquaintance beyond most formal lines.

Her greatest tact lies in so managing her charges that she can retain the girl's confidence, for so long as she has it she will know the situation. Once let her lose it, and she works in the dark, not being certain what the day may bring forth. As to how much liberty a girl may be given by her chaperon in summer, one can only say it depends greatly upon the girl and her associates. If they are reliable and she is sensible there is no need of her having a protector all the time, for her own good sense is enough. Girls are always given more freedom in summer than in winter, and with a man whom she has known intimately and is known to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word there is no reason why she should not drive, sail and walk unchaperoned.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Among the dainty baby slips are those made with a Dutch neck for summer wear. They are decidedly attractive.

In stitching a pocket on the outside of a garment run the stitching half an inch above the edge of the pocket. This keeps the garment from tearing.

In pressing a plaited skirt one will gain time and have more satisfactory results if the plaits are basted before the pressing is done. Clean the skirt and brush it on the inside as well as the outside. Next baste the seams, cover with a damp cloth and press on the right side with a medium warm iron. Dampen the cloth when necessary and press until the cloth is dry.

Plain coarse chain stitching that looks much like the kind that children use to decorate their dolls' clothes is the latest freak of fashion, not only for gowns, but for shirt waists. Gowns are worked in the simple stitch in braid patterns and usually in self colors. Shirt waists stamped with braid patterns are outlined with the loose chain stitch. Stems with coarse, solid work are also made in this way.

The clever girl who makes laundry books for presents selects a neat rice paper for the leaves and cuts the double cover from red paper of a heavy variety, then ties the leaves together with red baby ribbon. Between the leaves of white paper are blue carbon paper slips, so that a duplicate copy is made when one marks off her laundry. This makes a handy booklet and one that would be appreciated by any woman who must send a list of laundry to her laundress and keep one herself.

Candlesticks Again in Favor.

The woman whose aim is to reveal a touch of the artist in her home just at present is interested in the old fashioned candlestick. It is a revival as happy in its way as that of the return to favor of Sheffield or pewter ware. The candle held its own against the oil lamp, but lost its popularity when gas came in, and it was practically outlawed when electricity came into general use. Now, however, many women of society are using candles extensively. One society leader, in fact, has gone to the extreme of having electric fixtures removed from several rooms, relying entirely upon candles for lighting. These candles she displays in antique candlesticks of beaten brass. Tall Russian candlesticks now are seen on many library tables, and tall silver colonial sticks are on many dressing tables. New candlesticks are shown in pottery and wrought iron, but antiques are first in favor. The prices of old brass candlesticks have advanced greatly in the last few weeks, and few now are to be found in the antique shops.

To Clean Chamois Skin.

An excellent way to restore chamois skins that have become stiff and soiled is to rub them through a strong solution of cold water and household ammonia, later rinsing thoroughly in clear cold water to soften. Pin to the line to dry in the sun and rub through the hand slightly.

Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. It is the weak nerves that are crying out for help. Vitalize these vital inside controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly good health will come to you again. Test it and see! Sold by all dealers.

MR. THOMPSON'S MODEL.

The Way She Came to Get a Permanent Engagement.

By ALICE R. WETMORE.

(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Where are you, Bill?" came a lazy drawl from the tiny anteroom, which Thompson designated the office.

"Here," replied that gentleman as distinctly as a mouthful of brushes would permit. "It's only Carter," he explained to his model. "Or perhaps you'd rather"—

"Oh, let him come in by all means," replied the girl. "I'd rather like to see him."

A long, clean limbed young fellow lounged in, halted apathetically for a moment behind Thompson's canvas and then sunk lazily into a pile of cushions on the floor.

The girl on the model stand scrutinized him closely and made up her mind that he was the most typically lazy man she had ever seen. His voice, his walk, his carriage, had an absolute lack of effort that was positively fascinating, and to complete the impression his strong, lean face was absolutely devoid of expression.

Suddenly, however, he gazed intently and with a semblance of awakened interest at the model. The pose was rather striking. A heavy black velvet gown accentuated that peculiar transparency of coloring which accompanies a certain deep rich shade of auburn hair. A dull green background reconciled the brilliant coloring of the upper part of the picture to the dusky mysteries of the lower canvas. The pose of the figure was saved from insolence only by the winsomeness of the face.

Carter pulled lazily at his pipe and continued to gaze at the girl with half closed critical eyes. "Nice color," he finally asserted. "By Jove, that's a wonderful pose!" with a sudden burst of enthusiasm that startled the girl. "Are you engaged after you finish with Thompson?".

The other artist opened his mouth; then, with a quiet smile, closed it again. The girl smiled, too, a little smile that curled her upper lip deliciously.

"No, sir; I'm not engaged next week," she replied quietly.

"Can you come to me for a two weeks' pose then, in the mornings?"

Thompson looked dubiously at the girl. "Yes, sir, I'll come," she said.

The next Monday the model presented herself at John Carter's studio. He scarcely looked up as he greeted her.

"Oh, is that you, Miss— Do you know, I forgot to ask your name," he drawled.

"Parks," the girl supplied smilingly.

The gown he gave her was also black. He had hung heavy stuffs around and above the model stand until the black gown and the background mingled darkly and the white face and auburn hair fairly jumped from the gloom in a single, startling note of color.

Carter set to work with a feverish energy which quite transformed him. He tried first one pose, then another, in such rapid succession that the girl was positively bewildered.

When he had at last found one that pleased him he drawled apologetically, with a slow, winning smile, "I'm rather a hard fellow to get started, Miss Parks, but I won't give you much trouble once we're off."

The girl watched the man with fascinated eyes. He worked with the precision and energy of a splendid machine. His face shone with positive inspiration.

As for Carter himself, he was blissfully happy. With the true artist's sensitiveness he felt the absence of the usual clash between the half hearted, prosaic models and the ideals he struggled to embody by their aid. The atmosphere lacked a single inharmonious element, for the girl seemed to throw her whole personality into the work.

At last he emerged from his trance sufficiently to observe that a white line had appeared around the girl's compressed lips and that she wavered as she stood.

"It must be time to rest," he observed. "Why," as he glanced at the clock, "you've been posing for nearly an hour. Why didn't you rest?" he demanded reproachfully.

The girl sank into a chair with an amused gleam in her eyes. "I never saw anybody so completely lost," she said. "I couldn't bear to disturb you."

The next morning he found himself awaiting with unmistakable impatience the arrival of his model, and when at last she did stand before him with a smiling "Good morning" on her lips he regarded the girl with an artist's satisfaction.

She was charming in her dark street gown. Her face was flushed and her eyes bright with the exhilaration of an autumn morning, and Carter was strongly tempted to put away serious work and make a study of her as she stood. He banished the idea, however, and soon they were at work on the "masterpiece." He refused to believe it when the noon whistle insisted that it was 12 o'clock and Miss Parks departed.

The afternoon was unprecedentedly long. He felt strangely disinclined to work and finally put aside the canvas and brought out some unfinished sketches. He worked on these until he discovered that he had converted five different heads into unmistakable likenesses of Miss Parks. Then he muttered something beneath his breath and gave up in despair.

At the end of the last day but one of the two weeks Carter realized that the central figure of his canvas was completed, and the realization brought a poignant feeling of regret. The reason for it came when it suddenly flashed upon him that tomorrow was Miss Parks' last day. And then it was that Carter made a discovery that a less inexperienced man would have made long before. It came with such a shock that he was fairly stunned. He, John Carter, the most unimpressionist of men, in love with his model!

When Miss Parks appeared the next day he greeted her with the usual cheerful "Good morning," but not another word was spoken until she had taken the old familiar pose—for the last time, he said to himself, with a pang.

There was a strange restraint of which both were aware. At last, "This is the last day of the pose," the girl ventured. Carter worked furiously. "Yes," he answered shortly. Another pause. "Then you won't want me any more?" The girl's voice grew hard to be commonplace.

Carter threw down his palette in despair. The girl kept her pose bravely, her pretty head tilted, but the eyes which met Carter's held a look which even he could not mistake. The man brushed his hand across his eyes in a quick, desperate little gesture. He seemed to have brushed the old nonchalance away. He was fairly transformed.

"Want you!" he gasped. "Want you! Don't you know I want you more than anything in the world?"

"But you don't understand," the girl began finally in a voice that was somewhat smothered by Carter's broad shoulder. "There are reasons," she continued, with dignity, "why I cannot marry you."

"I am all ears," avowed Carter solemnly, "but you won't mind if I say right now that the reasons won't make a particle of difference, will you?"

"Oh, but they will. I've been deceiving you," she confessed haltingly.

"Go on," commanded Carter more soberly. All kinds of dreadful possibilities loomed up before him.

"You'll never love me when you know," she continued, with visible effort. "I—I'm not a model at all. I'm Billy Thompson's cousin," she rushed on, "and when you came in and thought I was a professional I wouldn't let Billy tell you, and—I thought it would be such a good joke, because Billy had told me how you never cared for girls or—anything, and"—

"You there, Jim?" interrupted a familiar voice from the hall. The girl fled to the model stand and took her pose. Carter dabbed lazily and with perfect composure at his canvas.

Billy strolled in, an amused look in his eyes. "Nice model," he remarked. "Can I engage you for next week, my pretty maid?"

Carter turned about lazily and regarded his friend.

"I'm afraid not, Billy," he drawled. "You see, your cousin has a permanent engagement with me."

Actors Under King William III.

How summarily actors and managers were dealt with in the days of King William III. is shown by the petition of Alexander Davenant and others, dated Dec. 19, 1691, which has been found among the historical documents of the house of lords. These "sharers and adventurers in the playhouse"—this seems to have reference to the Dorset Garden theater in Whitefriars—set forth that Lord Longueville, having complained of being assaulted, together with his servants, by the guard at this famous playhouse in the course of what seems to have been a rather serious fracas, the king had given orders at the desire of the peers that no soldiers should be on duty there for the future and that the players should be "suspended from acting till they had begged pardon for the affront."

The house had also, it appears, violated its dignity, thus outraged in the person of one of its members, by ordering a sergeant and a soldier to be sent to the gatehouse at Whitehall, then used as a prison. The petitioners having humbly solicited the "removal of the suspension upon them" and promised to "do their best to prevent the like miscarriage for the future," it is officially noted that, "the suspension on the players was removed" and that "on Dec. 20 the sergeant and soldier were on petition released."—London Standard.

Not an Affair of the Heart.

They stood at her door, and there seemed to be some constraint between them.

He was a trifle older than she, and she had the advantage of him in looks too.

In his eyes there was supplication, and in hers there were disdain, scorn, rejection.

"If I might"— he began.

"No, sir," she interrupted. "It is totally unnecessary."

"But"—

"I do not wish to hear you."

"One word."

"Not one, sir."

"Well, if you won't"—

"I want nothing you can offer me."

"But I"—

"Once for all, I tell you I want no dinware today."

She shut the door and went in, and the peddler went on to the next house.

Defiant of Fashion.

"Those people don't seem to care what the world thinks of them," said the fashionable woman.

"How do you know?"

"They still play progressive euchre and croquet."—Washington Star.

A Division of Labor.

Witness—One day I had some shrimps to sell, and I asked the plaintiff to help me. He said, "I can't push the barrow because my arm is bad, but if you like I'll come along with you and holler."

Counsel—Why was that?

Witness—Well, it's like this, sir. A man can often shout when he can't shove.—London News.

Unreasonable.

"Your baby cries a great deal at night. Can't you do anything for it?"

"Your dog barks a good deal. Can't you do anything to stop him?"

"Confound it, such unreasonable people as you haven't any right to live in a flat!"

The Result the Same.

"Gimme some of that prune pie."

"Son, you've had two kinds of pie already."

"Then another kind won't matter. There's only one kind of stomach ache."

CLEAN Up INSIDE

In spite of all your careful habits it is safe to say that in the spring you feel poorly—have a throbbing sensation in the head—skin is sallow or yellow, with dark rings under the eyes. If not absolutely billious the system is so full of bile that you feel heavy and tired all day long.

Clean up, work off the winter's accumulation of waste, purify your blood. Do this and you'll feel fresh as a prize-fighter. "For ten years," says W. B. Gangster of Concord, "I suffered greatly from impure blood, which made me feel debilitated and unfit for work. I had no appetite, suffered from indigestion and gas, had some pains in the back, caused by poor kidney action. Spring was the hardest time of all, and many a time I felt despondent and languid enough to throw up the sponge. I was impressed by the marvellous work done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills and tried them. They baited me exactly. In one week I felt like new. I was braced up, got rid of blood weakness, gained in flesh, got back my old time appearance and spirits. Dr. Hamilton's Pills will clean all the sickness out of a man in short order and I urge young and old to use this grand tonic medicine."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a perfect spring medicine, they destroy germs and poisons of every description and treangth whereby the system rallies and the patient quickly enjoys the blessings of Perfect Health. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today—25c. For sale at all dealers.

Three Excursions in the City Yesterday

Three large excursions were in the city yesterday and spent a very pleasant day with friends, seeing the city and by steamer and auto crisscross over to the lift lock. A few also took in the ball game between the T. A. S. and Campbellford. The excursions were from Fenelon Falls and Kinmount with 600 on board, and from Napanee and Belleville with about 1000 on board. Another excursion of about 300 from Marmora arrived about one o'clock. The big crowd was very orderly and are welcome to come back to the city any time they like.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

For Dressy Women

We are in receipt of a rather inobservant criticism of Canadian women from the point of view of their display in dress.

Our critic seems to think that because women have power to effect tremendously the social and moral growth of the country they lose an opportunity for great good by being devoted merely to the display of fashion.

What our critic does not realize is the fact that physical adornment in dress lends immensely to the personal attraction and charm of women and therefore to their influence over men; and that it is by this charm that men are led to admire, respect and consider or defer to women's opinions and wishes. Therein lies an important consideration for mere militant suffragettes. Let us elaborate the point, as follows:

What a field for her wit, for her intelligence, for her noble ideals of life, of decency and right doing!

It is the woman who dictates who shall be received in her home, who says whether or not bribers and those who have undermined the foundations of honesty in the government of her city shall be allowed to lift their voices high at her table and be honored in the presence of her sons. It is the woman who guides the talk in her home, where men discuss and children hear.

Yet when this power is hers, and now—perhaps the crabbed critic was not so unjust in urging on woman less thought concerning six puffs or eight, and more as to life as it is being lived about her, and the astounishing conditions in which she is playing her part—a little less noticeable effect in gown and coiffure and a little more nobleness and beauty in her own personal poise and outlook.

ELTON YORKE.

While being removed to Nicholls Hospital yesterday at noon in the Dan Spence ambulance, Elton Yorke passed away. The young man has been ill for about a week, his condition, however, became alarming during the past few days and it was deemed advisable to remove him to the hospital. Dr. Marshall was with him when he died and all efforts to save his life were of no avail.

The late Mr. Yorke was a young man of about thirty years of age. He had been a resident of Peterborough for three years, having come here from Moscow, where his parents reside. He was until taken ill employed as bartender in the New Oxford Hotel.

C. Mead, of Toronto, as manager. Mr. Mead has had experience in the largest green houses in Toronto, and on coming to Peterborough, brings with him the knowledge of this class of work, and with new ideas that will give the public of Peterborough the best values, choicest designs, and better stock than possibly they have been able to procure in the city before. The West End Green Houses have been long established and there is no reason why they should not enjoy a very large share of the patronage of lovers of cut flowers, plants, etc.

Men Being Engaged to go Into Lumber Woods

Lumbermen and Bushmen are Now in Demand —Agents Here Securing Men

Lumbermen and bushmen are now in demand and during the past couple of weeks agents of the Northern lumber companies have been in the city engaging men. One gang has already been sent up to work in the mills until the camps open. Another gang of about fifty will leave next week. These include men from the city and the district. The lumbering business promises to be very brisk this fall and winter. The camps will open early and those who go up next week will go right into the woods.

The wages being offered for men to go to New Ontario are from $30 to $35 a month with board, and many good men are taking jobs early.

Otonabee Navigation Co. Having a Busy Season

The steamer Otonabee arrived in the city yesterday noon in plenty of time to take out the Mitcalfe excursion to Jubilee Point at two o'clock. The Otonabee met with an accident at Burleigh a couple of days ago and has since been undergoing dry dock. Her shaft was broken and it had to be renewed at the Wm. Hamilton Company's foundry, and although every effort was put forth it was impossible to get the repairs made sooner. It was a serious loss to the company as the special excursion from Peterborough to Lindsay and Peterborough on Tuesday and Wednesday and the Tuesday night moonlight out of Lindsay were all cancelled. There was a big crowd at the Wolfe street wharf waiting for the Otonabee at noon and when word was received that the boat was at the lift lock all felt relieved and pleased. The day was an ideal one, for this favorite trip down to Rice Lake and a most enjoyable afternoon and evening was spent.

SPECIAL TRIP

The Otonabee Navigation Company has arranged for a special trip from Peterborough to Lindsay and from Lindsay to Peterborough for next week per steamer Otonabee to take the place of those which were cancelled this week. This will be good news to the citizens as a more enjoyable outing cannot be held Ontario.

GEORGE ST. CHOIR.

The steamer Monarch went down the river yesterday afternoon with the members of the George street Methodist church choir. The young people had a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon and returned in the evening by moonlight.

COLD SPRINGS S.S

Cold Springs have arranged to run an excursion per steamer Otonabee from Peterborough to Rice Lake and return on Wednesday, September 1, leaving the Wolfe street wharf at 8 a.m. A special train will bring the crowd to the city.

HAVELOCK PARK

Mr. J. McCabe of Havelock was in the city yesterday and arranged with the Otonabee Navigation Company to carry a party of Havelock people up the lakes on the steamer Water Lily on Tuesday morning next. Arrangements are being made to have the C.P.R. train stop at the bridge across the canal to let this party off and take the boat there.

BUSY MONTH.

During the month of August the steamer Otonabee has and will continue to be in commission every day and nearly every evening. Excursions have been booked ahead for practically every day and with favorable weather the month will be a record one. The season so far has been good and the boat men are making no complaints.

Y.W.C.A. MOONLIGHT.

The Y.W.C.A. have secured the Otonabee for a moonlight down the river on Monday night, August 30. The boat will leave the Wolfe street wharf at 8 o'clock, and will return between 10 and 10.30 o'clock. A special program of music will be given on board and a good time is assured. The proceeds are for the public reading room and the girls' library.

New Zealand Following Lead of Canada

London, Aug. 19.—It is understood that New Zealand will provide cruisers for New Zealand waters instead of a Dreadnought for the fleet. At the final meeting of the Imperial Defence Conference tomorrow a resolution will be brought forward to the effect that all the naval and military forces of the Empire shall be so organized that each shall be in a position to render efficient service in an emergency in any part of the Empire. Subsequently the overseas delegates will meet the committee of Imperial Defence.

MODERNIZED CHINA.

Dunkirk, N.Y., Aug. 19.—William Martin, United States consul-general at Hankow, has not believed from the first that the dispute between Japan and China over the Antung-Mukden railroad will lead to serious consequences. For one thing China is too busy developing her marvelous resources.

Mr. Martin says the modernization of China is proceeding much more rapidly than the world at large has any idea. A modern army has been organized, a modern navy is a certainty of the near future, and all branches of the Western learning are now being taught in the schools. "China is a country rich in natural resources and commercial possibilities," said Mr. Martin today, "and the eyes of other nations are turned toward her with longing to get in. There will be friction more and more as China asserts herself in attempting to maintain her rights as an independent nation, but she will ultimately come to her own.

AN IMPERIAL IM.

London, Aug. 19.—The Standard says Australia, and, it hopes Canada, in providing for their own defence, and keeping open their trade routes are satisfying not merely a local need, but also the needs of the empire. It is on this aspect of defence that Imperialists should regard the building of local navies.

The Leader thinks the resolution to be proposed at the final meeting of the Defence Conference represents rather a pious aspiration than a strategical condition in any immediate likelihood of being realized. It remains to be seen whether the creation of local fleets will appeal as strongly to busy industrial communities bent on work building up new territories as to some of their leading politicians more in touch with home views.

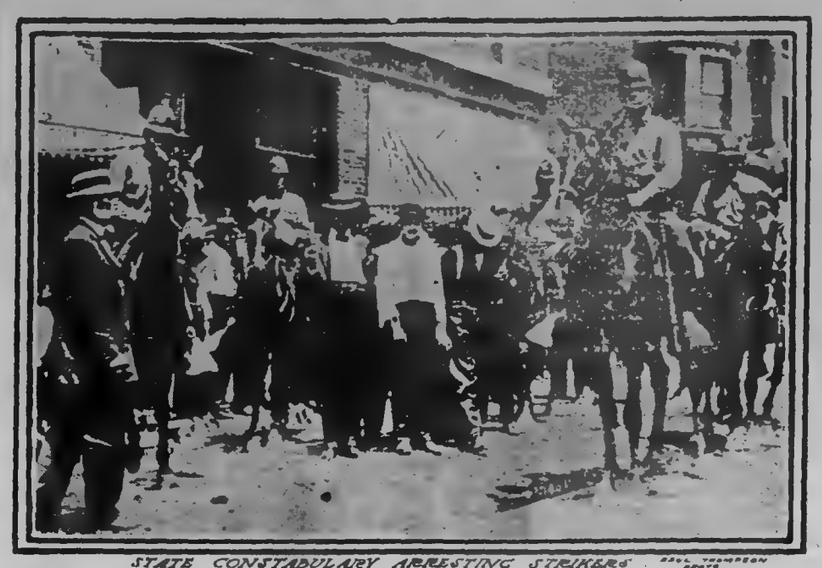
Catholics Ask for Half the Taxes

North Bay, Aug. 19.—The celebrated claim of the Separate School Board of Sturgeon Falls against the Public school trustees of that town for half the taxes paid by the pulp mill of that town up to an assessment of $40,000, and dating from '98, under an agreement entered into at that time, is revived again, as all parties have been summoned to appear before Judge Valin, today, in the matter. The troublesome agreement between school boards of '98 was obtained to assist the passing of a bonus by-law, it being generally understood that the by-law would be opposed if a divvy was not arranged.

Public school ratepayers would not allow the payment of the money, and on the 30th of April 1904, the Ross Legislature passed a special act legalizing the agreement between the school boards, and authorizing payments of the money. So much excitement resulted at the time that nothing has been done up to the present to enforce payment, but, now, with a favorable town council and other things propitious, the move is made, but is expected to meet with strong opposition on principal.

KEPT FROM MOTHER

Toronto, Aug. 19.—News of the terrible tragedy at Norwood in which Thomas Willoughby shot his little daughter Stella, and later was found dead himself, is being kept from Willoughby's aged mother, who resides at 342 Lippincott street this city, with her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Hazlett. The old lady is in exceedingly poor health and it is feared, hearing of her son's death would have a serious effect on her. A son, Charles Willoughby, and another daughter, Mrs. Forward, also live in Toronto. Mr. Willoughby and his brother-in-law, Mr. Hoblet, are in Norwood attending to the affairs of the unfortunate man. Mrs. Hoblet expressed herself as almost inclined to believe her brother was insane, rather than accept the theory of accidental shooting. Her husband, she says, had been very ill for some months past and his actions had seemed to show his mind was affected.



STATE CONSTABULARY ARRESTING STRIKERS

STATE TROOPERS PURSUING ROCK THROWERS INTO THEIR HOMES

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 19.—Mounted, and with their hickory riot clubs, members of the Pennsylvania State Constabulary are today keeping strikers on the move in the Pressed Steel Car Company's strike zone at McKee's Rocks. It is estimated over five hundred shots were fired last night and early today by strikers and sympathizers who had gathered on the O'Donovan bridge near the works.

Water Street Girls in Fast Go in which Hair Pulling was a Feature

A young lady's long tongue got her into serious trouble yesterday morning. During one of her little gossips she heard something disparaging of a young lady who lives a door or two from her place on Water St. Of course she could not forget it but told another girl and then the one accused heard the yarn. Yesterday morning girl No. 2 waited for the long-tongued one, and as she went into a neighbor's house she nailed her and then feathers began to fly. It turned out that both had bad tempers and almost an unlimited vocabulary of really bad cuss words. Hair was pulled and between each pull was "You blankety blank," then another pull and a cry of pain, then some more cuss words, etc., etc. It was a real lively scrap of the good old-fashioned kind. Marquis of Queensberry rules was not followed, neither was there a squared circle. The back yards of three houses were occupied by the girls, and they needed it too. The one with the tongue who used to delight in spreading evil reports, got decidedly the worse of the argument. Her hair was disheveled beyond recognition; her shirt waist was torn; her shins were blackened and her face was slapped until it took on that brilliant hue seen rarely on any one but those who have paddled all day in the hot sun.

Of course all the women in the neighborhood were out watching the go, and took particular pleasure in seeing the girls scrap. At the end a court martial was held and the tattle tale was banished into exile with a stinging calling down. It will no doubt be a lesson to her, and it should be to other gossip mongers in the city. It is well to remember that old and familiar passage, "Be sure your sins will find you out."

Peterborough People Returned from Europe

Mr. and Mrs. S. Dickson Hall, accompanied by Miss Helen Davies, arrived in the city last night after their trip abroad. Miss Davies has been visiting with relatives in England for several weeks. Mr. and Mrs Hall left in June. Mr. Hall was on his annual purchasing trip for R. Hall and son, and he met with much success abroad. He visited the industrial centers in England, Ireland, Scotland, France and Germany, and made large purchases of the highest class of dress goods, some of which have already arrived in Peterborough, and have been placed in the store.

The party arrived in New York on Monday after a very pleasant voyage. There was only one rough day. They remained in New York for a couple of days, where Mr. Hall made further purchases, and arrived in Toronto Wednesday night, and came on to Peterborough last night. All three passengers are looking well and feel in the best of health. Their many friends will be glad to welcome them back to the city.

who was murdered in a Rochester, N.Y., cemetery, where she had gone to place flowers on her sister's grave. Her body was buried in a ditch, to which marks indicated it had been dragged. It is believed that the girl was killed by an employe of the cemetery, and the police are working on this theory. Other girls, it is said, have been chased by a man connected with the cemetery.

Wind on the Stomach

A Well-Known Westerner Tells of Suffering, Misery and Pain That He Cured With Nerviline.

"A few weeks ago I ate some green vegetables and some fruit that was not quite ripe. It first brought on a fit of indigestion, but unfortunately it developed into hiccoughs, accompanied by nausea and cramps. I was dreadfully ill for two days—my head ached and throbbed; I belched gas continually, and I was unable to sleep at night. A neighbor happened in to see me and urged me to try Nerviline. Well, I wouldn't have believed that any preparation could help so quickly. I took half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in hot sweetened water, and my stomach felt better at once. I used Nerviline several times, and was completely restored."

NERVILINE STRENGTHENS WEAK STOMACHS

The above is from a letter written by G. E. Braun, a well-known stockman and farmer near Lethbridge, Alta. Mr. Braun's favorable opinion of the high merit of Nerviline shared by thousands of Canadians who have proved Nerviline is simply a marvel for cramps, diarrhoea, flatulence, nausea and stomach disorders. Safe to use, guaranteed to cure—you can make no mistake in keeping Nerviline for your family remedy. Large 25c. bottles; five for $1.00 Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 15

Ald. Buller Returned from Convention of American Fire Chiefs

Some Valuable Information Given Regarding Fire Fighting and Fire Fighting Apparatus

Ald. Buller, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, returned home yesterday after attending the International Fire Chiefs' Association in Grand Rapids, Michigan, for the past week. He went down the river last evening, and joined Mrs. Buller and his family, who are camping at Popular Point. The alderman says that he knows more about fire fighting and fire fighting apparatus than he would have learned otherwise. The convention was a great education to him, and he will be thus able to conduct his committee in future. He is glad he attended the convention, and is also very glad that Chief Howard was there.

In speaking of the new Canadian Fire Chiefs' Association, which was organized in Grand Rapids, the alderman referred to it in the most optomistic terms, and can see no reason why it should not be of the greatest benefit to the chiefs of the Dominion. It is the intention to hold a meeting during the Toronto Exhibition, when all the chiefs in the province will be notified and invited to attend. It is the intention to get the organization in good running order immediately. They have selected excellent officers, and Chief Howard will play a very important part in the association.

Canadian Fire Chiefs Formed Association in Grand Rapids

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 18.—An important Canadian Section Meeting was held at The Morton Hotel last night when the Canadian Delegates met and organized a Fire Chiefs' Canadian Association. The association will be only for Ontario to start with.

Among those present were:—
Chief John Thompson and Ald. T. L. L. Church, chairman Toronto Fire and Light Committee.
Chief Tremblay, Montreal.
Chief Aitken, London.
Chief Henderson, St. Thomas.
Chief Meyers, Stratford.
Chief Cooke, Berlin.
Chief Howard and Ald. T. Buller, Peterborough.
Chief Ten Eyck, Hamilton.
Chief Bain, Owen Sound.
Chief Pritchard, Chatham.
Chief Murray, Windsor.
Chief Armstrong, Kingston.
Ald. Church acted as chairman pro tem, and explained the object of the meeting.

Officers elected were,—
President—Chief Ten Eyck, Hamilton.
Sec.-Treas.—Chief Howard, Peterborough.
Hon. Solicitor—Ald. T. L. Church, Toronto.

The association will consist of chiefs and fire committee chairmen of Ontario's municipalities.

A provisional committee of the aforesaid gentlemen will meet at the Canadian National Exhibition and notices will be sent to all the other Ontario municipalities. It was felt that if a united effort were made much mutual benefit in the cause of fire fighting would result. Ald. Church suggested the formation of such an association. Chief Thompson of Toronto, will likely be the first vice-president of the International association.

Secretary-treasurer Chief Howard of Peterborough, with the president, Ten Eyck will convene a general meeting of the new association likely during the Toronto Fair.

MRS. R. J. MENZIES' PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Sustained Serious Injuries in Peterboro on Sunday

An unfortunate accident happened to Mrs. R. J. Menzies while visiting with Mrs. R. Hicks, Mrs. Menzies' niece at Peterborough Sunday evening about dusk. Mrs. Menzies while making her way along the upper hall struck the casing of a doorway which turned her partially around and caused her to fall sideways down the back stairway. Mrs. Hicks ran to her assistance and found her unconscious. She phoned Dr. Fredericks, who arrived immediately, and on examination found her suffering with a severely strained neck, many bruises and a badly dislocated right thumb, with some small bones broken. The doctor says it will be six months before the thumb will be perfectly well. Mr. Menzies knew nothing of the occurrence until he went to meet his wife last night at the station.—Lindsay Post.

TWENTY INJURED IN RIOT

Fight Between Sharpshooters and Picnic Crowd in Chicago.

Chicago, August 18.—Twenty persons were injured last night when a company of Polish sharpshooters, 20 strong, charged a crowd of men, women and children, with bayonets at a church picnic. The trouble started when the captain of the company hit a boy with a sword because the youngster did not get out of the way quickly enough to suit the officer who was drilling his company by electric light.

This enraged the crowd, which had gathered to see the soldiers. The company was surrounded and an explanation was demanded by the angry people. Finally the mother of the boy attacked the captain with a stick. The captain then ordered his company, which consisted of about twenty men, to charge the crowd with bayonets. The crowd fought back, greatly outnumbering the soldiers. The riots became general, and the captain of the company was one of the first to retreat. A riot call brought the police, and they arrested five of the soldiers, all of whom were bruised. No one was seriously injured.

A ROMANTIC STORY.

London, Aug. 16.—A very romantic story is just now interesting Barton-on-Humber. It concerns a lady fourty years of age, a grandmother, & the wife of a retired sea captain.

Her father, a Scotchman, was in the navy, and when the gold fever in Australia was at its height he left the service and went to the diggins. Very shortly afterwards he sent for his wife to join him. She did so, but on the persuasion of her mother, left her baby girl behind her in care of its grandmother.

That was fifty years ago, and until a fortnight ago no communication had passed between the parties. Now however, through the medium of the press, the mother, who resides in Sydney, has been put into communication with the daughter, who has expressed her intention of crossing the globe to see the mother she has long mourned as dead.

LAID AT REST

Thos. Willoughby and Daughter Stella May Placed in Graves Side By Side in Family Plot.

Norwood, Aug. 19—This afternoon two hearses wound their way slowly from the Willoughby home to the cemetery at Norwood. They contained the remains of the victims of the Tuesday afternoon tragedy, that has appalled the countryside and caused interest throughout the province. The funeral service for Thomas Willoughby and his daughter, Stella May, was conducted at the house at 2.30 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Rowlands, pastor of the Norwood Baptist church, of which the Willoughbys were adherents.

The funeral procession was one of the largest ever seen in this locality. The Willoughby family has always been held in the highest esteem and the terrible tragedy has cast a gloom over the neighborhood.

The funeral was in charge of C. J. Searight, undertaker, Norwood. One of the hearses was secured at Hamilton. Mr. Searight only having one. The cortege left the residence for the for the burying ground shortly after three o'clock.

In the cemetery the remains of father and daughter were laid at rest side by side in the family plot.

The tragic element in connection with their deaths made the funeral service more than usually impressive.

FAILED TO CURE RHEUMATISM.

Miss Flora Chapman Vividly Describes Her Suffering and Ultimate Cure With "Nerviline."

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so called remedies, consulted for weeks and months, with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know CURED many families where no other medicine but 3 Nerviline is kept—it is YEARS so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago and sciatica. I call Nerviline my "Life Guard," and urge all to try its merit."

GUESSES AT THE NAVAL CONFERENCE

Guesses at what is going on behind the doors of the Imperial Defence Conference are now in order. It seems safe to permit surmise to outline, certain lines of probability and the cable correspondents are apparently proceeding on this basis. It is a likely prediction, for instance, that the Australians are nervous about Japan and are not agreed with the Imperial policy of denuding the Pacific stations of warships. That has been the Australian attitude all along. They have given this feeling material form by starting to build a local navy of their own for coast defence. But it must be pure surmise to tell us now that the Australians are insisting upon this phase of the question so vigorously as to find themselves in collision with the Admiralty.

The Admirglty has known all along that the Australians were very anxious about local defence. It has known that they would insist upon having some sort of protection at home no matter what they might do toward strengthening the Imperial "first line of defence" in European waters. Consequently it is surely safe to infer that the Admiralty has been well prepared for this position and quite ready to meet it as far as it could. On the other hand, the Australians and the New Zealanders have shown that they they feel the pressure of duty in the matter of Imperila defence by generous offer of Dreadnaughts. That is, while they are apprehensive about the future of the northern part of the Australian Continent, they realise perfectly that a nearer danger in point of time probably menaces the Mother Country.

Out of such a position, surely the Australian delegates and the representatives of the Admiralty will be easily able to arrive at a compromise without finding any "sharp differences" between them. If the British Empire is stabbed to the heart by a thrust at London, the position of the empty provinces in Northern Australia will become perilous, indeed. A lost battle off the coast of their island-continent might be serious; but, so long as the British Empire remained intact, the ground could be recovered and any raiding Asiastics ejected. But a lost battle in the North Sea, followed by the occupation of London, would be fatal; and the handful of "whites" in Australia would find themselves alone facing an over-crowded and rapidly awakening and arming Asia.

The predictions ventured in the case of the Canadian delegates are equally hap-hazard. The statement that our delegates think that our ships should ride the Pacific alone, is highly improbable. Will "the boys" from the Maritime Provinces thus willingly give up all hopes of "patronage"? It is more likely that our Ministers would each like to have a battleship attached to the biggest sea port in their respective spheres of influence, which would "divide" the spoils if it did not "conquer" the enemy.

If Canada intends to do anything effective in the present crisis, she must be willing to find the money and let the Admiralty do the building training and fighting. If she proposes to do nothing but prepare to build ships at home for the patrolling of her own waters—which are not menaced by even the shadowy danger that overhangs Australia—then she deliberately withdraws her support from the Imperial Government at this time, and retires from the Conference with a promise that, if Britain can fight her own battles alone for the next decade or two, she will then find a Canadian fleet in the offing which may do some fighting for the next generation.

THE AMERICAN TARIFF BATTLE

The Republican "tariff reformers" propose to keep up their fight on the Aldrich tariff—indeed, upon Aldrichism and all its works. Senator Cummings, of Iowa, gave out an interview at Chicago on his way home from Washington, in which announced that a fight would be made at every party convention, from this time to the national convention in 1912, to rescue the party from the control of men who disregard platform pledges. Senator Dolliver does not hesitate to say that attempts were made in the last revision of the tariff to deceive the people. Having declared that the United States had had a volunteer tariff commission for twenty years, composed of experts who aided Congress in its work, he said:

"The trouble is, our tariff commission represents no public responsibility, and in these latter years, in my judgment, it has become and avarice of a few men, who without regard to the needs of these industries are pushing the duties upward for purposes of their own. Yet the statement of the conferees in both Houses is that 'no changes of importance' have been made in the cotton schedule I know better. I refuse to be deceived about it myself, and I refuse to become a party to deceiving the American people in respect to it."

What effect this revolt will have upon the people of the Middle West, few care to prophesy. The "rebels" are always careful to claim that there is nothing to be hoped from the Democratic party, and that these desiring genuine tariff revision must support them in their fight against Aldriches. Unfortunately the tariff history of the Democrats goes far to support this contention. They secured a sweeping mandate from the country, to revise the tariff at the time of Cleveland's second election; and yet they permitted their own Senators to betray the cause and foist upon the nation a very poor excuse for the low tariff it had demanded. Even during this special session of Congress we have seen the Democrats in both Houses joining with the Republicans in a scramble for tariff favors for their particular districts. They had no policy as a party—were not, as the New York Post put it, strong enough to dominate but only to "dicker."

Still the Cumminses and the La Follettes may find that, while the people distruct the Democrats, they have quite as deen a distrust of the men who drop their political fish into the same basket as the high tariff artists from New Jersey and New England. They may see no reason to believe that these "rebels" will do anything to upset the Aldriches, if, in doing so, they must risk the overthrow of the Republican machine. Tariff reform will never come in the United States until the emissaries of the gigh tariff men are ruthlessly hurled from power; and these latter will — like Samson—strive to bring down the pillars of the temple with them when they fall. What do the Aldriches care for the Republican party except as an instrument of their greed?

Here clearly is an opportunity for the Democrats. If they will secure for their party a leadership which can command the confidence of the people—of the Centre as well as the Radicals—they can offer to the men of the Middle West who really desire to slay Aldrichsm the only effective means of doing so. This change of leadership does not apply by any means solely to the one man who has been represented for a decade and a half as the incubus of the party. Mr. Bryan is a good fighter, whatever else he may be; and the party could better afford to carry him than many of the local leaders who have degraded and destroyed the Democracy in the States. Still it would undoubtedly be political wisdom to give the people an entirely new quarter deck. A new presidential candidate a good candidate for

ICED TEA.

How to Make and Serve This Refreshing Summer Drink.

However the doctors and health fearful may revile iced tea, it is bound to stay as long as thermometers are so unruly in summer. It is surprising, considering the amount of iced tea Americans consume, how rarely it is good.

The most scientific and supposedly healthful way to prepare it is to pour freshly brewed hot tea over a large lump of ice, then pour into glasses half filled with shaved ice.

More economical is it to make a small quantity of rather strong tea several hours before it is to be used, let it cool in the refrigerator and weaken to the desired consistency with iced water just before needed.

It is a mistake to think iced tea can be cooled by a few lumps in the pitcher. There must be either cracked or shaved ice in glasses to make it palatable.

Lemon is also better added before the meal than at it. The usual way is to pass a section of lemon to each guest Far better is the taste if both lemon and sugar are mixed with the tea when the iced water is added. Better yet is it to adopt the Russian plan of grating the rind of a lemon and pouring hot tea over it.

If lemon is passed, as it may have to be when some of the family do not like it, cut into lengthwise sections rather than thin rounds and pass in addition a small glass pitcher filled with extra lemon juice.

Mint leaves or lemon verbena added to iced tea, besides the lemon, gives a delicious flavor. It is also good with a little ginger syrup or a few drops of rum.

One hostess on gala occasions serves her iced tea poured cold over lemon, orange or pineapple sherbet. This is served in a punch bowl, and each guest fills her tall glass with the mixture. In this case cracked ice is not used.

The thinner and more slender an iced tea glass is the more refreshing it tastes. It should be stood on a glass saucer or tumbler coaster. If possible use long handled spoons.

USED AGAINST HER.

Congratulations the Actress Received on Her Engagement.

A London music hall belle who had just successfully "landed" an old and wealthy nobleman sued an unpopular manager, alleging that he had not paid her sufficiently well for her engagement at his hall. She won the case and was immediately inundated with flowery congratulations from her friends, all of whom were glad to see the manager go down.

Not content with her victory, however, the belle must needs crow over her beaten manager by packing up the choicest of these telegrams and dispatching them to his house, with the intimation that he might make what use of them he thought proper.

She regretted this last concession the next morning. Taking her at her word, the manager pasted the telegrams on a board outside the music hall, headed them "What Miss Flightle's friends think of her engagement" and left the public to assume engagement, the professional or the matrimonial, was meant.

Then followed such messages as "Good for you, old girl!" "Pinned the old horror at last!" "Don't let him wriggle off the hook!" "Stick to him till you get the dibs!" "Congratulations on your splendid haul!"

Jingoes v. Dingoes.

Australia has succeeded in taking all the sting out of the term jingo. Adherents of the fallen Ministry who were opposed to the offer of a Dreadnought to the Mother Country attacked the Imperialists by accusing them of jingo policy. The Imperialists defended themselves by stating that they preferred a jingo policy to a dingo policy. The contrast so caught popular fancy that it spread quickly through all the states, and Australians are now classified as dingoes or jingoes. The dingo, or wild dog, is such a contemptible beast, cunning and a propensity to bite the hand that feeds it, being its chief characteristics, that jingo is now regarded as a term of honor.

English Villages Without Churches.

England cannot be said to be lacking in churches, and yet there are remote districts that are sometimes put to strange devices for want of one. In the tiny village of East Horndon, in Essex, which possesses a railway station, but no church, service is held every Sunday evening in the station waiting-room. The congregation consists of the railway men and the people of the sparsely-inhabited neighborhood, which only needs a railway station because it is able to send milk to that devouring London, which must seem to be a very incomprehensible place to the simple villagers.

Startling Equine Sagacity.

A startling story of equine sagacity comes from the provinces. A horse was standing in the shafts of a carriage just outside the local theatre. It had a weary look, as of one that desired repose. Suddenly it brightened up, and before it could be stopped it made a dash for the box office. The reason for this unexpected behavior gave rise to much discussion till at last one of the crowd, more observant than the others, pointed out that the legend "To the Stalls" was written in large letters over the box office window.—London Globe.

What He Wanted.

The old man turned from his desk as his son-in-law entered the office.

"Well, what is it now?" he asked.

"I—er—have been thinking," answered the new member of the family, 'that you ought to give me a pension."

"Well, it's like this," explained the other. "Ever since I did your daughter the honor to marry her I have been dependent on you for support, and I want to be independent. See?"

August dust tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, go-nowhere feeling can be easily and quickly shaken off by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all druggists.

IMPORTING BUFFALOES.

Exciting Scenes Attended Transportation of New Herd.

Canada has now the largest, indeed the only considerable, herd of buffaloes in the world, and the stirring and even dangerous work has accompanied the assembling of that herd. Except for about one hundred head which have been at Banff, and which will now be transferred, the colony of buffaloes in Buffalo Park, Wainwright, Alta., has all been secured from the herd owned by Michael Pablo in Montana. Pablo's 600 or 700 buffaloes were the outgrowth of a small group of twenty purchased thirty years ago from "Walking Coyote," a Flathead Indian, returning from a great buffalo hunt in southern Alberta, so that Canada now secures her own, with interest, on payment, of course, of a considerable sum in cash, $900 per head.

Two years ago the first round-up of the Pablo herd commenced, the captives being shipped to Elk Island Park, at Lamont, Alberta. The ground here was unsuitable for a large herd, and the enclosure too small, so the Government secured a new park of 107,000 acres at Wainwright, on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 100 miles or so east of Edmonton. To this point 340 buffaloes were removed from Lamont a few weeks ago, now to be joined by 196 fresh from the latest round-up in Montana. Adventures and dangers, with narrow escapes from death, marked almost every day of the round-up. The animals ran wild over a country fifty miles in extent. Riders chased them to the valley of the Little Bitter Root, they into a lane which led to the Pend D'Oreille River. They then swam this and entered a large coral, from which they were driven into a smaller enclosure. When the rounding-up was finished, they were loaded into cages on wagons and hauled 36 miles to Ravalli, a railway station on the Northern Pacific, and then entrained for Canada. Every now and again a buffalo could stand the hounding no longer, and turned on his aggressors, resulting in such incidents as the impaling of Johnny Decker's horse, and the carrying of horse and rider on a buffalo's horn across the corral.

The Canadian Girl.

In the first instance, we must admit that the French-Canadian girl has remained quite aloof from her more modern sisters, and is in many respects like the Evangeline whom Longfellow described, the dark-tressed gentle Acadian whose love-story began in the far-off days when Grand-Pree had neither bolts nor bars. La petite Canadienne is a conservative, in fact, who follows her great-grandmothers' ways, and is akin to the Norman maidens of long ago. She is, says a writer in The Girl's Realm, gentle, industrious, and vivacious, a devout daughter of Mother Church, and usually gives herself at a very early age to a youth who is as fond as herself of the ways of their forefathers. In Quebec and the provinces along the Atlantic may be found many a Marie, Josephine, or Jacqueline, who might have given the New England poet the model for his ill-fated heroine. To the British world, however, the Canadian girl belongs to the English-speaking majority of the Dominion, and to her we are willing to give exhaustive attention. In connection with her qualities, it is almost impossible to avoid international comparisons, for the visitor from the United States finds points for divergence, while the English guest is likely to pronounce the Canadian girl very American.

Travels Far Into the North.

Miss Annie S. Nash of Carstairs, Alberta, will travel over a thousand miles straight north of Edmonton before she reaches Hay River, a Hudson Bay post, where she will wed Rev. Alfred J. Vale, an English Church missionary, formerly of Berlin, Ont., and a graduate of Wycliffe College, Toronto, in 1908. The trip will take in the neighborhood of two months to complete, and will be made by rail, stage, scow and river steamer. It is a trip scarcely ever made by a woman, and one that few men except traders take.

Miss Nash is accompanied by Archdeacon Lucas and wife of London, England, who are in Canada for a year's holiday. The archdeacon is going north to perform the marriage ceremony, and will probably spend the winter in that district with his wife, returning to London in the spring of 1910.

Miss Nash has had a wide and varied experience in the five or six years that she has been a trained nurse. Her early home was in Berlin, Ont.

Aged Indian Dies.

Old "Indian Dave" died in his wigwam in Gilford Township a few days ago, where he had made his home for 60 years. He was sure he had passed his 105th birthday. He was known to the oldest settlers in 1836, and was then considered quite old.

Dave claimed to be the son of Chief Nitmup of the Chippewa tribe, but was never recognized as such by his tribesmen. He was known as "Indian Dave," but was recorded as Dave Stecker as a citizen.

He spent the winter in his bark and hide hut manufacturing baskets and bows and arrows, and during the summer traveled about the resorts selling his wares. He is survived by one son, James.

A Private Still?

A private detective is being engaged at St. Catharines to look into the rumor that the "Indian Listers" of this vicinity have a private still where they manufacture the best of whisky for 20 cents a gallon. The still used is said to be a relic of the Scott Act days, when it was kept in active operation in Raleigh.

What to Push.

"Any one," remarked the old gentleman, "can build up a fortune if he has plenty of push."

"That depends upon the way the push is applied," rejoined the wise youth. "There isn't much money in pushing a parcel or a lawn mower."—St. Louis Republic.

Their Training.

"I should think baseball men would be particularly useful in the army in actual warfare."

"Why especially baseball men?"

"Because they would know better than others how to fight a pitched battle."—Boston Transcript.

FISHERS OF LUNENBERG.

They Are the Rivals of Gloucester Fat Cod Bank Heroes.

It is recognized that the fishermen of Gloucester have long monopolized fiction and poetry as being the real catchers of cod, and the most picturesque of those who make their living on the Grand Banks.

If you ask a Bluenose, that is a resident of Nova Scotia, who are the real bankers, he will tell you "the men of Lunenburg." Lunenburg is the rival of Gloucester in the hunt for cod, and a pretty husky rival, too, for fishermen from that seaport on the south shore of Nova Scotia are the backbone of that industry that is valued well over $3,000,000 a year.

The Lunenburg fishermen spend about half the year at home, but they do not use this time sitting around the docks spinning yarns. They are busy with lobster catching or in the woods. When March comes around they begin to make ready for the sea.

The schooners are put in order and stocked with provisions. On the Sunday nearest March 21 the churches hold special services, and prayers go up for safe and successful voyages. They are devout, these Bluenose fishermen, but they keep an eye on the profits, too.

The fishing schooners are small, rarely reaching 100 tons. The law requires vessels exceeding that size to carry a certified master, and the Lunenburg man can't see the use of passing examinations in navigation. With a compass and a dipsey lead the master of a banker can find his way in any weather.

The start from Lunenburg is like the start of a yacht race. Most of the bankers go out on the same day, and there is good-natured rivalry among the skippers as to who shall first anchor on the fishing grounds.

When a skipper makes a berth in a likely place real work begins. The dories, flat-bottomed boats about fifteen feet long, which are very seaworthy but don't look it, are put overboard and the trawls are set.

These trawls are something sizable in the way of fishing lines. The main line is from one to one and a half miles long, with a fringe of smaller lines which carry the hooks. The trawls are anchored at each end and are set like the spokes of a wheel whose hub is the schooner. The dories move up and down the trawls, taking off the fish and rebaiting the hooks. It sounds easy, but in a heavy sea it is ticklish business.

When a schooner has loaded full with fish, cut and salted down, she steals away from the shrieking medley of foghorns and makes for Lunenburg. It is a lucky ship which enters port without her colors at half-mast, which would indicate that one of her crew has gone. The fleet gets back from the spring trip about the end of May, unloads and sails back again on the summer trip, which lasts until autumn.

Room For Canadian Coal.

Of the large coaling trade of the West Indies, Canada gets practically no share, and yet there appears to be no reason why some of the coal might not be imported from Canada, as the greater part of it is steam coal. Trinidad and Barbadoes divide their importation of this article equally with the United States and Great Britain, while St. Lucia, which has the largest bunker coal trade, takes all its coal from the United States, reports the Canadian commissioner at Barbadoes. He adds:

"It may be remarked that Canada, last year, as during the last few years, has taken the greatest share of the exports of sugar and molasses, amounting to about 66 per cent. of the total export. Up to June 3 of the present year, exports of sugar, as taken from the records of the chamber of commerce, were 5,288 tons, 4,638 of which went to Canada; and of the total export of molasses—94,040 puncheons—18,088 puncheons went also to the same market.

New Forest Atlas.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has issued the first sheets of a new "forest atlas," which will include plans of the Dominion Forest Reserves, of which the surveys are now being carried on. The "legend" is now being sent out; this designates the marks used to denote natural features, the different species of trees and the amounts of timber that can be obtained per acre from timbered areas, entries of various kinds (such as homesteads, mineral lands, etc.), barns or brules, cuttings and sales, roads, trails, railways, canals, flumes, telegraph and telephone lines, buildings, etc. One of the smaller forest reserves, that known as "The Pines," situated near Prince Albert, Sask.—has already been mapped, and the map of the Riding Mountain Forest Reserve, in northwestern Manitoba is now in preparation. As surveys of the forest reserves and other forested districts are completed, maps of these will be prepared and added to the atlas.

Another Ice-Breaker.

The Lady Grey, the ice-breaker of the Dominion Government, is to be given a consort, and the Earl Grey has just been launched from the shipbuilding yards of the Vickers Company at Barrow-in-Furness. The new boat marks a considerable advance in size and speed, and it is hoped that it will prove even more successful than the Lady Grey, though the older boat has done good work in her three years of existence. Although the new vessel is built very powerfully and with a special view to the breaking of ice, the makers promise that she will be able to make seventeen knots an hour.

Of Canadian Parentage.

Among the girls presented at the last court was one at least, with a Canadian connection. That was the daughter of the Earl and Countess of Wharncliffe. Lady "Mollie" had a Canadian grandmother, for her grandfather, Gen. Sir Lionel Gallwey, of the Royal Engineers, who knew Canada well, married Miss MacDougall of Montreal, many years ago, and their daughter is the present Lady Wharncliffe.

The blueprints of Dyspepsia have been sharply traced in the stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this dreadful condition are compounded a prescription known as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. First, there are the nerve foods, "Heart and Nerves" nerves fail. Then are added the Heart Palpitation, or "inside" nerves follow. Don't drug the kidneys, or stimulate the Heart or Liver, says. That is wrong. Remember these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, the nerves that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all druggists.

CUSTOMS OF THE NAVY

SOME CURIOUS WAYS OF BRITISH LOWER DECKS.

Jack-Tar Has Various Means of Making His Protests to the Captain—Placards in the Christmas Decorations—Lionel Yexley Tells of Early Days on Whale Island When Fisher and Scott Were There.

"Ye gods and little fishes! What constitutions Britishers must have; salt pork and pea soup, and on the top of it rum, with the temperature of the lower deck about 120 degrees Fahrenheit! Still, Christmas is Christmas, and it takes more than tropical thunderstorms and salt pork to knock the spirit out of the average Englishman on that day."

Afterwards the men ranted and roared "like true British seamen," and danced in wild abandon and a thick fog of tobacco smoke, wearing little else than bathing costumes.

Such was a Christmas Day, typical of many spent by our lads in blue flying at foreign stations, which Mr. Lionel Yexley experienced while stationed in the Persian Gulf, and which he describes in his interesting book, "The Inner Life of the Navy" (Pitman). He also tells how Christmas is spent on board men-o'-war at home, and mentions that, should there be any little grievance affecting the men generally, suggestive mottoes are hung among the decorations, where the captain cannot fail to see them. "These, in ships where the captain takes an interest in the men, generally have the desired result."

Mr. Yexley spent many years in the navy, and was at Whale Island when that splendid gunnery school was in its infancy, and when the authorities were just beginning to awaken to the fact that the man behind the gun counts for something in warfare. All the men who arrived at the island for gunnery instruction were called Volunteers, and "the first thing that a Volunteer had impressed on his mind was that he knew nothing.' If you will bear in mind that you don't know what a rifle is, don't know how to put on your accoutrements, don't know how to turn to the left or right, we shall get on very well together,' was the dictum of the instructor. And from that position each man had to start."

In those days "Jacky" Fisher, now Sir John Fisher and First Sea Lord, was appointed captain, while on the staff of gunnery officers was Lieut. Percy Scott.—destined to revolutionise the whole gunnery of the navy—now a rear-admiral and Sir Percy Scott. No doubt there were faults in the system of training, for instance, too much trouble was taken over details, such as getting a man into the exact position supposed to be necessary to the proper firing of a gun, and this led to the catch phrase, "Attitude is the art of gunnery—whiskers make the man."

The curious fact is mentioned that "the British navy is the only uniformed fighting service of any civilized state that has the very doubtful honor of paying for its own uniform, and the British bluejacket is very loud and persistent in his demand to be relieved of what he considers an unfair tax on his scanty earnings." Until recent years Jack made his own clothes, but now he must buy them from the Admiralty ready-made. A sharp eye, however, was always kept upon the manner in which Jack cut his cloth.

The regulations, for instance, said that the size of the trouser leg at the knee should be 10 inches, and 11 inches at the foot, and added, "The measurement across the knee is always to be 1 inch less than at the foot." Then the pockets of the jumpers must be 6 inches deep and 3 inches wide, the top of the pocket to be so many inches from the line of the shoulder. At the home depots it was no uncommon thing for a sailor, if his clothes deviated from the official scale, to have them ruthlessly ripped up with a knife so as to make them impossible for wear until they had been altered.

The issue of rum is an interesting daily event in the life of a bluejacket. Every man who has reached the age of twenty is entitled to a spirit ration of half a gill of rum daily, which, before it reaches him, is mixed with three half-gills of water, making half a pint in all. A cask of rum is taken out of the spirit room at six bells (eleven o'clock a.m.), in the presence of various officers, including the captain of the hold, with his implements — spirit pump, measures, etc.

The latter pumps out the necessary quantity, after which the rum cask is re-bunged and returned to the spirit room, which is then locked up until the next day, the keg being placed usually outside the captain's door under the charge of the sentry. After the officers' allowances have been drawn off the rum is mixed with the proper proportion of water and served out to the men.

Effect of a Shave.

"Men have one advantage," said the woman, "and that is when they are shaved they are so sure of themselves. If they are not all right it is the fault of the barber, but if they have a good barber, why, then, their self-assurance is complete. I sat in the lobby of a big hotel yesterday looking at a big fat man who had come out from under the hands of his barber, and I never saw anything so placid with pure complacency as his large, fat face. I wish I could have been so certain that mine was all right as he was of his."

Swearing It In.

"The story's true," declared the married man. "I swear it." And, holding up his hand, he took the oath.

"We believe you," said his listeners. "You needn't swear."

The married man put down his hand, somewhat abashed.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "I have to swear to the truth of my statements so often to my wife that it has become second nature."

Staterooms and Portholes.

An experienced traveler warns the uninitiated against paying from $5 to $20 extra for an outside stateroom on ocean liners. The inside rooms she has found to be perfectly comfortable and perfectly ventilated, and the portholes in the outside ones she considers a doubtful advantage. "They are kept locked," she says, "most of the time unless the weather is very pleasant, and even in calm weather they sometimes ship a deluge of salt water. Dirty water, too, swept from a deck above by the cleaners, may pour into a porthole of a room below, and the noise from the deck is annoying." Why, then should one pay extra for a porthole?"

FOR PRETTY FINGERS.

Consolation For Women With Homely Finger Tips.

Now that the gloveless time of year is pressing hard upon the season that renders covering for the hands imperative the maiden who has been neglecting her dainty digits is in despair.

Injudicious ways of trimming nails are partly responsible for badly shaped finger tips, writes a manicurist of experience. Nails serve as a brace for the flesh, and if the prop is unwisely cut away the skin will sag. Thus the effect of cutting the nails too far at the corners is easily understood, for the flesh that should be upheld has nothing to cling to, and a broad, flat tip is developed.

It is absolutely impossible to make a wide nail almond shape, and, this being the case, the sooner heroic measures are dropped in effort to make the change the better. It is this unwise attempt to make narrow a surface which is wide that is the beginning of the trouble. An inexperienced person imagines that by cutting away the nail at the side its aspect will be altered. This is true, but only for the worse, a fact to be remembered each time a file or pair of scissors is used.

Consolation for a woman with homely finger tips lies in the fact that much improvement is gained merely in shaping the tops, letting the sides alone. If narrowness is achieved it will be by making them oval on the edge. A pointed top merely makes the rest of the nail look broader by contrast, whereas one slightly rounded does not call attention to the wide surface. It is always a mistake to clip the nails with scissors unless the final finish is given with a file. Even then scissors should not be used, for their effect is to thicken the nail and take away the transparency.

Once the use of the file is learned it works quickly, and better lines are made with it. Yet, excellent as it is, there is one disadvantage—that with it one can go lower in the edges, pulling down the corners more than is likely to happen with the scissors. If any rule can be given about when to stop filing at the side it is as soon as there is the least sensation, although it may not be a positive pain. But the instant live flesh makes itself evident any pushing or parting must cease.

HOTEL CIRCULARS.

The Genius Who Originates This Misleading Literature.

Does anybody's appreciation flow out in proper measure toward that descriptive genius who writes the summer hotel circulars? He is given as his theme a bleak, clapboard structure, an architectural blot of most unfireproofed material, of stuffy rooms divided by walls so thin that the corridors partake of the nature of dormitories, of inadequate bathing accommodations and noisy parlors, the whole offered at an exorbitant rate. It is his business to so describe this trap for the holiday seeker that without declaring that the hotel has what it has not or is not what it is it shall appear to the reader of circulars an earthly paradise, beyond all others in the country around. Now, how does he proceed? He begins with the attractions which may have turned the eyes of the traveler thither, the everlasting hills or the illimitable ocean. Regarding these he has all literature to support him, and he draws freely from his support. He works himself into a fine quotational frenzy. He mentions sunsets, rainbows and cool breezes, all such things for any failure to produce which Providence and not the innkeeper may be held responsible. Then he mentions the legends of the surrounding country—there are plenty of legends that may just as well become local in one place or another, as, for example, the "Lovers' Leap." And when at last the moment comes in which he must approach the mention of those attractions for which your landlord is alone responsible—cuisine and cleanly comfort and prompt service—does his description now become compromising? Not at all. Not for nothing has he learned the uses of indefinite enthusiasm. He classes these matters in one comprehensive phrase and declares them "simply grand."

Inappropriate Diplomas.

No matter how proudly the fair coeds of the June graduating class of 1908 gaze upon the sheepskin diplomas they received at that time, that sheepskin tells them that "he" instead of "she" got the honor. This year the registrar is gazing over such manuscript to avoid a recurrence.

The joke of giving a masculine diploma to a feminine graduate was played all unmeaningly upon these fair co-eds by the engraving company which did the work for the University of Minnesota. Upward of 200 of these papers were issued. So far as is known, only two women of the entire class noticed a mistake in the wording. When the 550 diplomas intended for the class in question arrived at the university last May it was found that the engraving company had failed to take into consideration the fact that 200 members of the class were women and sent diplomas intended for men only.

In the space left for the name of the graduate the names of the girls were entered in a correct manner, but the wording which followed it was carefully stated that "he" had been found qualified by the regents to receive the diploma and that for this reason the diploma was granted to "him."

Diplomas intended for this year's graduating class were carefully scrutinized.

"Sausages Grown Here."

One of the natural curiosities of South Mashonaland is a "German-sausage-tree." It bears deep-crimson flowers, 9 inches long, in blazing bunches of twelve; but when the tree fruits into fat, substantial, sausage-like pods, there remain no leaves, and it looks like a sausage larder indeed.

These beans are 20 inches long, and 12 inches in girth, and are beloved of the native tribe of Shangaans and bobeans. But the tribe of the Karenga are a very superior people, and would never deign to eat them. There can be no reason for this, as, at least, no one can accuse these "sausages" of being connected in any way with dogs or cats!

SIMCOE'S HOME.

Famous Lieutenant-Governor's Last Residence Built in 1800.

High among the hills surrounding Honiton, the little country town which is famed far and wide as the centre of the lace-making industry of Devon, England, stands Wolford Lodge, the pleasant English home where General Simcoe, the first Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, spent the last few years of his eventful life. Weakened by the wounds and hardships endured in the disheartening campaigns of the American Revolutionary war, and worn with his anxious toil for the benefit of the new British province which it had been given to him to organize in the wilderness, he came back to England in 1796 to seek well-earned repose. But rest was not for him. Almost immediately he was sent back across the Atlantic to put down an insurrection in the West Indies. Returning again to his native land, he began, about the year 1800, to build himself a spacious mansion on a green slope deep amongst the gently-rounded, well-cultivated hills of lovely Devon. Surely no toil-worn warrior ever found a more restful spot in which to spend the evening of his days, for still, despite a hundred years of progress, despite vastly increased population, despite railways and motor-cars, the whole land speaks of peace.

The lodge was built in solid fashion by the General round an old farm-house, which was on the estate when he bought it. Except for the addition of some large bow-windows, the house has been little altered from the original design, and much of the old furniture remains in its spacious rooms. So large are they that an ancient four-post bedstead appears a comparatively small piece of furniture, and the General's own bedroom is larger than many a village church. In the different rooms numerous relics connected with him have been carefully preserved.

On either side of the staircase window, in the square entrance hall, are two venerable flags, the colors of the "Queen's Rangers," a provincial corps of Loyalists, which was raised by Simcoe and did gallant service during the revolutionary war.—Emily P. Weaver.

Statue to La Verendrye.

A strong appeal for a proper memorial to La Verendrye, the discoverer of the Canadian Northwest, is made by Le Manitoba; and in addition to urging that a monument be erected to the great explorer in St. Boniface, the paper makes a suggestion which might be highly acceptable to the organization committee of the Canadian Exposition and Selkirk Centennial, and one which probably has not occurred to that body before. It is that the name of the illustrious pathfinder, La Verendrye, should be associated with the equally illustrious coloniser, Lord Selkirk, in the exposition.

La Verendrye's son was one of the victims of one of the greatest and the earliest tragedies of the frontier, in which he and his companions were massacred by the Sioux, at Fort St. Charles, the site of which was discovered last summer by the Jesuit fathers, who for two years had prosecuted a diligent search for it. Now it is reported that at the request of Mgr. Langevin and of Mgr. Ireland, the American Government has decided to reserve the site of old Fort St. Charles as national property, with a view to the erection of a memorial in the future.

What He Was Having.

A very familiar and also rather picturesque figure in Montreal newspaperdom passed away recently, when William Jarvis — the boys all knew him as "Bill"—handed in his last report to the great Editor-in-Chief. And now wherever newspapermen get together in Montreal, stories are told of "Bill" Jarvis and his many amusing and kindly peculiarities. One of the best of these yarns is to the effect that he once went into a restaurant in Montreal, where two other newspapermen were eating oysters.

"Come on and have some oysters, Bill," they invited.

Bill didn't care if he did, and in a few moments a half dozen Malpeques were laid out before him. The other men were using Tabasco on theirs, and Bill picked up the bottle. Without noticing what he was doing, he simply deluged one of his oysters with the fiery stuff and gathering it up put it in his mouth. Immediately he made a wild dash for the bar.

"Water! water!" he gasped.

The bar-keep hastened up and inquired politely: "What will you have, sir—Redmer or Caledonia or—?"

But Bill couldn't stand it a moment longer.

"Oh, you fool," he roared, "any kind—any kind that's wet!"

Victoria as Gretna Green.

Recently in a single week 146 marriages of non-residents were celebrated in Victoria, B.C. It appears that prospective bridal couples resent the new law, now enforced in the neighboring cities of Seattle, Bellingham, Tacoma and Portland, requiring medical examination and certificates of physical fitness from applicants for marriage licenses. In preference to compliance they take one of the daily steamers from Seattle—sometimes as many as twenty couples a day—and the sheriff's office enjoys a phenomenal business at $5 per wedding ticket. The clergymen of Victoria are kept busy with this "transient trade," and indeed it has been suggested that Sheriff Richards should meet all boats with an omnibus connecting direct with the marriage bureau. That other border city, Windsor, has long enjoyed a reputation as a Gretna Green, but it never experienced anything like the present rush of marrying visitors to Victoria.

$90,000---7 Per Cent.

9,000 Shares 7 Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 a Share) Offered at Par with 40 Per Cent Immediate Bonus of Common Stock We Reserve the Right to Withdraw Offer Without Notice and to Return any Subscription Received Too Late. Previous Offerings Were Immediately Oversubscribed.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative orfriend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than teardown; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additianal capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

Are Preparing for the Big Harvest

Regina, Sask., Aug. 18.—The people of the central west are preparing these days for the harvest. It holds out excellent promise and as a result the whole world and his wife is in a cheerful frame of mind. Under the guiding exterior of the collective western man there is an undercurrent of anxiety, for the harvest is not yet reaped. Therefore he is refraining from boasting, and profiting by past experiences, will wait till the grain is threshed before spending the dollars it represents.

The West is too big nowadays to be sized up by any one correspondent. Conditions vary too widely. The general tenor of the reports from Manitoba and Alberta is most cheerful, and from personal knowledge of a part and information about other parts of Saskatchewan, I believe it is safe to say an excellent crop is assured. Reports of barley and oat harvesting come in from widely scattered points. The binder is at work in some few fields, but cutting of wheat will not be general in this province earlier than the 25th. This will be in good season, too.

The grain fields present an inspiring sight, and one that does not pall on the beholder even if he has seen the like often before. Wheat fields covering anywhere from fifty acres to a whole section of 640 acres across which sunshine and shadow are playing and billowing in warm summer wind, are really worth seeing, not only as a spectacle, but for all they imply. On the trains or driving the country these days, such a picture unrolls mile after mile before one.

The wheat crop of this province promises to be a good one as a whole. Untoward conditions of a marked nature have not been present in any large area, but, rather, favorable conditions. There has been some damage from hail. This only affects certain districts as hail storms sweep a narrow strip across the country carrying desolation to some farms, while farms near by escape. The Saskatchewan Government has ceased writing hail insurance, and hence is not so fully advised of the occurrence of hail as in past seasons. However, it believe the damage is comparatively small.

July passed with little damage, but on the night of the 5th of August on the night of the 5th of August a bad storm swept across from Swift Current to Outlook and across the Hanley country, doing great damage where it struck. I was in a gasoline launch on Last Mountain Lake at the time, and we found the edge of the storm of wind that reached us severe enough. Inky black clouds swept across the horizon to the north with great speed. Wheat floods that a few weeks before I saw looking promising were destroyed.

Auguss so far has been unusually rainy. The downfall in July also was very heavy, while that of June was less than usual. The effect of this large rainfall was good on the whole, being particularly noticeable in bringing on the more backward grain crops. Farmers would be well pleased, however, to see little rain for the balance of the month. A few light showers are excellent, as they cause the kernel to fill up well, but frequent or heavy showers are not desired. Monday saw a very heavy fall of rain.

VERY HEAVY WHEAT.

On the Regina plains some of the wheat is so heavy it is ripping. I came down from Prince Albert on the third, and all along the line of the railway the crops are looking fine. There is a good stand of straw and the grain is well headed. Occasional fields are seen where the wheat is over four feet high, but mostly it runs from three to three and a half feet high. It is even over the fields, but occasionally is almost too heavy a stand, showing signs of lodging. A tinge of yellow was showing in many fields, while the straw is maturing at the bottom showing that cutting is not far off. Later I drove over the Lumsden Plains, eastward to Long or Last Mountain Lake. Regina's beautiful summer resort, and saw many as fine a field of wheat as could be desired. The plain east of Lumsden is not considered to be as good land as that to the west, and has only been settled of recent years but it would be hard to better much of the crop.

For miles around Regina and Moose Jaw in every direction the stand of grain is very heavy. Many fields give promise of equalling the bumper yields of 1905 and 1906. On the Moose Mountain line, east of Regina, there is an unbroken stretch of fine prairie land for 120 miles covered with a crop which is a joy to behold. For the past two seasons this country has been unfortunate, being badly affected by the frost in 1907 and by the hot winds last year, so that a good crop will be doubly welcome. I have not seen the magnificent lands along the Soo line since June, but all reports agree that the crop is most promising.

A horse rancher who lives in Regina gave me a striking illustration of the way the country is being brought under productive cultivation. Three years ago he moved his ranch from the vicinity of the Dirt Hills south of Rouleau, going west, to land many miles south of Swift Current. He returned from his new ranch on the first of August, and says he drove for fifty miles through such crops as he never expected to see growing in that country. At a French settlement there was 150 people at mass on the previous Sunday.

OLDER PORTIONS DO WELL.

The rancher says he made a mistake in settling on good land and not going further back into the hills for his range. "I guess I shall have to get out of the business," he concluded.

The older portions of the Province along the main line of the C.P.R., promise well, the conditions being excellent so far. What is required now to ensure a prosperous year in the West is about four weeks of good weather. It is rash to prophecy a bumper crop with dangers from frost still to be overcome, but with cutting in good season as seems reasonably assured now is hoped for. A good yield with prevailing prices will means great prosperity to the Central West. The set-back of the panic of 1907, and the damage done to the crops by the frost has not been overcome as yet wholly. It has made the West more conservative, and the revival of business has been on a sound basis. A good year would mean much to the commercial world. With ordinarily favorable weather until the the middle of September at the least a good average crop of all grains is assured and in many districts one above the average. The increase in area under cultivation would offset in the aggregate a crop even below the average, so that it is safe to reckon on the Western crop adding materially to the wealth of the Dominion this year, even more than it has in past years. While the people of the West recognize that all danger is not past as yet they are in a very cheerful and hopeful state of mind. Growth and improvement are moving on with steady pace.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for food that was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all: "don't pay unless health first returns". And I back my Restorative with a signed and sealed 30 day "No risk, No pay" guarantee.

I gladly pledge to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the manner or else post their prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys are wrong, then test Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not claim the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Years ago I cast away that nonsense idea in medicine. The books believe will best tell you how I am succeeding.

Those books also tell of a fine hidden "double nerve," no larger than a silken thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, actually gives to the Heart its power. In time, its nerve-power nothing or impulse.

Those books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "double" or power nerves. They tell how the Restoratives are especially made to reach and rejuvenize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of this you will find why I am able to say, "it is from IT to HIM".

This is why I say "take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to know my medicines to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So drop me a line please—and then you have my guarantee and pledge. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me on your case, your home physician, my advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is at your service. Address your simple request, be sure you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 32, Racine, Wis.

marked nature have not been present in any large area, but, rather, favorable conditions. There has been some damage from hail. This only affects certain districts as hail storms sweep a narrow strip across the country carrying desolation to some farms, while farms near by escape. The Saskatchewan Government has ceased writing hail insurance, and hence is not so fully advised of the occurrence of hail as in past seasons. However, it believe the damage is comparatively small.

July passed with little damage, but on the night of the 5th of August on the night of the 5th of August a bad storm swept across from Swift Current to Outlook and across the Hanley country, doing great damage where it struck. I was in a gasoline launch on Last Mountain Lake at the time, and we found the edge of the storm of wind that reached us severe enough. Inky black clouds swept across the horizon to the north with great speed. Wheat floods that a few weeks before I saw looking promising were destroyed.

ALLIGATOR NABS MELON THIEF

Saurian Police Prove Effective Guard over Patch.

Cape Charles, Va., Aug. 18.— Edward Thompson's watermelon plantation near Horntown a few miles distant from Cape Charles, is policed by alligators. One of these alligators last night caught John Ellison, a colored youth, 11 years old, in the act of lifting a juicy melon from the vine. The alligator seized the boy by the leg and held him fast. The young negro's screams brought Thompson, who took the thief into custody.

Thompson has one of the largest watermelon plantations in Virginia. In recent years the depredations of his neighbors have cost Thompson several thousands of dollars. He determined to put a stop to the thefts.

Last spring he had a number of alligators shipped to his farm from Florida. The animals were established in the melon patches and their presence was widely advertised to the population. No one but the Ellison boy had ventured into the Thompson patches this season.

Conquering the Rockies

The C. P. R's Colossal Work at the "Big Hill" completed.

Work has just been completed on the most colossal piece of tunnelling work that has ever been attempted in Canada, in the finishing of the two line of the Canadian Pacific between Field and Hector, which will add several miles to the mile of tunnelling and a couple of bridges, but will so cut the "Big Hill" grade as to more than double the tractive power meant the excavation of nearly three-quarters of a million of cubic yards of virgin rock, the employment of a thousand men for nearly two years, the boring of about a mile and a half of tunnels through mountains ten thousand feet high, and the building of two bridges over the Kicking Horse river, it is estimated that it will prove a splendid investment for the C. P. R., as it will reduce this big grade from 4.5 a maximum of 2.2. This will mean that the biggest obstacle to the running of trains over the Rocky Mountains has been removed, and that in future on this section of the line two engines will be able to do much more work than four engines have hitherto been able to do, at much less expense to the company, and with an almost complete elimination of the ever-present risk to life of operating trains on a steep grade.

Mr. James A. Macdonell, head of the Vancouver firm of Macdonell, Gzowski & Co., who had the constructing this big work, stated that the whole work had been completed so far as the contractors were concerned, some days ago, and that the miles of tunnels and cutting were turned over to the company. All that now remained, said Mr. Macdonell, was to complete the ballasting and track-laying, and then this important improvement to the main line would be ready for trains.

"This improvement," said Mr. Macdonell, "has meant 8¼ miles of work, of which 1¼ miles were tunnelled under mountains of ten thousand feet or more. While it increases the length of the line by 4¼ miles, at a cost of about $1,500,000, it will mean the reduction of the grade from 4.5 to 2.2 at the worst point, while the general grade will be less than 2 per cent.

"The result of this will be that where on the old track with its big grade it took four engines to handle a train, now only two engines will be needed. And where the four engines used to be able to only make four or five miles an hour, the two engines on the new line will be able to make twenty-five. In this way the cost of operating a train over this difficult piece of line will be cut to about one-third of present cost, with an improvement in the time of running, while the element of danger inseparable from high grade, has been practically eliminated. It is these factors which have induced the C. P. R. to go to such tremendous expense to cut out the famous 'Big Hill' grade.'

Put in brief, the work which has now been completed is as follows:—Length of two tunnels, 1¼ miles; length of cutting outside of tunnels, 7 miles; increase in length of track, 4¼ miles; reduction in grade, from 4.5 to 2.2; approximate cost of work, $1,500,000; number of men employed, about 1,000, with complete outfit of steam equipment. Time of work, twenty months, from October, 1907, to July, 1909; rock removed, about 650,000 cubic yards.

To cut out this enormous amount of rock, of which there were 500,000 cubic yards in the open cutting and 150,000 cubic yards in the tunnelling an unprecedented amount of blasting was done. During the twenty months of work, Mr. Macdonell stated that no less than 75 carloads of dynamite had been used, or upwards of 1,500,000 pounds of the explosive. The cost of this almost unthinkable quantity of explosives alone came to over $250,00.

The conformation of the new track, said Mr. Macdonell, is most peculiar. Coming from the east the road first enters the western corkscrew tunnel of 3,209 feet under Cathedral Mountain. Emerging from the tunnel twist the track runs back east across the Kicking Horse river, and then enters the eastern spiral tunnel of 2,910 feet under Wapta Mountain, and after describing an elliptic curve emerges to again cross the Kicking Horse westward. The whole thing is a perfect maze, the railway doubling back upon itself and crossing the river twice in order to cut down the grade. The two tunnels alone involved an excavation of 130,000 cubic yards of rock, while over 500,000 yards were blasted out in the other cuttings.

During the tunnel work the contractors for the first time in Canada operated steam shovels by compressed air, one of these machines being installed at the working head in each tunnel, the cutting being worked from opposite ends. Despite the complicated work caused by the spiral shape of the tunnels, they met exactly, and the work has been completed with marvelous exactness.

This is not merely the greatest piece of tunnelling ever attempted in Canada, but the first introduction of this spiral system of tunnels on this continent. The successful completion of this vast work is regarded with relief by the officials of the C. P. R. Contractors have been congratulated all sides over their work, the more so that it was executed in so short a period of time, and without a single strike amongst the employees.

CITY LEAGUE BALL

Saturdays games practically decides The Championship.

The game between the T.A.S. and Park street team tomorrow, will almost decide the championship of the league. If Park street wins the game they will have the league clinched, but if, on the other hand, the T.A.S. team wins, two and perhaps three more games will have to be played. These, however, would not amount to very much as the T.A.S. and Park street nines are the strongest teams in the league.

If the T.A.S. win they will have to play the Struths and West Ends, but as they have already beaten these two teams before, they feel confident that should they win on Saturday, they will have the league within their grasp.

However, as the hard says;—"You never can tell." The T.A.S. might win on Saturday, and again in the following week against the West Ends, but when it comes to playing the Struths, they may get badly beaten in that case they would be tied for first place with the Park street nine, and the two teams would have to meet again for the championship.

Whatever may be the result the game on Saturday is sure to be a hummer. Both teams are practicing hard in the meantime, and will have on their strongest line-ups for the occasion.

If such a conclusion were arrived at, the stomach would in all probability be sent to Provincial Analyst Elliot for examination.

About 6,000 People Left for the West

The Canadian Pacific Had Three Heavy Trains, Totalling Forty-Nine Cars

Toronto, Aug. 20.—Mr. James Hartney, emigration agent of the Manitoba Government in Toronto, gave out the following statement in connection with the harvesters leaving yesterday for the western provinces:

"The excursion from Toronto consisted of three trains, and took 2,022 men from the city alone.

"On the trains from Teeswater, Owen Sound and another western branch of the C.P.R., 1,046 harvesters went. These were transferred to the Sudbury line at Bolton Junction.

"Three hundred and sixty went by the train starting from Goderich and were transferred at West Toronto.

"The C.P.R. regular train No. 81 did not take any from the city, but picked up 400 at stations be picked up about 400 at stations between Toronto and Sudbury.

"The Grand Trunk, which also had excursion trains on took about 500. They will join the C.P.R. at North Bay.

"Advices I have received state that 1,000 men left from various Ontario points east of Sharbot Lake.

"The total number leaving for the western wheat fields on the first series of excursions was thus 5,338.

Winnipeg, Aug. 20.— With the wheat harvest well under way, it is apparent that the yield is good, but not exceitingly large in proportion . This is a harrowing statement to make, especially in the estimation of every man who is short on the market and every individual and firm which must buy grain in the open market, whether it is to protect contracts or for manufacturing purposes.

Western Canada is suffering from the evil that has cursed every agricultural country since the Pharaoph oppressed the farmers of fertile Egypt. The country is all right and the people are all right. The farmers are big men broadened by experience in many climes. They farm on a scale that would make a prosperous Ontario farmer look like a back yard truck gardner. They are growing rich by a very simple method, by working hard and spending nothing except for land and the education of their children.

ROBBING THE SOIL.

Everything being equal, a man of ordinary discernment can understand that the increased production in the West must be represented largely by the increased acreage. This should be, and is on a uniform scale, according to the new sod turned over each year. It is correct in theory that the increase generally should be substantial as rapicly as farmers begin to improve their soil and undertake intensive farming, but in practice a generation takes from the soil all it will yield and the next generation pays the bill. That's what the Canadian West is doing, just as the American West has done. There is no immediate need for fertilizer, even in those sections of Manitoba which have grown wheat steadily on the same piece of land for thirty years, but every schoolboy knows what this robbing of the soil means. There must be gradually but steady deterioration of quanity and quality. Therefore the chief increase in grain production in Western Canada must come for this generation from increased acreage. This increase today is substantial in Manitona, higher in Alberta and British Columbia, and still higher in Saskatchewan.

Stomach Forwarded to Toronto for Analysis

Norwood, Aug. 19.—Drs. Sutton, Pettigrew and Buck last night completed the post-mortem examination of the two victims of Tuesday afternoon's tragedy at the Willoughby home on the Asphodel and Dummer boundary, and while the doctors maintain strict silence as to the result of their investigations, they are believed to corroborate the opinion expressed in the former despatches that the shooting was entirely accidental, and that the father died from heart failure resulting from the shock. Dr. Sutton, who has charge of the post-mortem, has forwarded the stomach and liver of the father to Toronto for examination. In the case of the little girl, death must have been instantaneous, as it has been ascertained that the charge pierced the heart.

The statement in some of the Toronto papers that Willoughby purchased strychnine at a drug store in Norwood recently is denied positively. Your correspondent made inquiries at both drug stores last night, and was assured that the statement is altogether wrong.

Burleigh Falls Power

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—The option given at the request of the Council of the City of Peterborough is about expired, and I presume that you have obtained the engineer's report which you assured me you could obtain and if so I have no doubt that it verifies and more than verifies any statements that I have made and your council is now in a position to at once for all decide whether you want a municipally owned and developed power for the city of Peterborough, and the cheapest power, and consequently the greatest inducements of any city in the Province for manufacturing industries, or whether on the other hand you have made up your mindto leave the power and the future of the city in thehands of private companies with the naturally resulting mobopoly.

The opportunity of acquiring Burleigh is the last opportunity your city will have of acquiring a power worth having and developing by a municipal plant and it is also the logical and only power for the city of Peterborough to develope. It is situated in the right direction. By building a power line from Burleigh you can have a main trunk line on to which you can hitch Buckhorn, Lakefield and any all the river powers that you may at any time hereafter acquire.

Alsoby acquiring Burleigh you will shut the door to any further development by private companies of any of the powers to the north of you as none of the others are big enough to enter into competition with you and when for sale you can consequently get them at reasonable cost.

If on the other hand you inform me next week that you turn the option down we will proceed at once to make arrangements for the development of this and other power by a private company. A private company which will market the power at competitive prices and where the best market can be obtained and a considerable portion of it will be marketed elsewhere than in Peterborough. So far as your city is concerned this will of course be an advantage but you can never be in the same position to compete for incoming industries against the various other cities and towns in the province as you would be if you did own the power yourselves and were enabled to offer power to industries at the exceedingly low rate that you can offer it with all the advantages of a cheap capital, cheap development and operation which as a municipality you might have.

Is it too big for you to undertake when Guelph, a smaller city, is undertaking an annual expenditure of $60,000 and for only 2500 horse power. The price you are being asked is a mere bagatelle considering, (1st) That you have the power without rental; (2nd) That you get a dam built and maintained forever without cost to you, which is alone worth more than the whole price asked; (3rd). Your development is easy and tranamission short; (4th), It is the natural nucleus for the addition of smaller powers which cannot be priftably handled alone.

The total annual charge on the power users for orginal cost of this power will only be about $1.12 per horse power per annum while the leases granted by the Dominion Government for other powers on the river is $2 per horse power.

It is however for your council to say and to say definitely and finally, say also whether you will turn down the option on your own responsibility or whether you will leave it for the people to say.

R. J. McLAUGHLIN.

The Canadian Alpine Club

The Alpine Club of Canada is a prosperous institution with objects and aims similar to those of the parent Alpine Club in London, which is the father of all such clubs. The president is Mr. A. O. Wheeler of the Topographical Survey, and it could scarcely have a better one, for to intimate acquaintance with large areas of the Canadian Rockies; and wide knowledge of much more considerable ones, he combines geniality of disposition, and tact, with business capacity, and under his Rkilful manage ment the Alpine Club of Canada is bound to grow and prosper. Last July it opened a club house at Banff, Alberta, which accomodates thirty persons.

The objects of the Canadian A. C. are similar to those of "the" A. C., but there are differences; and amongst them there is this, that the former has an annual, out-of-doors camp in the mountains, and the latter does not. The first of these camps was held in 1906, the second in 1907, the third was at Rogers' Pass in 1908, and this year's one was held at Lake O'Hara. The attendance at these camps has constantly increased. This year 177 persons came along, no doubt very much owing to the facilities afforded by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Lake O'Hara (6,664 feet) is situated in British Columbia, about seven miles south of the Station Hector, near the Great Divide, but nine miles or more (3½ hours in time) from it by the path which must be taken, good as a mountain path, though miry in places. A subsidiary camp who arrived too late to get up the same night to the main one, which was located about 200 feet above the lake upon an open piece of grassy ground. All round about there were bold peaks (amers. Most of these mountains were Hungabee (11,447), Baddle (10,876), toria (11)355 feet), Mount Lefroy, and Odaray (10,165), encircling the lake, and reflected in its glassy waters ended, some more than once.

Sixty tents were dotted about over this large open space. In the centre there was the kitchen, dining tent, and official tents. In front room was reserved for the camp-fire. The camp was graced by numerous members of the fair sex, some of whom wore wonderful costumes, that would task the pen of a milliner to describe, which was brought about by one of the camp regulations, prescribing that "no lady climbing who wears skirts or bloomers will be allowed to take a place on a rope as these have been found a distinct source of danger to the party making the climb. Knickerbockers with puttees or gaiters and sweater have been found serviceable and safe." It was added, however, that "skirts are fashionable round the camp fire." So; in obeyment of orders, knickerbockers, puttees, gaiters, sweaters, and variations thereof were the rage, and no accidents occurred! or, at least, none have been reported.

Meals were served three times a day. Beans and bacon, jam and marmalade were abundant! drinks were scarce and whiskey was unknown. Excursions were made between meal one and meal three. After that was over the sitting round the camp-fire began. There were songs, speeches, recitations, etc., etc. The sittings were kept up late, and the proceedings terminated with "God Save the King" which Victoria echoed to Hungabee.

Amongst the better known persons who attended the camp we noted Dr. T. Anderson (York England) A. c.; Mr. Amery (London), A. C. Dr. Benson (Dublin); Prof. H. Dixon (Manchester), A. C.; Mrs. Henshaw, authority on Wild Flowers of Canadian Mountains; Dr. Hickson (Montreal); McGill University; Mr. G. Hastings, A. C.; Mr. H. H. Lyman, F. R. G.S. Mr. A. L. Mumm (London), A. C.; Prof. H. Parker, (U. S. A.), Columbia University; Mr. G. Solly (Birkenhead), A. C., Mr. G. Vaux (Philadelphia), authority on glacial motion in the Canadian mountains; Mr. Edward Whymper (Teddington, England), A. C.

Will the Council Have Proposition Ready re Burleigh Falls Power

Another week has gone by and still no council meeting has been called. Once more the city's option on Burleigh Falls has expired and the council has done nothing. Mr. R J. McLoughlin, representing the Central Ontario Power Company, has written to each alderman, the mayor, and the city press to the fact that the option has aboutexpired and asks what the council intends to do about it. The people would like to know exactly the same thing aswould also about one-half or more of the aldermen. What the other half know or want to know is a mystery.

It is a fact however, that Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Special Power Committee, has asked more than once to have a council meeting called to dispose of the power question. For some reason none has been called although there was talk of a meeting.

Mr. McLaughlin rightly asks of the aldermen, "Will you turn the option down on your own responsibility or will you leave it for thepeople to say?" The company offered to pay the expense of submitting the bylaw to the people and they should be at least treated fairly. Mr. McLaughlin's letter is a very fair one and he places the position of the company before the council and the people in a mild form. He is reasonable and his company had every right to expect at least sincerity on the part of Peterborough's city council.

Why has not the engineer been instructed to proceed with his work?

Why is the power question blocked and tied up?

Do the aldermen know what power there actually is at Burleigh and what its value is? If so they should make public their information.

If, on the other hand, they had no intention of considering the purchase of Burleigh Falls they should have said so long ago instead of tying up the company all summer.

TheCentral Ontario Power Company are not particularly stuck on selling out to Peterborough. This is not the only market for electric power. But there is no other town in Eastern Ontario that needs electric power more than does Peterborough, and the council is doing nothing to secure the power.

Therewas some talk yesterday and last night of a council meeting being called for Monday night. Notices havenot yet been sent out, however, nor has the meeting been called.

The Elmina

(Special to The Times.)

Portland, Me., Aug. 20.—The Elmina won the Commodore's Cup for schooners during the long cruise of the New York Yacht Club from New York to Portland. The boats encountered a big gale going up the Atlantic,and it was a hard task for many to get through the thirty-five mile northerly blast. The Aurora finished second.

Hunter Never Refers to His Awful Crime

(Special to The Times.)

Lindsay, Aug. 20.—I never saw the like of Hunter during my years as governor of this jail," remarked Mr. Jackson this morning.

"He does not seem to realize his position at all. Sits around and laughs and talks and acts as though he was under no such serious a charge.

Hunter has spent nearly two weeks in jail now and the man is ingood health and bright spirits. Not for a moment does he seem to think that his wife is dead, shot by his own hand.

The homicide was sitting quietly in the corridor of his cell this morning chatting to his fellow prisoners. A few days growth of hair on his face softened the hard lines of his mouth and jaw.

From the photographs of the man in the daily papers, one would imagine the prisoner was a young looking man. Instead he is older in appearance than the photograph would indicate and the expression of his face is different. The thin lipped mouth and expressionless eyes give the appearance of secretiveness to his face and a phrenologist might state he was of stubborn disposition.

The charge of murder hanging over an ordinary man's head would undoubtedly have its effect on him, through worry or fear or some other cause, but Hunter is not so affected. He eats and sleeps as usual and spends the day in the corridor attached to his cell or in th ejail yard Conversation with the other prisoners is his chief diversion. He never speaks of the crime he committed Sofar Hunter has not been permitted to read a paper in which anything about the crime is printed His eyes are weak and reading is hard on them, but he reads a little every day.

The jail is not such a horrible place to live in—like many imagine. The corridors are airy and fairly roomy, and the food is good. Meals are regular and a prisoner gets lots of sleep.

Mr. Justice McMahon will preside at the fall assizes when Hunter will be tried. Mr. Devlin, Crown attorney, will be assisted by another lawyer.

Ten Brothers are Playing the Game

That popular sketch known to stageland as "Father and the Boys" is now drawing record crowds to the ball fields of Goshen, Vt. There's no "phony" to this act for the cast of characters introduces the fond parent and ten of his sturdy offspring, all engaged in the manly pursuit of baseball glory. And the singular feature is that the community, sheltering this rare collection of athletes fewer than 100 voters.

Edward S. Hayes, born in the ancient City of Vergennes, fifty-eight years ago of good, old-fashioned, Scotch-Irish stock, is the father. His wife, who was of the same stock was born just across the lake in Chimney Point. They were married thirty-eight years ago and moved from Vergennes to Goshen, where they now are making history through the achievements of their ball-playing children.

During their thirty-eight years of married life twelve children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, ten being sons and two daughters. The two little girls early passed from this world, but the sons grew up to be hale and hearty—in fact, strapping fellows and ardent lovers of our national game of baseball.

The father owns a roomy farm in Goshen, where there is plenty of wood to chop and potatoes to harvest and market. For the major part the boys have always kept their feet under father's table, preferring the home life to the glamour of metropolitan ways. The one or two who have builded nests of their own are located in the immediate neighborhood, and therefore they all continue to be known as the Hayes family.

At the outset of the present season the Hayes boys organized a ball team composed of ten brothers—one for each position, with the extra man for the utility role. In a recent game with the Brandon club "Pop" Hayes" lads lost by a single run,the score standing 15 to 14 in favor of the boys from across the county. They have played five games this season with out-of-town teams and won three of them. Father Edward is a baseball fan of the first water and officiated as one of the umpires in the Brandon Hayes contest. He knows baseball backward, forward and both ways from the centerboard and is an impartial arbiter. He gave the boys no favors on balls and strikes and would harken to no arguments.

Though advanced in years, some of the "boys" display that type of "pepper" usually found only in youngsters just donning their spangles with major league clubs. Ben, the oldest, is now in his thirty-sixth year. is 5 feet 11 inches tall and scales at 170 pounds! Mark,, the 16-year-old member of the club, is the rangiest of them all, measuring 6 feet in his running shoes. He weighs 145 pounds and scampers around in left field like a regular vest pocket edition of Mr. P. Dougherty, white sox speec merchant.

Will, the second sacker, is 34 years o,d, 5 feet 9 inches tall, and weighs in at 150 pounds. He has had considerable experience with amateur teams in the country and stacks up the slugging star of the household. Robert is 32 years old, 5 feet 9½ inches in height and weighs 147 pounds His position is third base. George, the shortstop, is 30, stands 5 feet 7 inches and tips the beam at 144 pounds. Williard, who is but 17 years old, plays old. plays first base on this remarkable club. He is 5 feet 11¼ inches tall and scales at 151 pds. Thus is the infield accounted for.

The pitching honors go to Brother Leo, aged 28. He isn't to be classed with Reulbach, Mathewson, Camnitz or any of those headliners, but Leo in his own little way is a finger of high degree. He has tabooed the use of the "spitter" and devotes most of his energies to curve pitching. He weighs 160 and is 5 feet 7 feet 7 inches in height.

Danny is the first and only catcher He is 24 years old, stands 5 feet 11¼ inches and weighs 171. Water, the center fielder, is 21, stretches the tape line to 5 feet 8 inches and weighs 158. The youngest boy, Hugh is 15, weighs but 114 and is 5 feet 6 inches tall. He tolls in right meadow. They challenge the world in their class.

Ordered the Union to Pay $4,000

Plumbers, Gas and Steamfitters, of Winnipeg Punished for Picketting May Disband

(Special to The Times.)

Winnipeg, Aug. 20.—According to an interm order granted by Mr. Justice Metcalfe on application of the master plumbers of Winnipeg, the journeymen plumbers, gas and steam fitters and helpers' focal union has lost temporarily the control of its finances. This order, which is the latest development in the now famous case of Cotter vs. Osborne, calls for an interim receiver to receive all tolls and dues, which are payable by the members of the union. The order is for the purpose of satisfying judgment of $4,000, being the verdict with costs, awarded the master plumbers by Mr. Justice Mathers for damages sustained by Cottes Bros. for the picketing of their premises during a strike. The men are appealing the case to the Privy Council, as they maintain, under English decisions, they have a right where a strike is declared to carry on picketing providing it is peaceful. In the meantime the union will likely disband so that none of the $4,000 can be collected. The order is creating intense interest in labor circles.

Michael C. Hall Died from Unknown Hand

(Special to The Times.)

Simcoe, Aug. 20.—The coroner's jury find "that Michael C. Hall died by a shot from an unknown hand." The boy Shelley is remanded for eight days.

The finding is in keeping with the evidence. What ever lawlessness may have been found against the fifteen-year-old prisoner, there is nothing to show that he deliberately shot Hall or that he had any sufficient motive for doing so. Whether a stray bullet from Shelley's carelessly-handled rifle struck the old man is another matter.

There is enough in the evidence against the boy to give the Crown a pretext for holding him and later, if thought wise, prosecuting him on some minor charge.

Are Shoeshiners Really Slaves

Toronto, Aug. 20.—The condition of peonage in which many of the Greek shoe-shine boys are alleged to be held was discussed at the Trades and Labor Council last night and the utmost indignation was expressed that such a thing should be allowed in this country. Members of the council declared it a disgrace to civilization and practically a condition of slavery. One speaker said that a consignment of 65 Greek boys were recently taken from Duluth to Port Arthur and got past the officials although they had not $10 altogether. He declared that there was collusion with the officials at the port of entry to bring in these boys,who were obliged to work for years for their masters before gaining their freedom.

Another labor man said that the health officers of the city should periodically visit the places to see if they were in a proper sanitary condition. He also said that some of the boys were of such tender year thatthe Society for the care of Neglected Children should look after them.

WILL INVESTIGATE.

It was decided that the Organization Committee of the City Council should make an investigation of the subject. Indignation was expressed that such conditions should exist without interference from the police, and efforts wil be made to get such evidence as will force the police to prosecute the man at the head of the alleged traffic.

A letter from Controller Hocken was read regarding the resolution of the Labor Council opposing the sale of the site to the National Iron Works. The controller defended the city's action, saying that the assistant City Engineer estimated that it would cost the company $10,000 per acre to reclaim the property and put it in shape for industrial purposes.

A resolution favoring a stringent bylaw providing for a standard loaf of bread, was carried unanimously, and it will also be brought to the attention of the Provincial authorities.

The Alpine Club of Canada

ary member of the Canadian Alpine Club, had been specially invited, and in the evening of August 7 was requested to say a few words to the assemblage round the camp-fire. He spoke as follows:

Friends, Canadians, countrymen, lend me your ears, as Shakespeare said. They shall not be taken away from you. I only want to get hold of them for a few minutes.

We meet here on the common ground of love of nature and love of freedom. Curiosity and interest have been expressed in the old country in respect to your proceedings and the progress of the club and many in Europe, I am sure, would gladly have come here if their engagements would have permitted.

Let me read to you a few passages from letters which have come in. The first is from the Rev. W. A. B. Coolidge, who is American by birth and English from association. In regard to Alpine literature, he is considered "Man of the Time." He says, writing from Switzerland:

"You flatter me in imagining that anything I can write would be of any value as to the Canadian Rockies. I have never seen them.....I am a 'stateaman,' but dic not climb any hills therein, though I was at school amid the White Mountains of New Hampshire. However, so far as I can judge, it is about time now that some one gathered together the threads of previous explorations in the Canadian Rockies, so as to show what still remains to be done, and to make known the claims of the fine mountain scenery which exists in the whole area."

There, ladies and gentlemen, is a nice little job for one of the youngest members of the Alpine Club of Canada. It will keep him well occupied all his lifetime.

The next is from a man of science, from Professor Dr. Thomas George Bonney, who is to be brought forward shortly at Winnipeg as president of the British Association for next of British Association next year. He has been a member of the A. C. for a clear fifty years, and was president from 1881 to 1884. This is what he says:

"For fully half a century my summer holidays have been spent among the mountains. To them I believe myself indebted for the health and strength which has enabled me to get through a considerable amount of hard work and to be still as vigorous as most men who have lived three-quarters of a century. (That is his age.) I have not been a lover of the Alps only from their invigoration or for the grandeur and beauty of their scenery. They have drawn me back and back again because they lead the dweller in the lowlands into fresh fields of scientific interest. From the snow-clad peaks and glaciers we can learn lessons which enable us to understand the action of ice and the effects of denudation in past ages, of the earth's history very different from the present. From the record of the rocks mountains possess inexhaustible interest. The great hills speak in impressive tones. They are something like splendid and cost-ly books, which lead up to advance the beauty of the illustrations while reading the story."

This is what the Bishop of Bristol president of the Alpine Club from 1905 to 1908, says:—

"I wish I could go with you to those dear Canadian Alpinists. There are many marks of this present age but we name two. (1) A rebellion against conventionalities and (2) an appreciation of the recuperative power of nature. A chief charm of a mountain expedition is—we have done for the time with conventionalities, we are free children of nature, let us go and seek our mother, and drink in from her pure white breasts all that is highest and best, and when we come back to the life of the world and its calls upon our mental and physical powers, we find ourselves fit as no doctor's stuff put in our poor, ill-treated stomachs ever made us; all morbid thoughts and fancies cleared away able to see that we and those around us have only to be as a good God intended us to be.

"With sincere regard for now 45 years.

"G. F. BRISTOL."

That is what a bishop says. Now for a politician, who has been my friend for 48 years. He was president of the Alpine Club from 1899 to 1902. This is what the Right Hon. James Bryce, His Majesty's ambassador at Washington says:—"I am very glad to hear that you are going to join the summer camp of the Canadian Alpine Club at the Continental Divide. They were good enough to write me as an honorary member to come to the camp, and I would most gladly have been there and joined in welcoming you had it been possible for me to leave my duties at this embassy for so long.

"Will you please give my warm regards to my fellow members of the club when you meet them and say from me what you are doubtless saying for yourself, how much we British Alpinists re-oice in the growth and prosperity of the Canadian Club, and congratulate our Canadian fellow subjects on possessing such a magnificent region of peaks, passes and glaciers, which will occupy their energy, and give scope for their skill and courage for many a year to come

Sincerely yours,
JAMES BRYCE."

(Laud applause).

Other marks of interest have been shown in you and your proceedings. My bootmaker has sent a dozen of his cards and has expressed a desire to make the acquaintance of the whole of you. Specimens of his work are on my feet, and in camp. The Alpine Club rope maker of London he does not wish to encourage suicide he states that a person weighing 12 stone may drop 10 feet, and that the rope will not part company. Messrs. Burroughs, Wellcome & Co., of New York and Montreal, send an Alpine medical outfit, and a tabloid photographic outfit, as presents, and these and other things will be put up to auction presently for the benefit of the clubhouse, I agree with all that was said by my four friends, but much more can be said about marvels of the Rocky Mountains of Canada, where, amongst other things, raspberries grow upon gooseberry bushes. This was, I believe, first pointed out by the Rev. W. Spotswood Green in the paper which was published by the Royal Geographical Society—that I will pass around.

The ascent of a great mountain is inspiring. Below there is gloom, while above there is glory. This stimulates the faculties and makes one aspire. Most of all of us are familiar with these words of Longfellow:—

"The shades of night were falling fast
When through an Alpine village passed
A youth, who bore through snow and ice
A banner, with this strange device:
Excelsior."

A critic might say that this youth was foolish for starting out at such a late hour, and that it would be more in accordance with Truth and Nature if the poem commenced:

"The orb of day was rising fast."

Don't let us be captious. Longfellow's meaning appears to be, let our motto be: "onwards and upwards," and that would be a good one for an Alpine club.

Ladies and gentlemen, live, live while you can. We're born to live, but born to die. Unite prudence with courage. Take heed to your steps lest you fall. Whatever you set your hand to do, do it with all your might. Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is the first, and it will be the last occasion on which I shall have the honor to speak to you. I came out from Europe expressly for this meeting, and tomorrow I start back. But, if unable to be with you in body, I shall, so long as I live, be with you in spirit, and wish you success and prosperity. (Loud applause).

Camp broke up on August 9, and members dispersed, but a good many intended to continue in the field, either to the north, south, east or west, and from some of them, sooner or later, interesting reports may be expected.

If Sick

Don't risk even one single penny!

And I will tell you why I say this.

It is because every package of Dr. Shoop's medicine is absolutely True to its Name.

No one need risk even one single penny.

Just think what this means to the suffering sick!

No risk, no chance, nothing whatever unless health follows. For 30 full days, and without the risk of a single penny, you can use either of my two great remedies—Dr. Shoop's Restorative or Dr. Shoop's Pain Relief.

Does why take any chance whatever?

Why purchase any medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer?

And besides, I am not asking you to.

My "No Risk" offer applies to every drop made Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and to every drop made in the kind of medicine you need. No matter what ailment.

[illegible] medicines have been sold for many years in all over America. And I have yet to hear of a single case where the directions were followed where the results were not satisfactory.

Now write me just for an order.

I have an agent in almost every community—but all druggists are not authorized to grant the 30 day test.

So drop me a line, please—and then save all disappointment and delays.

Further, you are free to consult me by letter or personally your own home. By writing me fully about your case—if you desire. My advice and the medicine are yours—and without cost. Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some matter that is troubling you. Other wise I have helped thousands who have written me for private prescriptions or personal advice first.

Further, the results will be more than you have ever hoped for. Else you pay not a penny. Is not that fair? Is not that enough? Then why suffer from any form of sickness when you can make this offer? Why not write me today? Why not get well and stay well? Why not be strong, vigorous, full of life and ambition? Why not be a success instead of a failure? Why not be happy instead of miserable? Why not write me today?

With [illegible]

Dr. Shoop's Restorative
Dr. Shoop's Pain Relief

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

VISCOUNT KITCHENER.

A Brief Biography of Soldier Who May Visit Canada.

General Horatio Herbert, first Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum—who has just completed the great work he undertook in 1902 of reorganizing the British Indian Army—was born on Midsummer Day at Ballylongford, in the County Kerry.

During his exceptionally brilliant military career the retiring Indian commander has asserted himself with characteristic confidence and unbending will, and Lord Kitchener must be accounted one of the most strenuous soldiers that the British Empire has ever possessed.

Coming of a military family, Lord Kitchener passed thirty-eight years ago from Woolwich into the Royal Engineers. Since then his career has been one of scintillating brilliance, for "K. of K."—as he is now often called "for short"—has been to the fore in many expeditions and campaigns, and has "built himself an everlasting name" for thoroughness in the profession of arms.

A veritable "glutton for work," he assisted in the Palestine survey in 1874-78 and that of Cyprus of 1878-80.

Then he was sent to Egypt, and entrusted with the command of the Khedive's cavalry and the remodelling of the native army. Having effected this to his own exacting desiring, he, as Sirdar, conducted a vigorous opposition to the forces of the Khalifa. He found it necessary to build a railway to Omdurman before he finally broke the power of the prophet, annihilating the Khalifa's army in 1898.

By this time he had reached the rank of major-general and been made a K.C.B., and he came home covered with Egyptian honors, to receive the thanks of the British Parliament, a peerage, and a grant of £30,000.

In the year following, when matters seemed to be going wrong with our forces engaged against the Boers in South Africa, Lord Kitchener was sent out as Chief of Staff to Lord Roberts. Here, again, he distinguished himself for determination and dash in combination; and when Cronje had been circumvented at Paardeberg and the British flag hoisted in Pretoria, he was promoted to the commandership of the forces in South Africa on Lord Roberts' return to England.

Kitchener brought the long campaign to a close. Again the gallant fighter and fine organiser was thanked by Parliament, given a further £50,000 from the country's public purse, and raised in the peerage to a viscounty.

As a full general he was sent out in 1902 to India as Commander-in-Chief, with practically a free hand to reform the army of our great Empire of the Orient. His ideals of duty brooking no civilian interference in matters military, Viscount Kitchener soon came into conflict with the then Viceroy, Lord Curzon, and the friction ensued in the resignation of that able statesman in 1905.

Since then Lord Kitchener has practically been permitted to have his own way at headquarters in India; and on the completion of his task in the Orient, he is credited by some with hankering after overthrowing the influence of the non-military element in the War Office for good and all.

Barrister's First Brief.

My first brief I have the best of reasons for remembering particularly clearly. I was engaged for the defence in a case of robbery. Two men, the prisoners, had seized the prosecutor on the platform of Shrewsbury Station, and while one of them held his arms the other quietly rifled his pockets.

They were caught red-handed, and I had a brief to defend the prisoner who had held the prosecutor by the arms. I made the obvious defence. I urged that it was vindictive to sacrifice two victims to justice when one would suffice, that the distinction between the two prisoners was manifest, and as the one I defended had not taken any money at all it was impossible to pretend that he was as guilty as his companion.

To the amazement of everybody, not excepting the chairman—who had been careful in his summing up to sweep away my sophistries—the jury made the distinction I suggested to them, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" against my prisoner.—"Reminiscences of Mr. A. C. Plowden," in The Strand Magazine.

A Pageant of Priests.

Pageants have so far illustrated the history of a single town or city, but the one held recently in the grounds of Fulham Palace, London, was unique. It depicted the growth and history of the Church of England.

It was split up into a number of episodes, and, beginning with the publication of the Edict of Emperor Constantine, came right down through the ages to the acquittal of the Seven Bishops in 1688. A final tableau, representing the church "throughout the world," concluded the gigantic spectacle.

The grounds of Fulham Palace, lent by the Bishop of London, were well fitted for such a purpose.

The spectators were housed in a grand stand, 304 feet in length, 90 feet in depth, and covering an acre of ground. In addition to a large royal box, there was seating accommodation for 6,750. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury performed the opening ceremony.

An Amiable Violinist.

Robert Browning and Joachim met one evening at a friendly gathering in London. The violinist had "obliged" without satisfying certain ladies, who entreated the poet to obtain from him another solo. Browning, feeling the delicacy of his task, discharged it diplomatically and spoke, as sometimes he wrote, so as to conceal his thoughts, while the violinist, not understanding, bowed and smiled and did not play.

"Oh," said the poet, "I wanted you to give us some more music."

"Then, why did you not come and say, 'Joe, old boy, give us another tune?'" returned the amiable violinist.

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

WHAT ALINE FOUND OUT.

The Great Change It Made in Her Mode of Life.

By BELLE MANIATES.

[Copyright, 1900, by Associated Literary Press.]

Aline looked up from her book as her husband rose from his chair.

"I am going to work again tonight," he remarked casually.

A faint flush stole to her cheeks. For the first time in her three months of married life her thoughts were centered on her husband, Stephen Alden. When her father committed suicide because he had lost his fortune in speculation Stephen had asked her to marry him. Her wealth had hitherto prevented his paying her any special attention. One other refuge was available. A distant cousin whom Aline's father had once befriended and who lived on a farm offered her a home.

She accepted Stephen, and three months after her father's death they were married. The home Stephen was able to provide was a very simple one, and it had not been a very happy one. Aline was in the listless state that succeeds violent grief and apathetically allowed the house to be run at the will of a succession of slatternly servants.

Three nights before a break in their monotonous life had resulted from Stephen's leaving the house at 7 o'clock and not returning until late. His excuse of having to work would have passed unnoticed tonight except for the fact that she had been unable to get him by telephone at the office the night before even after repeated calls.

At 10 o'clock she had gone to bed. An hour later she heard him come in and go down the hall to his room. His behavior engrossed her thoughts entirely throughout the following day. The fact of his spending his evenings out did not disturb her, but she was at a loss to fathom his motive in deceiving her. It assailed her conscience and opened her eyes to the truth that she, his wife, did not know him well enough to resent the deception nor to speak to him about the matter.

A newly awakened sense of duty and a feeling that she ought at least to assume the duty of taking some interest in his movements impelled her to attempt to discover where he was spending his evenings. Therefore, as he was again leaving after dinner, she slipped out a side entrance and followed him at discreet distance. After a walk of nearly two miles she saw him pause in front of a theater.

"Poor Stephen!" she thought. "His evenings must have been dull! No wonder he seeks recreation."

But he turned and went down the side street, entering the theater by the way of the stage door. As a solution of his conduct occurred to her she felt a great heart wrench—the only thing she had felt sure of was taken from her. Without knowing that she valued it, she had had perfect confidence in his love for her.

Instantly she felt a wild—almost an insane—desire to know what manner of woman had attracted him. It was a vaudeville theater, and she bought a ticket, choosing a seat in an obscure part of the house.

At the end of an hour she learned what she had come to find out and quietly stepped from the theater and returned home. She spent an hour at Stephen's desk and then went to bed. She did not pass the night in sleep, but laid out a course of action which she began to follow at breakfast.

"Stephen," she said quietly, "I am not—very well. You know I am not used to staying in the city in the summer."

He looked up quickly, a flush on his face.

"I know you are not," he replied.

"Cousin Lois has been anxious for me to pay her a visit ever since father died. I think I will go to her today."

"The country air would do you good," he said slowly.

"The cook's going to leave today. You can stay here and get your meals in the city, can't you?"

"Yes; I can manage all right."

A month later, at the end of a long summer day, Stephen approached home, weary and discouraged. He dreaded to unlock the door and go into the stale, shutup atmosphere of the dust coated, empty rooms. But when he had entered the living room he stood still in amazement. The windows were open and freshly curtained in soft muslin. The room was in perfect order. A bunch of fragrant old fashioned flowers filled a big bowl on the table. Wondering, he went on into the dining room. The table was laid with clean linen, shining glass, speckless dishes and decorated by another bunch of country flowers.

He heard a light step in the kitchen. The door opened, and Aline, dressed, not in mourning, but in becoming color, came in.

"Oh, Stephen!" she cried, running into his arms.

He held her close and quiet for a moment. When she lifted her face for his kiss she put her hand caressingly across his tired eyes.

"You haven't dined? I was sure you came home from the office first. It is too hot for a regular dinner, but I have prepared a cool little meal for us."

"But, Aline, when did you come? Why didn't you let me know?"

"It's a surprise," she laughed. "Sit down at the table while I bring the things in."

He followed her into the kitchen.

"How did you get a cook so soon?"

"I am the cook! Kiss the cook, Stephen!"

Again she was in his arms. Then he held her at arm's length. She was no longer pale and listless. Her face was full of life.

As soon as he had begun to eat the delightful little meal he looked at her in astonishment.

"When did you learn to do all this, Aline?"

"That's another surprise. And there are a great many more surprises awaiting you, Stephen."

"I am afraid," he said, "that the biggest surprise of all will be that this is all a dream!"

"Stephen! But eat your dinner. Then you shall hear them all. You will not go out tonight, Stephen?"

He flushed guiltily.

"No, but I will have to telephone."

"I did that for you."

"You! You—knew, Aline?"

She laughed, but would say no more, not even when they were clearing the table and he was helping her wash the dishes. Then they went out on their little porch.

"Now tell me. When did you know?" he demanded.

"The third night you went out I followed you."

"Aline!"

"I knew you were not spending your evenings at the office. It wasn't jealousy or curiosity, Stephen. But it came to me that I was of no help to you. For a moment when I saw you going into the greenroom I doubted you. Forgive me, Stephen. But in that moment I learned that I loved you. I went into the theater. When you came on in the second number I knew you in spite of your makeup, and I had heard of that wonderful athletic stunt of yours. I divined why you were doing it—I had been extravagant, and in order to indulge me you were slaving night and day, and I was giving you—nothing!

"I came home and looked over your accounts and saw we were in debt. I went to Cousin Lois and told her all. She taught me to cook and keep house and keep accounts. I am more fitted now to be the wife of a"—

"Poor man."

"No, an honest man. But there's more. Long ago father paid off a mortgage on Cousin Lois' farm. They are very prosperous now, and she gave me a check for the $1,000. I would not take any interest, of course. You have your vacation next week, and, Stephen, dear, we are going to take some of that $1,000 and have our real honeymoon."

The Antiquity of the Cat.

It seems hard to believe that during all the long ages which passed between the dawn of civilisation and the Christian era the Romans and Greeks should have been ignorant of the most familiar pet of our homes, the common cat. Yet no fact seems established more clearly than this. Haha in his "Wanderings of Plants and Animals" insisted upon it, and it has since been established by the united efforts of scholars and zoologists. We know now that our domestic favorite, with its winning, coy ways, uneasy when removed from man's society and yet never completely trusting it, with its mysterious old world air, was unknown to the chief nations of antiquity till after the Christian era.

It was the patient and gifted nation of the Nile valley that built the hall of columns at Karnak and that reared such colossal statues as that of Rameses II. at Memphis, not to speak of the pyramids, that first tamed the cat. Hereditary antipathy as deep as that which reigns between the feline race and mankind does not die out in a generation. Countless years and many dynasties must have passed ere the wildest members of creation became the most faithful servants of mankind. In Egypt we know that cats were regarded with veneration and embalmed and buried after their death.—London Academy.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop" Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 40 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Grief for Princess Her Darkened Career

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 18.—Young beautiful, heiress to the richest monarch in the world, yet Princess Clementine of Belgium is not happy. The youngest daughter of the "king of the Congo," she is the only member of the family on speaking terms with her father; and even between them no love is lost. She is permitted none of the freedom that her sunny nature craves; and it is only when absent from hom at her chateau at Spa, or in her villa on the Riviera, that she can be said ta enjoy her existence.

And yet it is not altogether the tyrannies of her not always gracious father, King Leopold, that have made Princess Clementine the unhappy woman she is. Behind her gay life in the European capitals is the shadow of an almost tragic love romance that has darkened her career. Only those who know her well are acquainted with this story and can answer the question why this charming and beautiful woman remains unmarried today, though courted by many of the wealthiest and noblest men of Europe.

When Prince Victor Napoleon, eldest son of Jerome Bonaparte, came to Brussels some years ago, one of the first women he met in the royal court circles was Princess Clementine. She was considered the most beautiful woman in the Belgian capital, and her charms at once arrested his attention. In fact, the two fell disperately in love.

IN WEDDING BONDS

Unhappily for the union, the prince was already married morganatically to a charming French woman. However, even this difficulty might have been surmounted, as the wife of the Princess Clementine if the latter could obtain the consent of her father and of the church. When the proposal was made that the morganatic wife of Prince Victor Napoleon should return to France and leave her husband to Princess Clementine such a howl of indignation was raised both by state officials and by the clericals that the poor princess and the unhappy Victor Napoleon were almost driven out of Brussels, King Leopold, though importuned by his daughter and her lover to give his consent to the divorce and remarriage, remained obdurate and refused to listen to the proposal.

Belgian ministers, alarmed at the notion that the country might be handed over to France through such an alliance, exerted all their efforts to destroy the happiness of the lovers. Scandals of every description concerning the prince and princess were circulated. If, by accident they both chanced to be away from Brussels at the same time, all sorts of unkind rumors were scattered broadcast concerning them.

From the moment it became known that Prince Victor and the princess were in love there began a species of Anonymous letters—some of which are said even to have been written by King Leopold himself—poured in upon the wretched lovers; and they became the objects of intrigue on the part of both the state and the clergy All sorts of attempts were made to drive the prince from Brussels. His beautiful house in the Avenue Louise was constantly watched; and when Princess Clementine drove down this boulevard in the afternoons she feared to turn her head to look up at her her royal lover, expecting to meet the eyes of paid spies stationed in front of the mansion by her father.

STOLEN MEETINGS.

The princess was forbidden by her father to speak to her lover, and for more than a year the only opportunity they had of meeting was in the boulevards when out driving or riding. Prince Victor would ride on horseback along the tanbarked equestrian path that lines the Avenue Louise, while Princess Clementine passed by on the opposite side in her low-swung Victoria, behind her thoroughbred black horses. As the people would see this silent meeting of the two lovers many shoulders would shrug, for all the world loves a lover, and the sympathies of the Belgians were won over to the cause of the princess. Besides, the French prince had won great favor in the eyes of the Belgians, and, while many opposed the marriage for reasons of state and religion, there was an equal number who wished it solemnized for the sake of the interested parties themselves.

For some time things remained in this condition—the prince and princess occasionally meeting at social functions in Brussels—but such strict watch was kept on them by court officials that they were never able to be together except in the most informal way. The gracious manner and popularity of Prince Victor Napoleon eventually won him favor, even in the king's eyes, and the chances are that opposition might have been broken down had it not been for the tremendous antagonism of the archbishop of Malines. With all the favor of the religious fanatic the archbishop denounced the proposed marriage, and threatened excommunication in case the idea was persisted in. In the circumstances, of course the lover abandoned hope. The powers opposing this marriage was too much for the interested parties themselves. The princess went off to her villa at Monte Carlo in despair, while the prince sought solace in long early morning rides about the Belgian capital.

STEEPED IN MELANCHOLY

He resumed the even tenor of his married life and tried to forget his affinity. In Brussels his splendid house in the Avenue Louise, is always pointed out as the scene of the romantic disappointment. When the prince goes driving in the avenue his melancholy mein is always marked and commented upon by the impressionable Belgians, who like nothing better than to dwell upon a love story of this description.

Princess Clementine herself is immensely popular. She is very devout and seeks consolation for her disappointment in religious activities. Quiet recently she went to Lourdes to join in the special services for the Belgian pilgrimage. There she mingled with the crowd, refusing the velvet-covered "prie. Dieu" offered to royalty, and receiving communion with the rest. On the day the oilgrims were leaving she insisted in going to the station to see them start for home. When the crowd in the train saw her their enthusiasm knew no bounds. Hats and handkerchiefs were waved in the air and the train rang with cheers from hundreds of throats; "Vive la Princess Clementine!"

At the grotto a German lady belonging to another pilgrimage approached the group of officials and others who were bowing respectfully before the princess, and, quite unconscious of her identity, asked; "Are you, madam, one of those who have been miraculously cured?" The princess turned with a charming smile, and, still preserving her incognito, replied; "No, madam, I have never been ill."

In addition to her religious work she is very much loved by the people for her sympathy and charity among the poor. She is always doing countless little acts of kindness of which only herself and the recipients are aware. She follows the principle of not letting her right hand know what her left hand does.

In proportion to the love which the people hold for her, they have a contempt and aversion for the king, her father. One of the most striking evidences of this contunely has been the wide circulation in Brussels recently of a post card holding the king up to ridicule. The original was done in clay and exhibits the king in a recumbent attitude, which accentuates his lanky body and enormous features. It is certainly not a compliment to anybody, much less to a reigning monarch, and it is a surprise that it met with such wide distribution in Brussels itself. This is mainly due to the manner in which the king has treated his children. He has treated the princess so brutally that her life has been made doubly miserable. No letter she writes or receives is ever allowed to pass unread by the king and his menials keep a constant espionage upon her. His deliberate attempt to rid himself of all his valuables and property in order that his children may be brought to a state of poverty at his death has done an immense amount to shatter his one-time popularity. He has just given his morganatic wife—the daughter of a caretaker—30,000,000 francs. Even the senate has no power to interfere with this scheme, for recently when a few senators remonstrated with him over this matter King Leopold said; "Very well, gentlemen in that case, I shall leave my entire fortune to my sons." These sons are children of the caretaker's daughter, whom he has created "Baroness Vaughan." She lives in magnificent state, inhabits a palace in Brussels, a splendid mansion in Paris when visiting the French capital, and owns a fine chateau in Italy—all of these domiciles having been presented to her by the king.

Owing to the harsh treatment which the king has meted out to the Princess Clementine, there was some talk a few months ago of her retiring to a convent. Whether this was a ruse to break down the opposition of her father or not is unknown, but the king was too alert to the possibilities of any such move and he forbade any religious community to receive his daughter, even as a probationer.

Prince Victor Napoleon, on account of his love for Princess Clementine, is one of the most popular men in Brussels and the Belgians have forgotten he is the son of Prince Jerome Bonaparte, whom they held in such aversion—so much so, in fact, that they nicknamed him "Plon-Plon" a term of contempt. It was said that he died of fright during a battle in the Crimean war.

The hopeless love affair related in this story has interested Brussels for some time, but it is always a fresh topic of interest and the movements of Princess Clementine and her royal lover are regarded by the Belgians as of fascinating import.

If You Feel Poorly This Spring this Article is Worth Considering.

Nothing in life keeps people from advancement like poor health If the nerves are weak, if the stomach, liver, bowels or kidneys, fail to work properly, healthy surely suffers. Spring is the hardest time on health —the season when the system calls for active cleansing medicine.

The best plan is to entrust your condition to a physician of reputation like Dr. Hamilton, who has had years of experience in compounding tonics. For the ills and tired feeling of spring Dr. Hamilton says nothing is better than Mandrake and Butternut Pills, and this is well proven in the case of James Burton of Lewisown. "I had grip and it left me very weak. The disease settled in my back and side, which ached day and night. I had a nagging cough. My appetite was all gone. My nerves unstrung. I could not sleep well. I struggled against growing pale, thin and weak—but it was no good. Spring brought depressions, overpowering weakness and bad headaches. But my life was spared, simply because I learned of the wonderful merit in Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. The result was marvelous. I gained rapidly, became strong, ruddy, vigorous, perfectly well. I urge every man and woman to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly.

You'll brighten up, have cleaner blood, stronger nerves, better spirits after using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. at all dealers. Guaranteed safe, sure helpful for old and young.

Miss S. Garrow left on Monday for Ottawa, where she will spend the next two weeks, the guest of friends.

Mrs. John Lynch and Miss Margie Kilnehy of Rochester, are in the city visiting with Mrs. Lynch, Aylmer St.

Mrs. Geo. A. Brown, Orillia, is in the city for a few days, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Pratt, 629 Water street.

Mrs. F. W. Van Duesen of Napanee, who was the guest of F. O. Allison, 640 George street, for a few days, returned home yesterday.

Be sure and take a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with you when starting on your trip this summer. It cannot be obtained on board the trains or steamers. Changes of water and climate often cause sudden attacks of diarrhoea, and it is best to be prepared. 8

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McGrath and Miss Margaret McGrath were among the out-of-town guests at the Beard-Cunningham nuptials in Lindsay on Wednesday.

Miss Minnie Mann, 588 Water street has returned home after spending two weeks at Mr. Julian, Stony Lake, and left yesterday to visit friends in Cobourg and Port Hope.

The marriage of Mr. Samuel Frederick Touchborn, son of Mr. Joseph Touchbourne, Pinehurst, Cavan, and Miss Margaret Jane Staunton, the daughter of Mr. Wm. A. Staunton, of Peterborough, will take place at the end of the month.

The engagement is announced in Montreal of Miss Bertha Smyth, daughter of Mr. Charles E. Smyth, Lansdowne avenue, Westmount, to the Rev. F. J. Sawers, curate of Christ church cathedral. The wedding will take place about the middle of September.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when reduced with water and sweetened, it is pleasant to take. 9

The work on the new Public Library has been progressing favorably, and the foundations are now complete and ready for the stone and brick work. The stone is now being drawn to the site and preparations are being made for the work to continue at a rapid pace.

BALL GAMES.

Double Header in City League at Riverside Park.

All is harmony in the City Baseball League again. The T.A.S. and Park Street teams hook up at Riverside Park this afternoon and as both teams must have the game to stay in the running, the fur may be expected to fly. The contest will start at 2.30 o'clock, and should be a slugger right from the start. Quinlan will be on the firing line for Abbattoirers and Deary will pass them over for the team from the south end.

Jack Rosevear of Port Hope, will umpire the game, and as he is a first class official a square deal to both teams is assured. If Park street team pull out a victory they will have the championship of the league, so the T.A.S. aggregation can be depended on to play the game of their lives.

The general admission will be fifteen cents, with ten cents extra for the grand stand. Ladies will be admitted free to both the field and grand stand. Both the T.A.S. and Park street teams have been playing great ball all season, and the article served up this afternoon should be the best yet.

FOR CAMPERS.

Don'ts That Save Many Thousand Dollars.

1. Don't when in the woods throw down a lighted match, cigar stub or other flaming object; make sure that the flame has been thoroughly extinguished before throwing it away.

2. Don't build your camp fire larger than is necessary.

3. Don't, under any circumstances leave your fire unguarded, even for a comparatively short time, see that it is dead out before you go away.

4. Don't build your fire in leaves, rotten wood or other inflammable material.

5. Don't build your fire against a large or hollow log, where it is hard to be sure when it has been entirely put out.

To these "don'ts" it may be added that in windy weather, or in a dangerous place, it is well to confine the fire in a hole dug clean down to mineral soil. A fire may smoulder in the humus, or "duff" for days, only waiting for a strong breeze to fan it into a flame that may burn over miles of timber.

Summer tourists and campers unfortunately have a bad reputation among owners of timber as being often a cause of fires. Such fires could be prevented without exception, by a little extra care on the part of the campers, who have been the unintentional cause of much forest destruction, and who have just as real an interest in the preservation of the forests as the owners of the timber themselves. The rules given above are the result of long experience and observation on the part of many woodsmen and lumbermen as to the origin of fires from this cause, and are earnestly commended to the attention of campers, sportsmen and others.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

THE disease now known as 'grip' used to be called 'Influenza.'

It very closely resembles a cold, but is more tenacious in its hold upon the system and produces more profound disturbances.

Grip is in reality epidemic catarrh. When it once begins it spreads over the country very rapidly.

People do not catch the grip from each other, but each one catches it from the atmosphere.

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines,—religious, educational and secular.

Speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

Healthy Mucous Membranes.

Those who are fortunate enough to have perfectly healthy mucous membranes ordinarily do not catch the grip.

The mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and lungs, when in a normal state, are an effectual barrier against the invasion of grip.

But, if there happens to be the slightest catarrhal derangement of the mucous membranes, then the victim becomes an easier prey to the grip.

The rational thing to do is to keep the system free from catarrh. In attempting to do this most people have found Peruna to be invaluable.

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

The Medical Profession Recognizes The Grip as Epidemic Catarrh.

During an epidemic of grip Peruna should be used. The doses recommended on the bottle are sufficient.

After the grip has once been acquired, Dr. Hartman recommends the use of Peruna in teaspoonful doses every hour during the acute stage, after which the directions on the bottle should be followed.

Experience has shown that the people who use Peruna as a remedy for grip generally recover sooner and are less liable to the distressing and long-continued after-effects of the grip.

When Peruna has not been used during the course of the grip and the patient finds himself suffering from the after-effects of this disease, a course of Peruna should be resorted to.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes: "After a severe attack of a grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, writes: "Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. I read a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. My husband bought me a bottle of Peruna. I was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was cured."

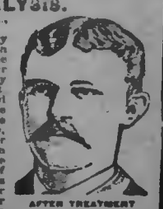
BEFORE TREATMENT



AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and wrongs in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, were an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

Refuses to Talk when Husband Seeks His Stolen Wife and Child

Broken-Hearted Husband Searched the Country for 22 Years, and Finally Finds the Man who Made His Life a Tragedy

Upper Sandusky, Aug. 21.—Has anyone seen the woman or the baby who were stolen 22 years ago. Robt. T. Perdue would give all the money he has in the world to know.

The woman is now a little past 40, the baby is a grown woman of 22.

It's a 22-year-old tragedy is the life of Robt. Perdue—a tragedy which time has never softened for him. It's a parellel in real life of the pathetic theme of the "Music Master."

In the common jail at Upper Sandusky is the man who, Perdue says stole his girl-wife and his baby 22 years ago. But Wilbar Still well, the prisoner, was alone when he was arrested. And he won't tell what has become of the woman or the little girl.

In the hearing in court Perdue had to sit and listen as witnesses testifying how Stillwell had boasted of his conquest.

"Sure I took them away," the witness said Stillwell proclaimed, I took Mrs. Perdue away from her husband because I was a better man than he was, because I was slicker. And I'll do it again."

WHERE IS THE WIFE?

But when the court asked Stillwell what he had done with the wife and child he refused to answer. While Perdue across the witness table gripped the arms of his chair, his veins standing out like cords.

Stillwell was bound over to the grand jury. Perdue hopes the upper courts can force an answer from him to the question, "Where are they now?"

It happened in 1887, Perdue, a prosperious young farmer, had married his boyhood sweetheart, Leefa Wilmeth. He had fallen in love with her when she was 12, and married her at 16.

Theirs four years was a continuous honeymoon for the young couple They were well-to-do, they took in all the the country dances together, and came and went as they pleased. Two children—Cora and Tillie—came to them. They had a hired man, Wilbert Stillwell, who took the burden of the outside work off Perdue's hands.

WIFE LEAVES HER HOME.

The young husband became interested in Mississippi farm lands. It ended in his making a ten-day trip to look them over personally. When he came back, his wife and younger baby and $16.00 in money, were gone.

What happened during those ten days to make the wife forget her allegiance to her husband, what arts, threats and inducements, the despoiler used to make her leave him can only be speculated.

From that day Perdue was a changed man. He sold his farm—he couldn't bear to stay in the houle where everything recalled his lost happiness. He became a wanderer, working for the government secret ing through every state in the union always looking for his wife and baby Finally he ran across Stillwell in Ohio and caused his arrest.

Perdue told the story in court.

"Why, little as Tillie was, she petted me like a big girl. If she wasn't put by me at tableshe'd put up her little lips and the big tears would come. And when she'd be brought over she'd clap her little spoon on the table in glee.

"And how she'd watch for me at the window. When I'd come to the house there'd be the two curly heads—the little one just showing above the sill, bobbing up and down to see papa. She even seemed to know my step when she was asleep. She'd wake right up to put her soft little arms round my neck and kisame.

"And to think that man, that man who saw how she loved me, took her away and taught her to call him papa.

"Stillwell was right in my house. He worked for me. He ate at my table. He accepted my money. Then he stole my girl wife and baby away."

The father spread a circle of baby yellow hair in his brown hand. He looked at it a minute, then folded it carefully and put it away.

"It took lots of begging to get that curl from baby Tilly because she was so proud of them, but one day she poked her little hand away under the kinky mass by her neck and said: 'Oo may have sis one!'

Thirty Million Dollar Cement Merger Officially Confirmed

(Special to The Times.)

Ottawa, Aug. 21.—Notiice of the incorporation of the cement merger is contained in today's Canadian Gazette.

The formal title is the Canada Cement Company, the capital is thirty million dollars.

The incorporators are Sir Sandford Fleming, Senator W. C. Edwards and J. R. Booth of Ottawa, Senator MacKay, Rodolphe Forget, M.P., and W. Aitken of Montreal, and F. B. Dunsford, London, Eng.

The chief place of business will be in Montreal.

At last the official stamp of authority has been placed on the thirty million dollar merger of Canadian cement mills. When the announcement was first made it was met with flat denials from many sides, but the information was reliable.

The merger will include two-thirds of the output, and is one of the largestindustrial combinations yet put through in this country.

T. A. S. Put it All Over Park Street A. C. Nine

It was easy to pick the best team at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, and the greater part of the big crowd in attendance were well pleased with the outcome. It was one of the final games in the Senior City League, and the two leading teams came together, viz., T. A. S. and Park Street A.C. The afternoon was ideal for a ball game, the grounds were in good shape, the attendance was large, and the rooters were out in full force for both sides. The conditions were such as to inspire a ball team to do its best. The T.A.S. responded to the environment and handed out a classy article which knocked the pins from under the south enders. The score at the end of the ninth was 11 runs to 2, in favor of the Abstainers, and the score indicates the merits of the two teams.

The game started about 3 o'clock with the T.A.S. at the bat. At the beginning it looked like a fast, close game. The T.A.S. were shut out, and Park street got one run in their first, but they went to sleep and couldn't hit nor run a base after that until the seventh when they scored their second and final run. In the field they simply couldn't do a thing. Dusty in the box opened up with a classy delivery and did what was expected of him, but he received such rank support from the field that he got the error craze himself. The infield missed, fumbled, muffed, threw slow, wide, high, wide and did everything else but play a good ball game. As far as they were concerned it was a series of errors from beginning to end, a one-act comedy without intermission.

On the other hand the T.A.S were playing baseball, and every man on the team was "earning his salary." Quinlan was in fine shape, and the few hits that were made were well fielded. The whole team batted the ball, even Derocher got two singles and his batting average took a jump up. They scored in six innings and made 11 runs, which showed very consistent playing.

The rooters had a big afternoon's fun. The Park street team had the bulk of the noisy small boys and a few of the big boys made a noise too. But the grand stand was T.A.S. and the T.A.S. won out and will carry off the City League honors for 1909.

The teams lined up as follows:

T.A.S.—Callaghan 3b, Cahill ss, Flaherty 2b, M. O'Brien 1b, Quinlan p, Doherty lf, McFadden c, W. O'Brien cf, Derocher rf.

Park St.—E. Pilling rf, J. Polling 1b, H. O'Brien 2, B. Dusty ss, Bell c, Crowe, cf, J. Pilling 2b, Pentland 3b, N. Dusty p.

President W. H. Taft

President Develops Vicious Whip in His Boxing Bouts.

New York, Aug. 22.—The World's correspondent at Beverly, Mass., announces that Dr. Charles E. Barker of Madison Wis., has developed another "phenom" in the pugilistic world. The latest celebrity is President William Howard Taft. Dr. Baker is President Taft's physical director. The President has been put through all the gymnasium stunts known to the doctor who has qualified as an expert. Now the President is teaching his tutor and giving him the time of his life for an hour each day.

Dr. Barker's experience proves that the President has a nifty wallop in his right arm and a vicious whip to the body with his left. He is not shifty on his feet as the younger and lighter man, but a course in shadow boxing will help some. Barker is quick and the President has a busy five minutes when he puts the gloves on with him.

The President does not desire to pose as a ring hero and he is not encouraging any undue talk from the doctor. Incidentally, he is not entertaining any bids for the moving picture rights on any of his bouts.

The little gymnasium over on the second floor of the Taft garage is fitted with several kinds of exercisers. There are chest weights, a rowing machine, leg weights and a platform punching bag. The President plays the whole string out when he gets started and Robert and Chase use the gymnasium when their father is not engaged in his exercises.

Athletic Meet.

The T.A.S. Athletic Association have decided to hold a big meet at Riverside Park on Labor Day and one of the features of the afternoon program will be a ball game with a good out of town team.

Suspected Firebug Arrested at Cobourg

Cobourg, Aug. 21.—Alfred Nicholson, who is suspected of having set fire to George Thompson's barn, and a planning mill owned by Charles Jex, here on the morning of the 15th was arraigned yesterday on the charge of attempted arson, and was remanded till the 25th. The Thompson premises with contents, including six horses, were destroyed

Provincial Inspector Reburn and Chief of police Rose traced the movements of Nicholson and three companions about the Jex and Thompson premises, and Nicholson's arrest followed. The other three are being held as witnesses.

Something About Motor Power Prices

The Lindsay Warder says:—

For some time past the Lindsay Light, Heat & Power Co. although it is not generally known, have been in the habit of making a considerable reduction in the cost of motor powerto new industries desiring to locate in Lindsay.

This is a great benefit to the town, providing new industries can be secured or induced to locate in Lindsay. The reduction made by the company is 12½ per cent. to any concern using twenty h.p. and over, making a net rate of $17.50 per h.p. delivered at the motor.

The company, it is understood, wish to work in conjunction with the Board of Trade and do everything possible to secure new industries for Lindsay.

The new rate $17.50 per h.p. compares favorably with any town in Canada. There is only one manufacturing concern in Lindsay that enjoys the reduction in motor power, viz., the Madison Williams Co., but all other concerns wishing to locate in Lindsay and using 20 h.p. will be granted the reduction in price. As was stated in the Warder a few weeks ago the company reduced the rate on all motors from one to ten h.p., which means a saving of a large amount of money to the citizens of Lindsay every year.

The company has twenty-six motors under ten h.p. in service in Lindsay. The following will show the motor rates in Lindsay previous to the reduction which went into effect July 1st:

One and two h.p. $45 per year.
Three hp., $40 per year.
Five h.p. $30 per year.

These prices have all been reduced to $30 per year. The present rate per year for motors over 10 h.p. is $20.

From 1 to 5 h.p. $40 per year.
From 5 to 10 h.p. $30 per year.
From 10 to 15 h.p. $25 per year.
From 20 h.p. and up $20 per year.

Orillia is the only town in Ontario where exceedingly cheap motor power is being offered and that is due to the fact that they have a municipal plant with no taxes of any kind to pay which would reduce the price easily to $5 per h.p. The rate per motor charged in Orillia is $16 all around.

It will be clearly seen by the above prices that the rates in Lindsay compare favorably with other towns.

Peterborough's Fire Department Is Modern

Peterborough's Fire Department is one of the most modern on the continent as far as it goes. Ald. Buller Buller always thought that the city was pretty well fixed, but he is convinced of that fact now. While away he visited many fire halls, and while others are fitted with more apparatus than Peterborough that have nothing on this city in the way of cleanliness and appearance about the hall, the way the apparatus is handled, in discipline among the men and lastly Chief Howard is just as good in his position as any chief at the convention, There is one thing the city does need, however, and that is a chemical engine. He saw the chemical engines in action, and he talked with a great many chiefs on the subject and they were all of the one opinion, viz., that the chemical engine is one of the greatest assets to a fire department.

Ald. Buller also made enquiries about fire alarm systems, and gained a lot of valuable information. He also spent a lot of time at the apparatus exhibition where he saw everything that is on the market for fighting fires. The apparatus was all exhibited in an automobile garage, about the size of the local armories, and for test and demonstration purposes they were taken outside.

The chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee will make a full report to his committee in the near future.

How Natives of Manilla Set Fire to Buildings

Ald. Buller tells a good yarn to be heard while at the Fire Chiefs' Convention at Grand Rapids, Michigan, which demonstrates the cuteness of the natives of Cuba. The chief of the fire department at Manilla, Cuba was one of those at the convention and he told the other chiefs of the great trouble he had experienced with bad fires and especially on windy days, due to no conceivable cause. The buildings in Manilla are all constructed of palms, the leaves being used for sides and roof and once they get started they go like a lot of loose paper, and a whole street or valley will sometimes be wiped out.

One day an alarm was sent to the fire hall and the brigade hustled to the scene and in the roof of the shack could be seen a little smoke rising. One of the men were sent up and he found the cause of the fire and also the cause of the other mysterious fires. An arrow, about a foot and a half or two feet long, the head being the same shape as the arrows used by the Indians and made of a very hard wood, similiar to our hickory was lodged in the palm leaves on the roof. This was pulled out and the cause discovered. At the head of the arrow were four matches bound to the stick; an inch from the matches was a cigarette with the lighted end turned away from the matches, also bound to the stick, while a white or colored cloth saturated in oil was wrapped around both. Then the cigarette was lighted and shot from a bow into the roof of the house. It would take from ten to twenty minutes for the cigarette to burn down to the matches, and this gave the incendierian plenty of time to get away. Once the fire got a start and with the breeze which was always blowing it wiped out the district and no fire department could stop it.

The chief of Manilla had that arrow on exhibition at Grand Rapids, and he was the center of attraction as all were interested in it. He said that the natives always set fire to the town whenever they got out of work or lacked excitement, and for a long time they had the chief baffled. Since the discovery of the arrow however, the evil has been greatly lessened and there are hopes of wiping it out entirely.

The Tudhope Carriage Works Fall Prey to Flames

Four Buildings Destroyed—Loss Will Be over $300,000— Cause of the Fire is Unknown.

Thompson's Bakery and Several Houses in the Vicinity Were Also Burned to the Ground.

(Special to The Times.)

Orillia, Aug. 21.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon, Tudhope's big carriage factory was discovered to be on fire, and, as the men were off on the usual Saturday half holiday, the flames gained great headway before the alarm was given.

When the men arrived, the fire was beyond control, and the whole four buildings were burned to the ground, including Thompson's bakery and several houses in the vicinity.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The loss will be about $300,000.

Mining Operations in the North Country

Lindsay, Aug. 21.—Mining operations are being carried on extensively in the vicinity of Tory Hill, Kinmount and Moore's Falls by the Toronto Mica Company, a new company recently organized of which Mr. H. G. Chamberlain of Toronto, is general manager.

For some time past Mr. Chamberlain has had a number of men working in the vicinity of Tory Hill on mica claims, and he himself has been back several times investigating matters. Mr. Chamberlain arrived in town again yesterday and left for Tory Hill this morning. Fifteen mica claims are being staked out at Tory Hill are being worked, and besides the above company are also operating on iron, copper and graphite claims in the same district.

Everything except the mica is handled by the New York company, of which Mr. Chamberlain is president, and general manager, but the mica is handled exclusively at Toronto. The New York Company, or the Mica Products Co., as it is called is located in No. 1 Madison Sq., and Mr. Chamberlain just returned recently from New York, where he purchased a large quantity of expensive machinery, which is being placed in the Toronto plant. It is being brought from New York at a big expense. The Toronto plant is the only mica grinding plant in Canada, and at this factory mica is treated for wall paper purposes, paint, roofing, packing steam pipes, and filling safes, etc.

Mr. Chamberlain states that there is enough mica in his claims to last one hundred years. The iron will be placed in New York, and if the mining engineer's report is as favorable as the assay, there will be little difficulty in placing the iron, stated Mr. Chamberlain this morning.

As to the graphite, nothing definite has been ascertained as yet. The graphite is there, but the depth is not known.

NEW BLOCK OF STORES.

Taylor Brothers are Having a Fine Building Erected on George St.

Work was commenced Saturday morning by Messrs. Rutherford Brothers on a new block of stores for Messrs. Taylor Brothers on George street, just south of Charlotte St. A block of two stores commodiously and modern in design will be built. The building will be three storeys in height and in architecture and size will be a credit to the business portion of the city. Next year it is the intention to tear down the dwelling houses on both sides of the new building and to erect more stores, making a handsome block of buildings. The end of the building at the corner of George and Charlotte streets, will be a departmental store, and will be a very handsome structure, as befitting its central location.

With these contemplated buildings and the handsome block of stores erected by Messrs. Lundy and Brooks further down it looks as if the business part of the city were going to extend to the south and rapidly too.

RADIUM SUPPLY FOR WORLD.

Claimed Vast Pitch Blende Deposit Exists in California.

Kennetta, Calif. August 22.—According to a story told by Dr. S. Wilkins, who arrived yesterday, enough pitch blende has been discovered on the McCloud River north of here to supply the world with radium for all time. Dr. Wilkins had in his possession fine specimens of the precious stuff, and so impressed were some business men with his story that they sent an expert to visit the newly discovered ledge which is 20 miles up the McCloud River from the confluence of that stream with the Pitt River.

Cured Palpitation and Prevented Sleep. When Health Was Gone, Cure Followed Use of Nerviline.

"My last wish will be," writes Harry P. Pollard, a well-known boot and shoe traveller of Hartford, "that everyone with a bad stomach may learn as I did, before it's too late, that Nerviline is the one remedy to cure. Why, I was in mighty bad shape, my digestion was all wrong, and every night I would waken with a start and find my heart jumping like a threshing machine. This was caused by gas on my heart. When I started to use Nerviline I got better mighty fast. It is certainly a grand remedy for the travelling man, keeps your stomach in order, cures cramps, prevents lumbago or rheumatism, breaks up chest colds and sore throat—in fact there hasn't been an ache or pain inside or outside for the past two years that I haven't cured with Nerviline. Do you wonder I recommend it?"

For general household use Nerviline has no equal: it will cure the aches and ailments of the entire family—refuse anything but Nerviline, 25 cts. per bottle, five for $1.00, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 6

COURTSHIP AND MARRIAGE.

By an interesting coincidence the appeal of a Chicago widow to Senator Borah, with his chivalrous response agreeing to help the fair lady to find a manly husband among the "overall" wearers of Idaho, was published simultaneously in The Record Herald with a letter of its regular correspondent, Mr. Curtis, describing the little known and pretty successful system of "courtship by correspondence" which is furnishing the fine, willing bachelors of Wyoming and other underwomaned states in the far West with attractive and desirable helpmeets from the eastern centers of spinsterhood. Senator Borah is a better go-between than a "personal", but his time and thought are otherwise occupied as a rule and he cannot do much for the promotion of matrimony in his state of Idaho.

Courtship by correspondence and first introductions through the "ads" in general or special papers are the products of necessity rather than of choice, but the possibility of the abuse of these agencies by vicious and venal persons should not blind one to their entirely legitimate and honest phases. The government and local authority cannot be too watchful in the premises to prevent fraud and vice, but, as Mr. Curtis says, "any honorable method of inducing feminine immigration" to the regions of compulsory bachelordom is justifiable and commendable.

The Anglo-Saxon is romantic in his ideas of marriage. He is contemptuous of the French marriage of reason, or of convenience, and believes that love should precede, not follow, wedlock. But the fact remains that marriage are just as happy in France as in England or America, and falling in love with one's wife is by no means a rare phenomenon. The gallant French consider it a tribute to the fair sex to act tacitly on the theory that it is perfectly "safe" to marry any healthy, comely, pleasant, sensible young woman—that is, that affection and tenderness are sure to develop in the intimacy of the companionship and community of interest created by wedlock. We think even British eugenics would indorse this idea in the main.

Good luck to the Chicago widow and the worthy bachelors of the far-off states. The indestructible Union can only benefit by the multiplication of indestructible domestic unions between eastern women and ... men.

PUBLICITY.

The ... last January turned down a by-law to permit the city to spend $10,000 per year for a period of five years in a "boost Ottawa" campaign. The idea of the council in submitting the by-law was that by the end of three years the people would have a pretty good idea whether the campaign had produced sufficient results to warrant continuance of such a yearly expenditure. As stated, the people voted down the proposition. The by-law however, was not badly defeated. The vote stood: for the by-law 1,151, against the by-law ... The Council believed at the time of the defeat, and still believes, that a lot of people who voted against the by-law had not been made sufficiently aware of the nature of the work that was intended. The Journal believes that if there had been a campaign of education before the by-law was put before the people the result would have been different.

The Journal adverts to the subject at this time, because it thinks that it is in the best interests of the city that the by-law should again be submitted to the people, and that the necessary campaign of education should be begun early in the fall, instead of being left till election week.

Advocates of publicity will probably be met in some quarters with the objection that Publicity only benefits the hotel keeper and the merchant. It is to answer such objections as they can be well answered, that there should be an aggressive campaign of education jointly by the paign of education jointly by the council and the Board of Trade.

Publicity properly directed will benefit Ottawa both directly and indirectly. What will benefit Ottawa will certainly benefit the people of Ottawawa. There can be no surer proposition.

Let us therefore adopt a policy which will bring both business concerns and visitors to Ottawa. Other cities are advertising themselves and making money and population by their aggressiveness. Why not Ottawa which has four natural advantages than any other city in Canada and better inducements to offer to prospective industries.

There is not a visitor who comes to Ottawa but who is delighted with the city. The trouble however is that so comparatively few people in Canada know of the fine brand of goods Ottawa has to show. And they are not likely to know unless we tell them by some means or other. We cannot get at those people without the expenditure of money and energy.

Will ratepayers vote the money next January? They will not unless they are given solid reasons why they should do so.

A CONTRAST.

The steady course of British justice was illustrated yesterday by the execution in London of Dhinagari, the Hindoo student who shot and killed Sir William Curzon-Wyllie on June 1. Ten weeks ago the murder was committed, under circumstances which might be strongly represented as indicating insanity on Dhinagari's part. Sir William Curzon-Wyllie was a retired Indian official, merely supposed to be called on to give occasional advice about Indian affairs. He was by no means a shining mark for a Hindoo agitator. Moreover, he had befriended many Indian students in London. Dhinagari, who knew him but slightly, and himself had been kindly treated by Curzon-Wyllie, shot down his victim without a word at a reception at which they were both present, and at a moment when Lady Curzon-Wyllie had just left her husband—a hideously cruel as well as causeless and senseless deed. One can hardly imagine anyone but a monomaniac doing such a thing.

However, in ten weeks the last penalty of the law had reached the murderer.

In America, there would have been long delay in trial, a plea of insanity, weeks spent in endeavor to get a jury, further legal delays of various kinds, probably a disagreement of the jury, but if not, either a conviction followed by motions for a new trial, or a relegation to an asylum and subsequent efforts by the man's family to get him out. Contrast the Dhinagari case with the Thaw case and you have perhaps a sufficient reason why there were nearly a thousand murders in New York last year compared with less than a tenth of that number in the city of London of double the population.

Get Well First

Don't risk even a penny—until health first returns.

And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick: "I will not ask for your money, not for your word, not even for your note, if Dr. Shoop's Restorative does not help you."

And for 20 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and town in America. They are positively endorsed in every community—and everywhere.

Then why pay the risk, and at your risk, for other unrecommended and unknown remedies? Thousands upon thousands have in the most impartial and honest manner testified that Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Within the Stomach nerves, or the Heart or Kidney nerves fail, these sick ones know how quickly Dr. Shoop's Restorative will bring them back to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever. They know that when health fails it proves will return. Dr. Shoop himself gladly gets the proof. And that's why we say

Then Pay For

Dr. Shoop's Restorative is not a stimulant to whip a weak heart into spasmodic action. It is not a habit-forming nerve deadener. It is not a constipating astringent. It is not a false tonic to permanently injure the stomach, liver and kidneys. It is not a mere relief. It is not a mere false tonic to permanently injure the stomach, liver and kidneys. OAK IS FOUR CENTURIES OLD.

Of Unusual Size and Probably a Sapling When Columbus Landed.

A wide spreading oak, which experts have declared must have been growing at the time of the discovery of America by Columbus, is a landmark on the estate of the late Arthur Hunnewell, in Wellesley, Mass. The magnificent tree measures twenty-six feet in circumference at the base. It is a noticeable landmark on account of its unusual size. It intersects the fence which separates the fertile fields of the Hunnewell estate from the highway, and thus arrests the attention of the passer-by.

Mr. Hunnewell took great pride in the ancient tree. It has withstood the ravages of pests for a great many years and is apparently in condition to live for a great many more decades. Mr. Hunnewell once had the tree examined by an expert from the Smithsonian Institute, who declared that it was between 400 and 500 years old. Elliot, the apostle of the Indians frequently passed the towering oak while going to and from South Natick, where he preached to the Indians, the tree being beside what was the old trail.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $300,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognised or unrecognised, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

RAIN SPOILS PAGEANT

FIRST DAY OF CHURCH SPECTACLE PROVES RIDICULOUS.

Bad Weather Mars Effect of Great Historic Object Lesson in London—Mud Bedraggled Saints and Monks Make Scene of Reverence Almost Comical—Retrospect of Church is Given by Huge Company.

After many months of hard work, of enduring enthusiasm, and of those little troubles which are inevitable in a great assembly of amateur actors, the English Church Pageant a few days ago gave its opening performance.

Alas! the elements were not propitious. The day was the worst we have had this summer—cold, rainy, utterly dismal. It was most unfortunate, because the pageant depended so much on the weather, not only for the comfort of actors and audience, but for its propriety.

The colors wanted the sun to bring out their richness and harmonies. All the colors on the field were dimmed and drabbled by the dank, dull atmosphere which clung about the actors. Instead of the joyousness and gaiety of those living pictures of medieval crowds on the green field, with its encompassing trees in heavy foliage, there were rather somber effects of poor people in unfamiliar garments, bedraggled in the heavy rain, and moving through the mist. This somber tone was deepened as the afternoon wore on and the light failed.

Then, too, the weather robbed the pageant of some of its revenue and dignity. It made some of the scenes fall from the sublime very near to the ridiculous, because the sympathy of one's imagination was shocked a little by the sight of saints and monks pelting about the saddened field, and getting into position at the wings of the open-air stage under the shelter of umbrellas. Roars of laughter greeted an episode in which British virgins were chased by savage Saxons with long spears, when, on the slippery, slushy ground, "Jill fell down, and Jack came tumbling after."

The great choir, gowned and headed in medieval garb, were bound to abandon the dignity of history, and to commit wilful anachronisms in the full sight of the audience, and they sang the old litanies and dirges under a very forest of umbrellas.

In many ways the pageant itself, in spite of the bad weather, which tried hard to spoil it, was full of interest and supremely successful. The huge stand, with accommodation for many thousands of people, was packed to the last seat, and the enthusiasm of the audience, among whom were hundreds of clergy, was not to be damped. And the pageant pictures in the field rewarded them. Undoubtedly there was an appeal to the imagination, to the eye, [illegible] to one's sense of reverence, in the pictorial drama representing by living figures in vivid scenes the history of the old Church of England. The very field on which this drama was played is historic ground. The moat of Lambeth Palace was dug out many centuries ago, and on the field which it surrounds many great scenes, many most vital episodes in the history of our church and country, have been really enacted by men strong in spirit, whose flesh has long since gone to dust.

Thinking of that and of old things half forgotten, it seemed to one that the people on the pageant ground yesterday, vague as they were in the dank mist, were the ghosts of those who once played their parts and went their way to death and bequeathed their ideals and purpose to those who followed on this soil of England.

The prelude, with St. George in the silver-shining armor, and with the early British saints, Alban and Ninian, David and Patrick, stirred in one's memories of the dream-stories of the dawn of Christian faith in Britain—legends made true only by tradition and by a few old stories here and there

The first scene of "The Publication in Britain of the Edict of Constantine, 313," is not recorded in history, but at least it was a reminder of the Roman occupation of Britain and of the little bodies of Christians, scattered outposts of the Faith, who lived between the rule of the Roman gods and of the Druid nature-worship, and to whom a liberal emperor granted freedom of religion as to all citizens of the empire. That was all a ghost-story yesterday, but one which took one's imagination back to the dim half-light of the early world.

And so as the scenes followed—the visit of St. Germain of Auserre to the British Christians who had fallen into heresy, the founding of Iona by St. Columba, the coming of St. Augustine to the Saxons, who had driven the British to the West and destroyed the Christian outposts, the conversion of those Saxon people who were truly the first of the English, and the strong and real foundation of the Church in England—one had before one on the field a drama, full of color, in which one saw, as on an illuminated scroll of history, the foundation of the faith of our fathers.

One was shown the influence of monasticism in England before and after the Conquest, and the martyrdom of Becket reminded one of the long struggle between the Church and State—marked not once or twice only by brutal injustice and bloody tragedies, inevitable, perhaps, in a conflict between the spiritual and the temporal power, each seeking to break down the other's prerogatives, each claiming perhaps more than was due.

The episode of Magna Charta was to prove that the old Church was sometimes, if not always, on the side of liberty. The later episode of the suppression of the monasteries and the establishment of the Reformed Faith proved one thing to one man and one thing to another, according to his religious convictions and his knowledge of history.

Strengthen these failing parts with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and the [illegible] will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

HUNTING THE RHEA.

Ostrich-like Bird Furnishes Exciting Sport in Patagonia.

Down in Patagonia one of the principal sports is the chase of the rhea, a member of the ostrich family, but not quite so large as the ostriches we see in the circuses and the zoological gardens. The bird, however, is a swift runner and can set a fast pace for a horse or a greyhound. It has also some sagacity, for frequently it will double on its course and sometimes in that way succeeds in eluding its pursuers altogether. The requisites for the rhea hunter are a horse, a fast dog and a bola. The dog finds the scent of the bird, and the hunter pursues as fast as he can on the horse. When he comes close enough he makes use of the bola. This instrument is made of two or three balls of lead or stone attached to a throng which is six or eight feet long. When it is hurled at the fleeing bird the balls wind about the part where the bola strikes and serve to impede its progress. The hunters and dogs then rush forward and dispatch the rhea.

When the bird sees that it is in danger often it will crouch down flat on the ground and stretch its neck out under the grass and wait until the dogs pass. If the wind is blowing against the scent this ruse often saves the life of the game. If it is discovered it usually is so startled that it makes no effort to escape. The rhea will run for five or six miles on a stretch, and it gives dogs and riders all they can do to keep up with it. But when the game is captured the hunters feel that the chase is worth while, for the wings of the birds are not unlike turkey meat in flavor, and the meat of the thigh has a taste not unlike that of horseflesh, which connoisseurs pronounce very fine.

THE PIPE OF PEACE.

Etiquette of the Calumet Observed by the American Indian.

When you read an account of the conclusion of a treaty with the Indians you are pretty sure to find that the calumet was brought out and handed around. The calumet is a pipe of peculiar construction. The bowl is of red sandstone, and the stem is of reed, about two and a half feet long. The stem is decorated with women's hair and feathers, which hang from it like a fringe.

This pipe is the famous "pipe of peace," used by the American Indian. After a treaty has been concluded the pipe is produced and filled with tobacco. It is then handed to the representatives of the party with whom the treaty has been made, and they must take at least one whiff of it. It is afterward passed around among the Indians present, who also take a whiff of it, and that ceremonial ratifies and makes sacred the compact that has just been entered into. The passing around of the calumet is an act of hospitality, and a refusal to take it is considered a dire offense.—Chicago News.

A Fireside Game.

Word guessing is a good game to play in the evening. One of the players thinks of a word and says, "I have a word of six letters; the first letter is 's' and the last is 'a.'"

The guessers are allowed to ask any questions they like, which the leader is bound to answer, if he can do so without actually telling the word. The player who guesses the word correctly chooses the next one, and a prize is won by the player guessing the largest number of words.

An Order For the Grocer.

Good morning, Mr. Grocer Boy! My order's long today.
My pantry's nearly empty now, because I've been away.
I want a pound of nice white flour and yeast to make some bread,
Ten pounds of currants for a cake, some icing powder red.

Of butter give me half a pound, of sugar most a ton.
I must make candy right away, before the morning's done.
Potatoes? Why, of course I don't. And codfish? No, indeed!
You interrupt and bother me. I know the things I need.

A quart of strong vanilla bring, and hominy, too, and spice,
A pound of nutmeg—don't forget—it makes things taste so nice.
I want ten dozen freshest eggs, some evaporated cream
And apples, "best a peck or two; some dumplings I must steam.

I'll take a box of oranges and chocolate, five cakes,
And cardamond cocoanut—such lovely things it makes!
Now, hurry up my order, please. I want them very soon,
So I can get Colin all cooked up by luncheon time this noon.

IDE'S VIEW OF WOMEN.

Thinks They Should Vote on Questions That Concern Them.

Henry Clay Ide, ex-governor general of the Philippines, who takes the post of United States minister to Spain, has some advanced ideas on the subject of women. He doesn't exactly come out for unqualified woman suffrage, but something very near it.

"I have always thought," he said to a New York Tribune reporter, "that taxpayers should vote, on the questions of spending them. They have an undoubted right, of course, to subject the public to taxation, but in the matter of their property, the expenditure of the money thus obtained, the management and maintenance of the schools and the general protection of the community. They should have the vote on all things affecting the moral uplift of the people. Schools especially are their province. The mother has the training of the child. That is her work, and who knows better than she does what is for the child's best interest in the school?"

Mr. Ide said he believed that women's growing interest in the ballot would have a purifying effect in politics. "And the agitation for woman suffrage has already worked wonders toward the general emancipation of women," he said. "In the days when I cast my first vote a woman in most of the states could not make a contract that was binding. She had almost no property rights. She might be a rich woman, married to a man who brought her nothing, but her property was his to control. She had no rights in her children, who in the eyes of the law were her husband's. Now all this is changed, and, while it is true it was men who repealed those unjust laws, woman suffrage agitation made the sentiment that caused them to do the repealing.

"A woman who does the work a man does should be paid the money a man is paid. Of course there are kinds of work requiring more muscle than most women have, but in clerical and intellectual pursuits there need be no distinction and should be none. In some occupations—for instance, that of court stenographer—women are paid as well as men now."

An Excuse For a Pardon.

When the stern Duke of Wellington was prime minister under George IV. he managed the old monarch easily enough, but when he attempted the same tactics with the young Queen Victoria he met his match. She constantly outwitted him. One of his earliest official acts was to bring before her a court martial death sentence which he expected her to sign as a matter of course. A soldier was to be executed for desertion, and as the death warrant was placed before the queen by the duke she raised her eyes, full of tears, to his face, saying:

"Have you nothing to say in behalf of this poor man?"

"Nothing," said the duke, standing at attention like one of his own privates; "he has deserted three times."

"Oh, your grace, think again," pleaded the queen, as if she were asking for the life of her dearest friend.

"Well, your majesty, he certainly is a bad soldier, but there was somebody who spoke for his good character. He may be a tolerably good fellow in civil life."

"Oh, thank you," said the queen in heartfelt tones, and before the astonished duke could utter a word of protest she had written across the paper the word "Pardoned."

The Privileges were Sold for One Dollar

North Bay. Aug. 20.—The Privy Council may finally have to decide whether the Separate School Board at Sturgeon Falls is entitled to half the taxes from the pulp mills there, a question which made a sectarian uproar in the Ontario Legislature in 1904, and which has had Sturgeon Falls by the ears ever since.

Acting as arbitrator under the Michaud Act, passed in 1904, Judge Valin heard argument yesterday in the matter of the claim of the Separate School Board of that place for $1,149.54, with interest of five per cent., against the Public School trustees of the same town.

The dispute dates from 1898, when it was proposed to give a bonus of $7,000 to the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Company, to assist in establishing that industry there. In orda to facilitate the passage of the necessary bylaw at the Council Board, an agreement was entered into, dated June 22, 1898, between the Public and the Separate School boards, signed and sealed, that, on consideration of one dollar, the Public School Board was to hand over one-half the taxes received from the pulp mill each year, to the Separate School up to an assessment of $40,000.

ARBITRATOR APPOINTED.

The bylaw was passed and the bonus paid over, but the agreement was never carried out, and, in 1904, (Joseph Michaund, of Sturgeon Falls, being then member of the legislature for Nippissing West) what is known as the Michaund Act was passed legalizing the agreement of 1898, and appointing the district judge as arbitrator in case of dispute between the parties.

At the hearing yesterday the Separate School was represented by G. A. McGaughey; J. M. McNamara represented the municipality of Sturgeon Falls, while G. F. McFarland, of Davis, Patterson, Rand McFarland, Toronto, represented the Public School. The position of the Public School is that the act is ultra vires and nothing is due the Separate School; that the legislature had no power to legalize an agreement otherwise illegal.

Aside from this the Public School Board claims they have never been able to get as much money from the council as necessity demanded, and have to borrow money to carry on having received the money, they could not be expected to pay it, even if the Act holds good, and that under the act the judge was empowered to act as arbitrator only after the money had been paid to the Public School.

IT'S VERY TANGLED.

Counsel for the town argued that the town was not concerned in the dispute, and could not be ordered to pay the claim, as the agreement was between the two school boards solely and recognized in the act as such. An adjournment was made until Thursday, Sept. 9, at 10 a.m., when the Separate School will submit evidence as to what moneys the Public School Board did get and could have got from the Pulp Company, as the claim of the Public School that the money was not received is disputed.

As a matter of fact the taxes of the pulp and paper industry at Sturgeon Falls have always been in disputed arrears, an award of $4,900 against the Imperial Paper Company being still unpaid and the assessment for the last year being before the Municipal and Railway Board of Appeal.

The agreement provided that half the school taxes paid by the Pulp Company up to an assessment of $40 000 should be paid to the Separate School. How this was to be arrived at is a question, as the Public school have to submit their requisition to the council before the date can be struck and estimate the amount of money needed for the current year. If the estimate is correct and no surplus is left them then the money paid the Separate School would form a deficit. If school ratepayers would be paying a portion instead of the company as originally intended.

Both parties seem determined to put up a fight and the matter may finally reach the Privy Council.

JEFF HOLDING UP FIGHT.

McIntosh, Promoter of Last Big Contest Talks of the Next.

New York, Aug. 22.—Hugh Donald McIntosh, the Australian who promoted the Johnson-Burns contest, is still sure that he will land the biggest fight plum in history.

"It's all up to Jeff," he said. "Jeff is certainly holding up the match now. Whatever they say about Johnson, he must be given credit for being sincere in his desire to fight Jeff. Otherwise, would be offer to let Jeff make winner take all? Johnson was willing to do that in Australia. He said so here, and he said so in Chicago.

"Where? Well, I've set my mind on England as the place. It's so much better than Australia, because of the distance, besides having a population of 16,000,000 to draw up, against Australia's 5,000,000. They have never had a big fight in London, and it would create a tremendous sensation. Men who usually give up $125 for inferior fights at the National Club would give any amount to see this fight. The picture would be a mine.

"London is the center of the world's market, and I'd have the pictures on Broadway in six days. They'd fight in open at noon. The law says that the fights there must be limited. I've had the best lawyers in England to look the matter up and they find no clause that would prevent a fight limited far beyond twenty rounds. It's a cert that I'll make it England's greatest day if I'm lucky enough to land the bout. I count on the pictures, if Jeff wins. If Johnson wears Jim down and knocks him out I'll sell the pictures to the first bidder. Their value hinges on Jeffries being returned the winner.

"I'll have them in Paris in eight hours, and in ten different houses in London on the night of the fight. I won't consider California. I like Coffroth, and will not consider any encroachment on his ground. I have a substantial offer to do business from a spot in California that might serve in a pinch. But England? Oh! I'll move heaven and earth to send them there.

There would be erected an arena that would command a revenue that has never been equalled in the history of the world's greatest shows. I will stand by my offer of $62,000. Jeff has us all on the anxious seat. I do hope that he does something soon."

Chicago, Aug. 22.—Sam Berger, Jeffries' manager, left for California yesterday to see Jim Coffroth and Tom McCarra, the western fight promoters about bids for the proposed Johnson-Jeffries fight for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Hugh McIntosh, the Australian pro moter, who promoted the Johnson-Burns fight at Sydney, has written Berger he will offer $30,000 for the battle, but reserves the right to stage the fight in either England or Australia. Berger said last night Jeffries wants to fight in this country, and unless McIntosh agrees to stage the fight in this country, his bid will not be considered.

How Prisoners are Reformed

Seattle, Aug. 22.—Governor Albert W. Gilchrist of Florida was the most notable speaker at the opening session today of the American Prison Association, his subject being "Prison Reform in the South."

Warden F. O. Hellstrom of the North Dakota penitentiary spoke on "The Duty of Prison Managements."

"If a man be convicted of crime and serve a term in prison, and no steps are taken to effect his reform or cure, a greater crime against society has been committed than the crime of individual," said Mr. Hellstrom. "Any prisonmanagement that forgets the moral ethics, justice and humanity cannot justify its right to existence," continued the speaker. "The prison that is managed and dominated by the spirit of revenge is simply a barnacle that society must remove in order to facilitate human progress.

"When the inmate's character is uplifted the duty of the prison management has been in that measure discharged; the shackles of crime have been removed from the mind of the inmate, and there has been added to society a useful member. If the man discharged goes forth with bitter hatred and vengeance in his heart and vengeance in his heart against society, then both are to be pitied, for the storm will surely break and some innocent person will be made the victim.

"Look well to the moral development, sow the seeds of love and justice, promote industry and thrift, lay stress on honesty and honor, discourage everything that makes for evil, teach and practice that and patience, enforce strict discipline, but make no inhuman and unnatural rules. Preach and practice temperance.

"Give us more schools, more churches, more charity and less barley corn and revenge, and there will be less need for jails, reformatories and penitentiaries."

The report of the special committee on the parole of life prisoners was read by the chairman, T. D. Wells of Hartford, Conn. The discussion was opened by A. W. Butler, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Charities.

"If a life prisoner has worn the badge of bondage long enough to satisfy the reasonable demands of justice and to exhaust the deterrent effects of punishment, and if he is safe to be at large, he can be put to better use in the world than to be kept within grim walls until the undertaker is called to rattle his bones over the stones," said Chairman Wells of the committee on parole of life prisoners in a report to the convention.

"The wisdom of extending the parole system to life convicts who have been convicted of no previous crime involving moral turpitude and with no record behind locks and bars has been clean and not tainted, is predicated on the fact that a man who is responsive to decent impulses is worth more to the state and to himself out of prison than in prison."

HOW TO TELL

If the Kidneys and Liver are Not Acting Well

Thousands die every year from aggravated kidney distress that could have been saved if they only knew. Your back may ache, you think it's tiredness or physical weakness.

You grow irritable and nervous—it's put down to loss of sleep.

Joints ache, muscles get sore, it's all put down to bad weather.

Then digestion gets poor, appetite fades away, sugar bleaches, spirits droop.

Can't you see it's all from your over-worked kidneys, which can't keep the body clear of poisons that are now surging through the whole system.

Cure your kidneys with Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"When I was so stooped and back weary, so lame and sore with kidney and bladder trouble, I cured myself quickly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes C. C. Ferrier, a well known merchant of Plainsville. "Dr. Hamilton's Pills touched the spot at once, gave my back ease, lifted depression and weariness, made a new man of me. I can also say for a good spring medicine to clear and enrich the blood Dr. Hamilton's Pills have no equal."

The housewife whose aching back makes every little duty a burden, who is tired all night, whose feet swell—kidney trouble.

Women whose kidneys are sick, suffer continually from blind and sick headaches, faint and dizzy spells, bearing down pains, sharp twinges when stooping, distressing urinary troubles, aching muscles, and joints, lack of appetite, and loss of sleep reach the cause. Cure the kidneys Use Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills, which have cured thousands. 25c at all dealers.

The Orillia Fire

loss is consequently a serious one for the town.

Orillia, Aug. 21.—The fire which broke out here at 2 o'clock in the Tudhope Carriage Works is still raging and has wiped out a large number of the surrounding buildings.

The Barrie Fire Department has sent aid and every effort is being exerted by the two departments and amateur fire fighters to confine the flames.

The carriage works were totally destroyed, and the other losses, so far, are very heavy.

GUESSES AT THE NAVAL CONFERENCE

Guesses at what is going on behind the doors of the Imperial Defence Conference are now in order. It seems safe to permit surmise to outline, certain lines of probability and the cable correspondents are apparently proceeding on this basis. It is a likely prediction, for instance, that the Australians are nervous about Japan and are not agreed with the Imperial policy of denuding the Pacific stations of warships. That has been the Australian attitude all along. They have given this feeling material form by starting to build a local navy of their own for coast defence. But it must be pure surmise to tell us now that the Australians are insisting upon this phase of the question so vigorously as to find themselves in collision with the Admiralty.

The Admirglty has known all along that the Australians were very anxious about local defence. It has known that they would insist upon having some sort of protection at home no matter what they might do toward strengthening the Imperial "first line of defence" in European waters. Consequently it is surely safe to infer that the Admiralty has been well prepared for this position and quite ready to meet it as far as it could. On the other hand, the Australians and the New Zealanders have shown that they feel the pressure of duty in the matter of Imperila defence by generous offer of Dreadnaughts. That is, while they are apprehensive about the future of the northern part of the Australian Continent, they realise perfectly that a nearer danger in point of time probably menaces the Mother Country.

Out of such a position, surely the sentatives of the Admiralty will be Australian delegates and the representatives easily able to arrive at a compromise without finding any "sharp differences" between them. If the British Empire is stabbed to the heart by a thrust at London, the position of the empty provinces in Northern Australia will become perilous, indeed. A lost battle off the coast of their island-continent might be serious but, so long as the British Empire remained intact, the ground could be recovered and any raiding Asiatics ejected. But a lost battle in the North Sea, followed by the occupation of London, would be fatal; and the handful of "whites" in Australia would find themselves alone facing an over-crowded and rapidly awakening and arming Asia.

The predictions ventured in the case of the Canadian delegates are equally hap-hazard. The statement that our delegates think that our ships should ride the Pacific alone, is highly improbable. Will the boys" in the Maritime Provinces thus willingly give up all hopes of "patronage"? It is more likely that our Ministers would each like to have a battleship attached to the biggest sea port in their respective spheres of influence, which would "divide" the spoils if it did not "conquer" the enemy.

If Canada intends to do anything effective in the present crisis, she must be willing to find the money and let the Admiralty do the building training and fighting. If she proposes to do nothing but prepare to build ships at home for the patrolling of her own waters—which are not menaced by even the shadowy danger that overhangs Australia—then she deliberately withdraws her support from the Imperial Government at this time, and retires from the Conference with a promise that, if Britain can fight her own battles alone for the next decade or two, she will then find a Canadian fleet in the offing which may do some fighting for the next generation.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

THE disease now known as 'grip' used to be called 'influenza.'

It very closely resembles a cold, but is more tenacious in its hold upon the system and produces more profound disturbances.

Grip is in reality epidemic catarrh. When it once begins it spreads over the country very rapidly.

People do not catch the grip from each other, but each one catches it from the atmosphere.

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Prof. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines,—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

Healthy Mucous Membranes.

Those who are fortunate enough to have perfectly healthy mucous membranes ordinarily do not catch the grip.

The mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and lungs, when in a normal state, are an effectual barrier against the invasion of grip.

But, if there happens to be the slightest catarrhal derangement of the mucous membranes, then the victim becomes an easier prey to the grip.

The rational thing to do is to keep the system free from catarrh. In attempting to do this most people have found Peruna to be invaluable.

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

The Medical Profession Recognizes The Grip as Epidemic Catarrh.

During an epidemic of grip Peruna should be used. The doses recommended on the bottle are sufficient.

After the grip has once been acquired, Dr. Hartman recommends the use of Peruna in teaspoonful doses every hour during the acute stage, after which the directions on the bottle should be followed.

Experience has shown that the people who use Peruna as a remedy for grip generally recover sooner and are less liable to the distressing and long-continued after-effects of the grip.

When Peruna has not been used during the course of the grip and the patient finds himself suffering from the after-effects of this disease, a course of Peruna should be resorted to.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 228 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe.

Mr. T. Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes: "After a severe attack of a grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, writes "Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. I read a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. My husband bought me a bottle of Peruna. I was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was cured."

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

Peter E. Nummers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and strooms in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

City Council Takes No Action Re Burleigh Falls Power

Warm Debate on the Question—Ald. Morgan, McIntyre, Duncan, Turner and Metheral Wanted a Report at Once—The Other Members Favored a waiting Policy

The option on Burleigh Falls power has expired. The council has not yet secured an engineer's report although now an engineer has been appointed and will proceed with the work when instructed by the council. There was rather a warm debate on the question, led by Ald. Morgan, Duncan, Turner, McIntyre and Metheral, who wanted a report at once. The other members favored a waiting policy and they carried their point.

The Committee of the Whole Council reported recommending that Mr. R. B. Roger be employed to make a report on Burleigh Falls power.

Ald. Hicks said that the option on the power was expired and he would ask to have inserted in the report the words that Mr. Roger proceed with the work when instructed to do so by the council.

Ald. Morgan asked why this meeting was left over until the option had expired? Why was not a meeting called sometime ago? Was it because Ald. Morrow refused to sign a cheque to pay for the services of the engineer. It is not fair tothe people of this city. The city should get an engineer to make a report on Burleigh Falls. The council does not know a thing about the power, and never will until a report is received.

Ald. Bradburn said that the option was now expired and before anything else could be done a renewal of the option should besecured.

Ald. Hicks suggested making another counter proposition.

Ald. Turner favored getting the engineer's report at once.

Ald. McIntyre moved that Mr. Rogers be instructed to make his report if the council can get a new option.

Ald. Hick's motion was that Mr. Rogers not proceed with the work until instructed to by the council. — Carried.

Ald. Duncan said—"Mr. Mayor you are accused of holding this meeting off until the option was expired. Guilty or not guilty?"

The mayor said "Not guilty." He had no intention of holding the meeting off. In fact he thought the option did not expire until August 23, but it expired on Aug. 22.

Ald. McIntyre said he had tried hard to get the mayor to call the meeting.

Twelve Lives Lost in Pittsburg Riot

The Bloodiest Riot in Pennsylvania Since the Days of the Homestead Strike —Pitched Battle in Streets

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 23.— As a smoke befogged sun rose over the dull gray houses and factories of McKee's Rocks early today, nothing except two piles of bricks and a street littered with broken glass indicated to the casual observer that last night one of the bloodiest riots in Pennsylvania since the days of the Homestead strike had occurred, costing five lives and at least seven mortal injuries, the result of a six weeks old labor dispute between the Pressed Steel Car Company of Schoenville and its employes

From midnight until dawn today county and state officers searched dark alleyways and crowded desolate tenements for additional wounded men and women.

Before nightfall it is predicted that the death list will total more than a dozen.

The State's toll is two dead and one fatally injured, the county lost a deputy sheriff, Harry Eckley of Toronto, Can., while the striking employees of the car company lost five of their leaders, two dead and three fatally injured.

One woman, wife of a striker, for the sake of her husband's cause was shot in the back and will not recover. A boy who stood beside her during a clash between the State troops and the infuriated mob of strike sympathizers also is in danger of death, having been shot with a rifle ball.

The Council Received Many Communications

The council met last night and put through a lot of business which had accumulated during the month and also received a large number of communications. All the members were present except Ald. Morrow.

President R. H. Leary addressed the council on behalf of the Agricultural Society, and asked for a grant of say $500 to the society this year. The buildings on the ground are in a bad state of repair and need a lot of fixing up.

The usual grant has been $400 a year. Ald. Buller moved that the increase be granted. Ald. Turner seconded it.

Ald. Duffus said it should go to the Finance Committee, and the mayor agreed with this.

Ald. Bradburn opposed such a motion as Ald. Buller made going through until Monday night next. He moved that it be left over for the Finance Committee and it carried.

The minutes of the last meeting were taken as read.

The following communications were then read and referred to their proper committees:—

W. T. Carruthers wrote pointing out the need of a sidewalk on the south side of Charlotte street from Park street to Maitland avenue

A letter was received from Cox, Kimball & Stowe, garristers of Buffalo, asking what was the position of the city relative to their claim of their client, the Cameron Septic Tank Company.

F. Bartlett made application for the position of superintendent of construction in connection with the new Smith street bridge.

Notice was received from Dr. Amys, secretary, to the effect that the Central Ontario Medical Association approve of the plans for the proposed new isolation hospital

T. Q. Quartermaine asked for two weeks for holidays.

W. H. G. Armstrong wrote from Buchanan, Sask., regarding a sidewalk for the north side of King St. between Pearl and Margaret avenues He stated that the sidewalk had been properly petitioned for some years ago but had never been built.

F. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition applied for the annual grant from the city.

His Honor G. M. Roger sent in his resignation as a member of the Court of Revision, owing to his removal to Cobourg.

T. L. Arnott applied for the position of inspector of concrete on the new Smith street bridge. He has completed a course in civil engineering at the Royal Military College

The Central Milling Company wrote to the council in reference to the tax charged against their business assessment for school purposes, alleging that an error had been made.

Mrs. J. A. Hartley wrote in reference to her taxes, alleging that an error had been made.

On motion Caretaker Wilson of the city buiicings was granted two weeks holidays to be taken at once. Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine was also allowed two weeks holidays after making satisfactory arrangements with Engineer T. A. S. Hay.

Judge G. M. Roger resigned his position on the Court of Revision on account of his removal to Cobourg. The mayor notified the council that he had appointed Mr. W. F. Johnston to take his place.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

A report from the following committees were read:—Finance Committee, Committee of the Whole.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A formal motion was passed by the council accepting Mr. Andrew Carnegie's offer of $25,000 and that the city pledge itself to raise annually $2,500 for maintenance for the free public library.

BYLAWS.

A number of bylaws were then passed the three readings necessary to confirm actions of the council in the past.

Lively Discussion on Municipal Matters in Committee of Whole

A warm session of the Committee of the Whole Council was held last night at 7.30 o'clock, when a number of questions were taken up, but little was done except to discuss the various matters and refer them back to the respective committees for definite reports. Among the subjects under discussion were Cavan drain road grant, Peterborough Light and Power Co.'s application for franchise for thirty years. The Peterborough canoe company's application, and the Charlotte street sidewalk.

Those present were,—Mayor Kush, Aldermen Hicks, Phelan, Turner, Duncan, McIntyre, Metheral, Morgan, Bradburn, Gillespie, Duffus.

The first matter taken up was the application of the Cavan township to the city for a grant towards paying for the new road through the swamp. The mayor asked the council what was to be done with it.

The general opinion was that the council should not consider it. A couple of the members wanted to leave it over until next year, while a couple of others wanted to kill it at once.

Aldermen McIntyre and Morgan moved that no action be taken towards helping pay for the Cavan road and it carried.

THIRTY-YEAR FRANCHISE.

The mayor next brought up the application of the Peterborough Light and Power Company for a thirty-year franchise, not an exclusive franchise. The Manufacturers' Committee considered this question and drew up an agreement for the council to consider before proceeding further. This agreement was submitted to the city solicitor for his advice and he made a report to the council. The provisions of the agreement have already been made public, but they were read again to the members of the council.

Ald. Bradburn favored sending the propositions to the people to be voted upon. If they are willing to pay the expense entailed thereto.

Ald. Morgan was opposed to this and said he would not support any agreement with the Peterborough Light and Power Company for the next five years.

Ald. Phelan wanted the Manufacturers' Committee to consider the question again, as he did not see why it should be sent to the people when all the aldermen were not satisfied.

Ald. Bradburn then pointed out the several advantages to the city if the agreement went through.

Ald. Hicks suggested that the council decide at once whether the agreement should be submitted to the people. If it is to go to the people then appoint a small committee to receive all suggestions and embody them in the agreement which must be returned to the council for approval and agreed to by the company. This was put in the form of a motion and it carried.

The Manufacturers' Committee was then requested to draw up the agreement ready for the council meeting. —Carried.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

The plans for the new isolation hospital were introduced. The Property Committee had taken the matter up. The medical health officer, Dr. McPherson, assisted materially in preparing the plans. The medical association had passed favorably upon the plans. It will cost in the neighborhood of $12,000, and another couple of thousand for equipment.

The aldermen discussed the plans and hesitated a long time over the expenditure. The matter was referred back to the Property Committee to make a report.

CANOE CO.'S APPLICATION.

The application of the Peterborough Canoe Company for a 21-year lease on the piling ground on the water front just back of their property was considered for a time. The C.P.R. asked the city not to grant the lease until such time as they heard from the company.

It was decided that the canoe company be allowed to use the oiling groundsuntil such time as the council asked them to move off.

A NEW SIDEWALK.

Mr. McCoy was present and was heard by the council in connection with a sidewalk on Charlotte street, southside, from Maitland to Park street. It was petitioned for two years ago, and he has been living there two years and has had no walks.

The Board of Works, the mayor said, would do that work if at all possible this year.

Moved by Ald. Duncan that the Charlotte street walk be built as soon as the Kirk street walk is finished. Ald. Morgan seconded this motion.

At this point Ald. McIntyre said that if the walk was left to the chairman of the Board of Works it would not be built.

Ald. Morgan then scolded the chairman of the Board of Works, and he and Ald. Phelan had some hot words. Ald. Duncan also criticised the chairman of the Board of Works

Half the council then got mixed up in a warm argument but Ald. Duncan's motion was put, and it carried by a vote of 6—5.

Foreign Invasion of the United States Impossibe

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR THE BATTLEFIELD.

GENERAL MARINA.

Says General Sickless, Who Reviewed Recent War Game

Says Defence System is Adequate—A Splendidly Effective National Army.

Foreign Invasion of U.S., Between New York and Boston is a Military Impossibility.

New York, Aug. 23.—"Foreign invasion of the United States, between New York and Boston, is a military impossibility," declared Major-General Daniel E. Sickles, U.S.A., retired, today, in reviewing the late New England war game.

"The operations of these 16,000 troops demonstrated that the Northern National Guards is effective in reinforcing the regulars.

"The maneuvers showed great improvement in military effectiveness over conditions twenty years ago," said the general, "and disclosed a promising fruition of the work of the general staff, which was originated by Elihu Root, when secretary of war.

"The status today is this: A splendidly effective regular army, with a National Guard amenable to federal authority to an effective degree and working in co-operation with the regular establishment, under control of a general staff.

"The regimental formation, the details of equipment, arms and ammunition, the commissary and transport methods of both State and national troops permit a quick mobilization of an effective force, a condition of things vastly different from that of 1898.

"The concentration of 14,000 men, with uniformity of equipment, sufficiency of transport, and including troops of the cavalry, engineering and heavy artillery arms of service, could not have been accomplised a few years ago without a tremendous ly great effort and more disturbance of the ordinary life of this section than attended the campaign just closing.

"In fact I doubt if such a number of men could have beenputinto the field without the calling for volunteers by the President, or some such extraordinary action.

Wedding Bells

A wedding that will be of interest to many friends and relatives of the groom in Peterborough and vicinity, took place at Fenelon Falls on Wednesday last, August 18th, when Miss M. F. Graham became the bride of Mr. Harry C. Mann, B.A.

The ceremony was performed in the Baptist church, Fenelon Falls, by the Rev. A. Cooke, in the presence of a large number of guests. The bride, who has been organist of the church for some years, was the recipient of many fine presents. Mr. Mann is on the staff of the Ottawa Collegiate Institute and was formerly principal of the Fenelon Falls Public school.

Mr. Mann is a son of Mr. Robert Mann of Bridgenorth, and his many friends in the city will extend best wishes.

SANDY—BARNECOTT.

A very pretty wedding took place Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 17th, at 2.30 p.m., in Trinity church, Aylmer, when Emma L., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barnecott, John street north, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Sandy of Peterborough, Rev. Chas. Miles officiating. The bride looked very pretty in a white costume, with white chip hat covered with daisies, and carried a shower bouquet. She was given away by her father. Miss Annie Barnecott, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of pale blue cobweb silk, trimmed with baby Irish lace and insertion, with blue and white hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. T. L. Barnecott, brother of the bride, very ably assisted the groom. After the service, the wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left on their honeymoon trip up the lakes. The bride's traveling suit was of plum-colored broadcloth with hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl sunburst; to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent, and to the best man a pearl scarf pin.—Aylmer Sun.

Babies Held Captives, Kidnaper Asks $24,000

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.— Two heart-broken women in this city whose children are being held by kidnappers for a $25,000 ransom have appealed to 100,000 American mothers for aid in finding little Grace and Tommie, missing since August 2, in one of the most remarkable of all the blackhand outrages in America.

While the mothers are weeping in their homes, police have sent pictures of the stolen children broadcast in the hope that mothers all over the country will aid in the search.

The tots are the children of two brothers, both named Pietro Viviano the richest Italians in St. Louis. For years they have lived in terror of blackmailers. Twice the Viviano macaroni factory has been dynamited. One night in the early summer, Tommie, 4 years old, heard a prowler in the Viviano home. He cried out to his sleeping parents, and a man ran swiftly away.

The next morning a bomb was found at the threshold of the Vivian home, and a fuse ready toattach showed how timely had been the warning cry of the little boy.

From that time on both mothers knew no peace. They watched their children every day. They had no other playmates for the fear in the women's breasts for the safety of the two never relaxed.

Late in July a strange man began to haunt the neighborhood where the Vivianos lived. He passed the yard where little Grace and Tommie, his cousin, 2½ years old, were playing.

"Come on and I'll buy you some ice cream," he said.

The children, virtual prisoners for their own safety, went only too gladly. Day after day the stranger appeared, until he had won the confidence of the little dark-eyed girl and her playfellow.

Then, on Monday, August 2, the long-feared blow to the Viviano mothers. The children left with the strange man for the last time.

When an hour had passed their mothers were sobbing and crying out to neighbors that their children had been stolen. The whole Italian colony was in an uproar. Cordons of police and detectives surrounded the Italian tenements south-west of the city and spread out a drag net lest the kidnapper escape.

But they were too late. The captor of the little children had taken flight to Chicago, and while the St. Louis police tried vainly to get the Chicago police to hunt the children, there came a scrawling note to the father of Tommie.

"Give up $25,000," it read in Italian, "or you will never see the children again."

With 88 hours gone before the alarm was spread to Chicago, the weeping mothers gave up hope. Help less in their grief they could only implore the bluecoats for aid. Then the hunt was taken up more eagerly and it resulted in some astounding revelations.

The kidnapper, the police said, was none other than Sam Turrisi, noted as a desperate character.

Turrisi, they found was only another name for Callegero Glandusa, fugitive from the Louisiana state prison, where he served time for the kidnapping of Walter Le Manae of New Orleans, a boy who was murdered when the parents refused to pay the kidnappers ransom.

What anguish tore the souls of these two mothers when they heard this, none knows.

In their despair they apealed to the office of Gov. Hadley at Jefferson City. He was out of the state, but lieutenant Gov. Gmelich heard their story. He offered $300 reward each for the recovery of the children, the largestreward the state of Missouri ever offered in a kidnapping mystery.

Railroad conductors and others trailed the children and Turrisi, with a woman, to Chicago on a Wabash train that left St. Louis a few hours after the Viviane children had vanished.

Will the sympathetic women of the country help these motherst Police declare that already 100,000 mothers have a good description of the kidnapper, Turrisi, and the children. Women will win, they believe, in the hunt for the kidnapped children, even if the police themselves fail?

The hardened crime-hunters knowing what mother love is believe this, and the weeping mothers have faith in the other mothers too.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Davidson, widow of the late Canon Davidson of Colborne, Ont., who prececeased her 17 years ago, and mother of Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's church, died Sunday afternoon at her late residence, 30 Charles street, Toronto, after a brief illness. A prayer service was held Sunday in St. Luke's, Toronto, the church which the late Mrs. Davidson attended, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Davidson had for many years been a presiding officer. Prayers were offered on the deceased lady's behalf at St. John's at both services yesterday. The funeral will be held at Colborne on Thursday. A family of four sons and three daughters survive.

ALF. B. McMILLAN.

Theasd news of the sudden death of Mr. Alfred B. McMillan, a former resident of Peterborough, but lately of Indian Head, Sask., will be regretted by a large number of friends and acquaintances here. He was stricken suddenly with an attack of appendicitis on Friday last and underwent an operation, but death resulted on Saturday. The late Mr. McMillan had been residing in the West for the past four years, and during that time had made a new home for his family, and it is particularly sad that he should be called away on the eve of success. During his residence here he was held in high esteem by a large number of friends as a result of a cheerful and amiable disposition. He was identified with the 57th Regiment and held the position of corporal of No. 1 company, to which he attached considerable credit by his fine shooting on different occasions. Shortly before leaving for the West the late Mr. McMillan was married, and to his wife and young child there will be extended sincere sympathy. The members of his family residing in this city who are left to mourn his loss are his mother, one sister, Mrs. E. Bellegham, and two brothers. Messrs. Albert S. and Herbert McMillan. The remains are expected to arrive in the city on Wednesday, but fuller particulars as to the funeral will be given in tomorrow's issue.

HER TWO BOYS ELOPE

TWO IN FAMILY ELOPE WITHIN SINGLE WEEK.

News of Second Romance in Her Family Causes Mrs. Christian Kaeser to Promise Stricter Vigil Over Three Other Boys.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—"Oh mamma! Ma, Wallie's eloped with Edna!"

Albert Kaeser, 193 North Halsted street, shrieked the startling news to his mother and then added in gleeful whoops:

"Now what do you think of your angel child? Doesn't smoke, doesn't chew, doesn't drink, and here he runs away with Edna. And be telling you he was the original, dyed-in-the wool everlasting bachelor kid. First Lillian ducks with Nate and now the darling brother hitches on the quiet.'

It was too much for Albert and he broke down, laughing.

It was rather an informal way of making the formal announcement of the wedding in Kenosha of his brother, Walter, 23 years old, to Miss Edna Stratton, the 19-years-old daughter of Charles Stratton, 84 Grand avenue. It was almost too much for the mother, Mrs. Christian Kaeser, as well. But she did not laugh. Yesterday's elopement made the second within a week from her little home. Seven days before her daughter, Lillian, 19 years old, ran away to be married in Kenosha to Nathan Shippy, nephew of the former police chief. Both of the men elopers are firemen on the Chicago and Northwestern Road and both fire on runs through the Wisconsin haven of elopers. Miss Stratton rode to Kenosha on the train for which her fiance was fireman.

"I will have to watch my three other boys," said Mrs. Kaeser. "They are just at the age for marrying and you can never tell what young men will do."

Then she settled to await the return of the runaway and his bride.

"We thought when Lil ran away last Wednesday that it was the limit Albert said. "But here's little Walter. Say, I didn't thing the kid had it in him. He's not like the rest of us. He's quiet and saying—not a tightwad, you understand, just saving. He didn't care which way the bones rolled and he never looked to CRAZED BY EXPOSURE.

Young Woman Wandered Eight Days in Woods.

Kingston, Aug. 23.—Miss Elsie Woodcock, whose mysterious disappearance eight days ago, near her home at Beaver Creek, aroused the whole countryside to the search, has at last been found in a lamentable condition. This morning her brother found her wandering in the woods not far from her home, nearly naked famished and mentally deranged. Famished and mentally deranged. Since Thursday night, Aug 12, she has been wandering in the woods like a wild creature, eating only berries and such fruits and roots as she could pick up. The search for her kept up unceasingly, and it is believed that in her demented condition insane cunning, else she would have been located long since. Suspicions of foul play apparently well-founded, have been discredited. These suspicions were strengthened on Thursday, when great lumps of her hair and portions of her clothing were found at a spot five miles from where she was last seen.

Lindsay Cheese Board

Lindsay, Aug. 23.—North Ops, Star, Dunsford and Mariposa were the only cheese factories to sell their output at the Lindsay Cheese Board this morning. Mr. Flavelle, buyer, paid 11¼ cents a pound for North Ops, and Mr. Gillespie paid one sixteenth of a cent more for the other factories. 11¼c. was refused by the balance of the board.

The sellers seemed to think that 11¼ should be offered and hung out as long as possible for that amount. Cheese has been selling high during the past week, but a slump occurred today, it seems, Mr. Gunn buying for a Montreal firm, was a new buyer at the board, but received orders at the last moment, owing to the condition of the market.

To those who did not sell the liberty to sell off the boards was given. The next sale will be on September 13th.

Sprained Wrist and Ankle

After Being Laid Up With Great Pain for Ten Days, Relief Was Gained Instantly By Applying

NERVILINE.

One of the most soul-distressing accidents that can befall one is a bad ankle or wrist sprain. "If I had only known of "Nerviline" earlier, I could have saved myself an enormous amount of pain, and many agonizing nights of sleeplessness." Thus writes P. Q. Quinn, a young farmer living near Brockville. "I tumbled from a hay loft to the barn floor and sprained my right ankle and left wrist. They swelled rapidly and caused excruciating pains. It was not convenient to go to the city and the liniment in the house was useless. When I got Nerviline relief came quickly. It took down the swelling, relieved the pain, and gave me wonderful comfort.

TESTIMONIAL No. 4266

"I can recommend Nerviline for strains, bruises, swellings, muscular pains, and sore back. I have proved it a sure cure in such cases."

Think what it might some day mean to you to have right in your home, ready for an accident or emergent sickness, a bottle or two of Nerviline. Get it today, 25c., or five for $1.00, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont. 7

MARITIME UNION.

The business men of the Maritime Provinces are in favor of political union. The Maritime Board of Trade has carried a resolution—not for the first time—favoring the union of the three provinces, and on this occasion asking the three governments to name a joint committee to arrange terms of union. Among the advantages which the supporters of this resolution saw in the proposed change were an enhanced provincial credit, an annual saving of $150,000 by the abolition of two Legislatures, a uniform judiciary and similar assosimilations, a better outlook for the Prince Edward Island tunnel, a more favorable adjustment of the subsidies and the possibility of a staunc her resistance against the further lowering of the Parliamentary representation of the people by the sea.

As against this, what have the opponents of union to set up? There would be no real loss inflicted upon anybody by such a step except upon a few politicians and a few civil servants. A single legislature would naturally offer fewer chances to the aspiring local politician to write "M. L. A." after his name, and some of "the boys" who like these places near the pantry for less unsubstantial reasons, might be chagrined at their disappearance; but the taxpayers ought to be able to bear great deal of this sort of disappoint ment. As for the civil servants, an equitable and generous provision for them could easily be made at far less expense than would be incurred by keeping the three separate establishments going for their establishments going for their special benefit.

The establishment of a single strong Maritime Provinces would undoubtedly put the people of that section of the Dominion in a far better position politically, financially and as regards administration. The point made as to provincial credit, is a good one, and one which should appeal to a shrewd people. One Maritime Provinces could undoubtedly bor row on better terms than any one of three divided provinces. Now a saving of interest charges is a lightening of taxation; and a much greater lightening of taxation would come with the abolition of two Legislatures, two civil services, two governatorial establishments and two Governments. The day will undoobtedly arrive when the clear-visioned people of the Maritime Provinces will take this step, and it is only a question of when they will begin to save their money and augment their prestige.

It is not difficult to think of real advantages in the political sphere which would accrue to the Maritime Provinces through union. There would be the obvious and valuable advantage of greater strength at Ottawa. As the balance of power swings to the west, the power of any of the three provinces down by the sea singly is bound to decline. The united province, however, with a solid phalanx of thirty-five members, would wield a vote power which could not be ignored. This would furnish a surer safeguard of Maritime Province rights than an arbitrary lower limit of representation. The latter will always be difficult to obtain, and if obtained, can only be partially effective; while the device of union, in addition to be being the more effective, is entirely within the hands of the people of the provinces down by the sea.

The business leaders appear to be reasonably near unanimity in favor of union. It is highly probable that the politicians would not come so near unanimity—unless on the other side. If the business men stick to their guns, however, it is inevitable that the politicians will — for good political reasons—come round to their point of view. The business men are in a majority and control the votes which the politicians desire. So soon, therefore, as the politicians learn that the business men are earnest enough for union to vote for it, they will find reasons for adopting the views of the vote-holders.

DID NOT LIKE WHISKERS.

Victoria Told Alfonso He Looked Like a Butler.

London, Aug. 23.—There is an epilog for the story of the whiskers of King Alfonso of Spain, which was in the cable news of yesterday. His majesty when he arrived at San Sebastian from Madrid was wearing side whiskers, and had his hair cut very short. The king thought that thi change gave him the appearance of an admiral of the British navy, but Queen Victoria Eugenia quickly remarked that he looked more like an English butler, and urged him to shave the whiskers off. This his majesty did, for whom he returned to Madrid he was whiskerless once more and looked younger than ever.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop" Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

GIRL GOES 11,000 MILES TO WED

Heroine of Oberlin College Romance Departs for Japan.

Muscatine, Iowa, Aug. 23.—As the culmination of a romance begun at Oberlin College seven years ago, Miss Julia Hutchinson, daughter of a prominent Muscatine lumberman and capitalist, departed today for Yokohama, Japan, where she will be married to Ralph Harding on Sept. 11. She will travel 11,000 miles before she meets her fiance, and following the marriage the couple will take a 2,000 mile trip through the Orient.

Miss Hutchinson left this afternoon in an automobile for Iowa City, and tonight boarded a train at Cedar Rapids for San Francisco, from where she will sail Aug. 24.

Harding is a civil engineer in charge of the construction department of the Manila Limited Railway. He is a graduate of Oberlin College and Case Scientific School. The couple will reside at Tanauam, seventy-five miles from Manila, and will also maintain quarters in Manila

MR. OLIVER OPTIMISTIC.

Says Increased Interest is Being Shown By Better Class of People.

Ottawa, August 23.—Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, who has been in England and on the continent for over two months inquiring into immigration matters, returned home this morning. Mr. Olive takes a very optimistic view of the immigration prospects. He says that interest in Canada is steadily developing and becoming of a more intelligent character. Not so many emigrants are leaving as was the case a few years ago, but what is lost in quantity is made up in quality.

"I came over with four hundred of them on the Laurentic," he remarked, "and there was very little to distinguish the third from the first-class."

The Englishmen coming to Canada now, the Minister states, are principally from the country and provincial towns. The Scotch are sending out a good class. From Ireland the outlook is not so favorable. The people in the south particularly, are inclined to go to the United States.

There is a fairly good prospect for Belgian immigration, but the Frenchman is disposed to stay at home Restrictions put on by Germany are keeping its people from leaving. Only 8,000 of its population emigrated last year.

Really the best outlook is now afforded by Belgium, Holland and Scandinavia, in addition to the British Isles. The greatest advertisement to the foundry is the free and satisfied settler writing home.

AUSTRALIAN COMPETITION.

Mr. Oliver says Canada now has to compete with Australia and New Zealand, which have a definite policy of assisted immigration.

The restrictions adopted by Canada are none too popular, but the protests are gradually subsiding. What is wanted, Mr. Oliver says, is the desirable immigrant, and not those who come merely to relieve congested conditions in the big cities. In the great increased interest in Canada and its affairs, the Minister sees great prospect for trade development as well as augmented immigration of the best class.

Mr. Olive would not speak of the naval question. He said he had not followed the doings of the conference

After clearing up some departmental matters, Mr. Oliver will go to West.

Tell Some Sick One

It Is Free If It Fails.

Will you do an act of Humanity?

Will you tell some sick friend of this, my remarkable offer?

Tell him or her, that you have learned of a medicine so certain that the maker dare say to the sick, "If it disappoints you, it costs you NOTHING."

And you, no doubt, already know of Dr. Shoop's Restorative and its popularity.

For 20 years it has been the standard remedy for Stomach, Kidney and Heart ailments everywhere in America.

When the "inside" or controlling nerves of these vital organs begin to fail, it is Dr. Shoop's Restorative that has quickly vitalized, and strengthened, and brought these nerves back to health again.

I do not dose the Stomach, nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys—for that is all wrong.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes direct to the source of these ailments—the failing, inherited, inside or controlling nerves. And herein lies the keynote to my success.

When these nerves are again made well and strong, then that is the certain end of all such ailments.

To me it is a great satisfaction, that I am the only physician able to say to the sick, "If it fails, take my prescription free." If it fails to help you, the entire expense is mine—and yours.

Then why should the sick take any chance on any other medicine, when another does and each it just as I do by this remarkable offer?

I also have a Kidney Remedy—and that, usually is spread by the pains through the back, so you' probably know.

Below, you are free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My only fee is the book I send you—and that is free.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up many serious troubles. I have helped thousands by my postpaid advice plan. My book tells about it. Write your symptoms freely.

Do not lose time, but write me at once. Take no chances on some sick friend.

A postal will bring the opportunity. I will have an honest talk with you, and my gift to inform you can conveniently use the last test.

But first, fill out the coupon, for all these are sent free and prepaid. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 11, Racine, Wis.

Which book shall I send you?

TURQUOISE COPPER

NOT A PROSPECT

400 FOOT TUNNEL—140 FOOT SHAFT

Mines located near Valardena, Durango, Mexico, only six miles by wagon road and three miles straight line from the property of the Guggenheims upon which they have recently erected a $2,000,000 smelter. Sample assays have averaged from $54 to $102 per ton.

Up to the present time, the Turquoise Copper Co., has been practically a close cosporation; an initial offering of 100,000 shares has just been made at 25 cents, par value $1.00, full paid and non-assessable. Proceeds will be used to further continue the development work already begun.

We have options on 50,000 shares of this stock and advise immediate purchase at 25 cents per share. It is the intention of The Board of Directors to list the stock on the New York Curb and it should sell at $1.00 per share by the first of the year.

Write now for prospectus and Mining Engineer's report.

LEACH & CO., INC.
STOCK BROKERS—MANCHESTER, N.H.

$90,000---7 Per Cent.

9,000 Shares 7 Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 a Share) Offered at Par with 40 Per Cent Immediate Bonus of Common Stock We Reserve the Right to Withdraw Offer Without Notice and to Return any Subscription Received Too Late. Previous Offerings Were Immediately Oversubscribed.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

Cosgrave's Beer

Words of praise have ever prevailed in advertising "copy." That a producer should wax enthusiastic over his own wares is but human. But it's the praise of the consumer that counts—and it is to a discriminating and critical public that "Cosgrave's" refers you.

It is safe to say that no product, of any kind enjoys a more enviable reputation than does this same Cosgrave Beer of Toronto in markets where it is offered.

Its self-evident honesty of purpose, purity, brilliancy, body, and every other attribute that goes to make a perfect beer are ever in evidence.

Appetite Gone—Nerves Badly Run Down

A Strong Moral Well Exemplified in Mrs. Wilson's Case.

Like thousands of other people at this season of the year Mrs. E. P. Wilson was tired and worn out—wintry sorely tired her health and vigor. But now she is robust and well, eats well, sleeps well, feels invigorated and braced. "For many years," writes Mrs. Wilson of Whitmere, P.Q., "I suffered from systematic weakness, biliousness and depressing headache. I could take little nourishment and grew thin and pale. If I ate a hearty meal the result was dreadful. Pains started at my chest, and spread all through my body going across my stomach, back and right side. I was discouraged till a friend insisted on me taking Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They made a new woman of me, and for the past eight months my health has been perfected. For a good cleaning, rejuvenating medicine I urge every one to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

There is extraordinary and magic power in Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they bring vigor, tone, health and spirits—are compounded from the most wonderful and healing juices and essences in vegetable life—are safe for young and old and guaranteed to kindle renewed activity and strength of every system that is weak, sickly or run down from kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut—today—25c. at all dealers.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicines, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, Koblosom of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. H. G.

We cure NERVOUS DEBILITY, VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, VITAL WEAKNESS, BLOOD, SKIN and PRIVATE Diseases, URINARY, BLADDER and KIDNEY complaints of Men and Women.

CLOCK FOR SERGEANTS.

Dufferin Rifles Sergeants' Remembrance of Visit Here.

The Brantford Expositor says—An interesting occasion has been recalled through the presentation of a clock by the sergeant-major and sergeants of the Dufferin Rifles to the sergeant-major and sergeants of the Peterborough Rangers. The clock, which is a very handsome one, will in future adorn the sergeants' quarters in the new armories at Peterborough. It bears the following inscription: "Presented by the sergeant-major and sergeants D.R. of C., to the sergeant-major and sergeants, 57th Regiment, in remembrance of their visit to Peterborough on May 24th, 1909."

Mrs. Geo. A. Empson, Orillia, is in the city for a few days, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Frost, 639 George street.

Growth of America Stirs whole World

Sir Thomas Dewar, in London Speech, says He is Angered by Its Bounds

London, Aug. 24.—At a banquet a few days ago, given to an American on his departure to the United States Sir Thomas Dewar made a short speech to the toast of "The King of England and the President of the United States."

It was a remarkable speech for an English knight, and that is why it is sent just as he gave it. He said:

"There are assembled here together this evening representatives of the great Anglo-Saxon race, which has civilized and Christianized the greater part of the world, from both sides of the Atlantic, and I have now been asked to give you the toast of the heads of the two states—His Majesty King Edward VII., and the President of the United States of America—the greatest republic the world has even seen.

"There is none present here tonight who can look back twenty-five years ago without being impressed with the fact that the most sanguine dreams could not have foretold what a stern and solemn fact is the position of the great republic which we see today, and no man can prophesy the effect of another generation of evolution and progress.

"It is entirely the business of prophets to foretell, and they may miscalculate to a considerable extent. The unbounded enterprise, enthusiasm and energy of the American citizen have already staggered the world in the development of the unlimited resources of the unbounded richness of that immense country. Education begins after you have left school. I began my education twenty years ago by traveling the length and breadth of America and I have visited that country every two years since, having my astonishment stirred within me at the enormous advance it is making.

"Twenty years ago I witnessed the immense forest lands being cleared, and trees centuries old being burned in the rapid haste to utilize the fertile soil, which had been waiting there from time immemorial. we must reach out into the darkness of bygone days to calculate the length of time it had been awaiting the ingenuity of man. At that time I spent days going through such country and going over the alkali desert which has since been transformed into the busy haunts of men.

"Who could have foretold your Dakotas, Seattle, Portland (Oregon) Denver and Chicago, that they would have been today what they are? Your democratic ways are such that every citizen seems to work for the welfare of the state, and the first and foremost ambition is 'Our country our whole country and nothing but our country,' governed by one who has risen from the people and administered by constitutional freedom.

"Countries in the past have gone by stops and starts, but the progress of the United States has been one triumphant rush into prosperity, which every one must admit and admire, and the consensus of all that is represented by the White House and the wide selection of the state in the all powerful President taking his position and not abusing it among the countries of the world. Long live the President, and may the United States, as they say in the guilds of the City of London, go on and prosper, root and branch from generation to generation and from age to age.

"Citizens of America who are present here tonight have every reason to be proud of belonging to that country, as I am of being a British subject."

Farmers Frantic to get Grain In Winnipeg, Man., August 24.—Hot, dry conditions prevail throughout the west, making the farmers frantic to get their grain cut, and as a result telegrams calling for harvesters are constantly pouring into the Immigration offices here.

Today and tomorrow will witness a record arrival of harvesters from the east. Fully 10,000 will arrive by the Canadian Pacific Railroad and everyone of them is needed, for the grain is ripening fast and must be gathered in on record time or the farmers will suffer.

This morning the Canadian Pacific Railway station was flooded with arrivals from Toronto, Quebec and Renfrew, Toronto sent up about 4,500 and Quebec and Renfrew about 3,000. Between two and three thousand more will come in by regular train over the Canadian Northern Railway today and tomorrow.

"We can handle them all," say the immigration officials, "and as many more as desire to come."

Pittsburg Financiers Tried to Break Jail, A Desperate Fight

Pittsburg, Aug. 22.—The discovery of the secret tunnel leading ont of Riverside Penitentiary, by which it is believed that high financiers confined intended to make their escape, was followed last Monday by a desperate fight with knives between two convicts, whose names the authorities withhold.

One of the combatants was so badly injured that he is expected to die and the other is in a serious condition.

The cause of the duel is not known but it is believed to have been a result of the discovery of the tunnel plot, one of the convicts blaming the other for the revelation.

The 700 men were at dinner in the great dining hall, when suddely Convicts A4977 and A6642 sprang from their chairs and clinched. The fight was fierce, and for some time the guards could not interfere because the rest of the prisoners seemed ready to stampede in the excitement. The whole body of convicts was covered with riot guns before the fighters were pulled apart, both gravely wounded. Convict A4977 is believed to be dying in the hospital.

Another result of the tunnel plot discovery was the placing in irons of a number of prisoners. Among these is James Boyle, the kidnaper of Willie Whitla.

The Kind of Coffee When Postum is Well Made.

"Three coffee drinkers were my old school friend and her two daughters.

"They were always complaining and taking medicine. I determined to give them Postum instead of coffee when they visited me, so without saying anything to them about it, I made a big pot of Postum the first morning, using four heaping teaspoonfuls to the pint of water and let it boil twenty minutes, stirring down occasionally.

"Before the meal was half over, each one each one passed up her cup to be refilled, remarking how fine the coffee was. The mother asked for a third cup and inquired as to the brand of coffee I used. I didn't answer her question just then, for I had heard her say a while before that she din't like Postum unless it was more than half old-fashioned coffee.

"After breakfast I told her that the coffee she liked so well at breakfast was pure Postum and the reason she liked it was because it was properly made, that is, it was boiled long enough to bring out the flavor.

"I have been brought up from a nervous, wretched invalid, to a fine condition of physical health by leaving off coffee and using Postum.

"I am doing all I can to help the world out of coffee slavery to Postum freedom, and have earned the gratitude of many, many friends!" Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Sewerage Requirements of the City for the South Western District

Mr. Willis Chipman Deals with Sewage Pumping Station, Romaine Street Sewer, Rink and Park Street Drains and the Cost of the Whole

To everyone who has the interests of Peterborough at heart the following report of the sewerage requirements of the city by Mr. Willis Chipman of Toronto, will be of great interest. The report is published practically in detail;—

Chairman Board of Works:

Dear Sir,—I beg to submit for your consideration the following interim report upon the sewerage and drainage of the south-western part of the city of Peterborough;

TYPOGRAPHY.

The greater part of the area lying south from the General Electric Company's works has a continuous and practically uniform slope to the Otonabee river, although apparently level ground. There is not one well defined water course in the whole area, the surface water running southerly down Park street side ditches, easterly along the ditches or gutters on the streets at right angles to Park and Lock streets. At the C.G.E. the surface water flows easterly to the river through a timber drain built for the purpose.

MAIN SEWER.

The main sewer on Lock street, constructed in 1891, was designed to convey the entire domestic sewage of the city to the river by gravity. Examinations were made of this sewer and levels taken under my direction early this season, and I am pleased to be able to say that the sewer is in good condition and that it was built carefully to the grade intended, reports to the contrary, notwithstanding.

It is of ample capacity for the domestic sewage from a city much larger than Peterborough if the surface water be excluded. During high water in the river, however, this main sewer would be flooded for many blocks if nothing were flowing down the sewer, but the flow further gorges it and I am inclined to believe that at times it may run full from Townsend street to its outlet.

An overflow was constructed at Townsend, but this also serves as an inlet in high water. Proper valves and chambers should be provided at this point to control the flow.

From Perry street to the outlet of the main sewer, tributary sewers would be subject to flooding during freshets in the river.

ROMAINE STREET SEWER.

Mr. Chipman did not think that the present Romaine street sewer would ever prove satisfactory. This was due to improper laying of the pipes. The sewer was designed all right and would have been satisfactory for at least 11 months of the year.

PUMPING STATION.

After a careful study of the problem I have reluctantly arrived at the conclusion that the domestic sewerage for that part of the city lying west of the river and south of Rink street cannot be conveyed by gravity to the river, unless cellars and basements be prohibited through out the greater part of the area.

I am of the opinion tha the problem can best be solved by construct inga sewage pumping station as near as possible to the lowest point in the area under consideration. The exact location is not important but I have selected Romaine street at its intersection with the G.T.R. line to Port Hope. It should be possible for the city to acquire a triangular piece of land at this point at a reasonable price.

The Romaine street sewer west of the pumping station should be relaid at such lower depth as will permit all streets within the low area being surveyed by gravity, to the proposed pumping station. Between the railway and the Lock St. main sewer, the Romaine street sewer as laid may be used as an outlet.

PUMPING MACHINERY.

The pumping machinery should be in duplicate, one pump being operated by an electric motor that will start and stop automatically with the fall and rise of the sewage, the other pump to be operated by a gasoline engine, this later unit to be held in reserve for an emergency.

The power required will not exceed 10 h.p., for the immediate service, but I would advise 15 h.p.

The building for housing machinery should be about 16 feet wide by 24 feet long to accommodate the machinery, the basement to be of full size to serve as pump wells. It is quite possible that you may intend to erect in this district, a hose station or other municipal building, if so it might be combined with the pumping station. The supervision of the plant would then be constantly under a city employe.

Pumping sewers are no novelty in this Province. This year I have designed two sewage pumping stations one for Brantford, the other for Orillia.

By laying the Romaine street sewer at a sufficient depth, it will serve as an outlet for all sanitary sewers to be constructed between the Electric works in the north and the city limits in the south.

When the area now lying outside the city limits becomes part of the city, another sewage pumping station will be required.

STORM WATER.

The timber drain on Rink street from the General Electric to the river, should in my opinion, be replaced by a proper concrete drain, from which all domestic sewage should be rigidly excluded. At the time of my visit in June, it was in a foul, unsanitary condition.

If the surface drains on Park St., Lock street and Monaghan road be cleaned out and brought to uniform grades, it will not be necessary to construct underground drains or sewers for the removal of the surface water unti, these streets are well built upon.

Eventually it may be necessary to construct another main sewer on Park street, but it is not now required, and when built it will not drain basements and cellars in the low area, without pumping the sewage into it.

If a large main sewer were laid on Park street at a sufficient depth to serve as an outletfor all tributary sewers, it would be necessary to pump the entire flow in this sewer at the outlet, and this scheme may be acopted at some future date.

RINK STREET DRAIN.

The timber drain on Park street, north of Rink street, should also be replaced by a concrete or tile drain, and if ther be not a proper sanitary tile sewer in this street, one should be laid at the same time as the storm drains.

COSTS.

Romaine street pumping station will cost from $10,000 to $12,000, and probably $400 per annum for power and maintenance. Romaine St and Aylmer street sewer from $3 to $4 per lineal foot. The sanitary sewers $3 per lineal foot. On streets where there is no quick sand the cost should not exceed $2.

New storm drain on Rink street about $3.50 per foot and Park street about $3.

AN AUTO GARAGE.

Will Be Opened Here by Mr. E. Hanna—Sales Room in Connection.

Automobile owners will appreciate the fact that a garage is to be opened in this city. Peterborough's only "auto shop" will be situated on Simcoe street, between Water and Queen, in the premises formerly occupied by the Excelsior Fruit Cleaning Co.

The garage will be most modern and complete in every detail, and the proprietor, Mr. E. Hanna, is thoroughly practical and capable in a mechanical sense, and has had a wide experience with motor cars as chauffeur and mechanic.

The deal for the building was closed yesterday, and the work of putting in the cement floor, installing the gasolene tanks, oil tanks and other equipment will be proceeded with at once.

A sales room will be conducted in connection with the garage.

As Peterborough is getting to be quite a center for "residential" and transient motor cars, Mr. Hannah should do a thriving business.

The garage will be open in about two weeks' time.

Peterboro's Big Fair, Programs are Issued

The official program for the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has been issued. The show will be held on September 16, 17 and 18. It will be bigger and better thanever. The reason for saying so is this:—The Agricultural Society is financially in better shape than ever before. They had a good surplus last year. The directors got started much earlier this year than last. The mistakes of the past are being or have been rectified. The exhibition buildings are being fixed up so as to make a fairly respectable appearance. This year's program is bigger and better than usual. The special attractions include a number of military manoeuvers that have never been seen by the citizens, except at camp. The directors are all enhusiastic and are working hard.

THE PROGRAM.

The first day will be devoted entirely to opening the grounds and receiving exhibits.

Second Day—Judging will commence at 10 o'clock a.m., and will continue all day as well as Saturday.

In front of the grand stand there will be seen the troupe of seven Arabian acrobats; horse races, 2.40 class. In the evening the 24th Field Battery will put on some of their plays, such as bare-back wrestling, tug-of-war on horse back, Victoria Cross race, midnight alarm. The Arabian Troupe and Mlle Calina de Leo's performing animals. At the close of the evening performance the Battery will come into action and fire the departing guns.

RACES.

The following are the list of races to be run off;

2.40 class, expressman's race, 2.22 class, dog race, carters' race, 2.30 class, dog race 2 heats, free for all race.

For Friday night the buildings and grounds will be beautifully illuminated.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Nearly 300 Persons were Drowned in the Montevideo Harbor

Two Excursion Boats Going to a Festival Collided and Went Down—Captain Tried to Commit Suicide

Buenos, Ayres, Aug. 24.—A collision today between an Argentine excursion steamer, the Colombia, and the North German Lloyd steamer, Schlesin, at the entrance of Montevideo harbor resulted in the drowning of from 150 to 300 persons, mostly women and children.

The Colombia was carrying excursionists from Buenos Ayres to the festival at Montevideo, while the Schlesien was outward bound for Bremen.

The Colombia went down so quickly that all attempts at rescue were practically hopeless. The Schlesien was damaged and is leaking.

It is said that the captain of the Colombia and a few of the passengers were saved. The captain had to be restrained from committing suicide.

OIL ON THE STREETS.

According to the Journal Ottawa Will Try the Experiment.

A point not to be overlooked in connection with the use of oil, is that it preserves the roadway in addition to laying the dust. The oil acts like the close feathers on a duck's back and sheds the water. It is water which does the most harm to a roadway. The water works into the macadam and causes disintegration. The oil on the contrary forms a covering to the road—a sort of waterproof coat as it were and prevents the formation of mud.

Thus municipalities using oil will be able to save money in their works departments. Oil will take the place of macadam to a considerable extent Streets in suburbs which are in a state of nature so to speak, may be put into most respectable shape with a couple of treatments of oil. The possibilities of oil in this regard are great.

Toronto people are delighted with their three months trial of oiled streets; requests for the oil are pouring in faster than the department can get the oil out.

There is said to be only one drawback to the use of oil and that is the odor which prevails for a time after the applications. But as the odor of the oil is beyond doubt most healthful, and less to be objected to than the dust, people will be inclined to put up with the smell for a while. And anyway, once the use of oil becomes general will not be long before odorless oil is produced. Even this week Dr. Sheard of Toronto is being offered an odorless brand of oil.

Not a Discordant Note at the Imperial Defence Conference

London, Aug. 24.—Premier Morris prior to sailing for Newfoundland, said that the Imperial Defence Conferences had been a wonderful success. It would be regarded by the historian as the most effective step taken in our day to preserve the peace of the world by maintaining England mistress of the seas. During the conference there had not been a discordant note.

"Every British colony was anxious to share the burdens and responsibilities of the Empire, and contribute to a central fund for the maintenance of the whole family. They do not want their lives, trade, and liberty any longer to be protected by the British 'tar' and soldier with out contributing to the maintenance of both by sharing in the work of both."

Love, Honor, but not Obey

Beloit, Kansas, Aug. 21.—Kansas has a woman judge, the most popular judge in the state. This is Mary H. Cooper of Beloit, judge of probate court, which deals in musty wills and old estates and marriage licenses.

Marriages—herein lies the secret of Judge Hooper's popularity. She has eliminated the word "obey" from her ceremony and will accept only the regular fees.

Nowadays when Kansas lovers pop the question, they hear;

"Yes, if you will let Mrs. Judge Cooper perform the ceremony."

"I ask the groom," Mrs. Cooper says in explaining her system, "if he will love, cherish and keep the bride until death. I ask the bride practically the same thing. If they keep these promises there is no need for the word 'obey.' If the girl does not love her husband she won't obey him. She might pretend to, but she won't.

"I attribute the increase in marriages in this office to my effort to get away from the hackneyed machine-like way in which civil ceremonies are generally performed. I try to make the ceremony as impressive as I know how. When a silly, frivolous pair come before me, I reprove them. I try to make them understand that marriage is a serious affair."

Judge Cooper was appointed to the bench in the spring of 1906 to succedd her husband, who had just died. She ran for re-election, and led the ticket with a majority larger than Taft's. She declines to take credit for this vote, saying it was a tribute to the memory of her husband.

Saved Her Son at Risk of Her Life

Kingston, Aug. 24. — Unable to swim a stroke herself, Mrs. C. I. Baltic, wife of an employe of the Royal Military College, last night leaped into sixteen feet of water to rescue her two-year-old son, Charlie, who was sinkink for the last time.

The lad fell off the R.M.C. wharf and his mother who lived close by being informed, rushed to the wharf, and without a second leaped off with all her clothes on! She seized her child and managed to keep both him and herself afloat for a few seconds longer.

Mrs. Manning, a neighbor, saved both lives by extending a long pike pole which Mrs. Baltic grasped. The boy is all right today, but Mrs. Baltic, who is in adelicate condition of health is suffering from shock.

RACE FOR $1000.

Girl Who Lost Money Pursues in Automobile.

Punxsutawney, Pa., Aug. 24.—In a race for $1000, Burgess F. O. Freas' touring car made five miles on a country road inside of six minutes and won the money.

Miss Williams, who is a bookkeeper for Tax Collector James S. Lockhard, left her office this afternoon with the $1,000 in a salt bag to deposit in bank. As she boarded a street car the bag slipped to the street. She did not discover her loss until she had gone three squares. Returning hastily to the spot she began searching, when Clay Hewitt told the girl that a man had picked up something there and had driven away with it.

Hewitt and Miss Williams hastened to the garage of Burgess Freas, and telling the chauffeur of the loss, the three started toward Dayton. When the man in the buggy was sighted he stopped his horse, turned and started back. He gave up the money.

Not a minute should be lost when a child shows symptoms of croup. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, will prevent the attack. 12

RAILWAYS ACTIVE

PROFESSIONAL DEATH CERTIFICATE PROFESSIONAL VERIFIER.

In Every Coroner's District Will Relieve Fear of Being Buried Alive.

Montreal, Aug. 24.—The steadily increased activity in railway traffic during the last few months has been a source of great satisfaction to the hundreds of railway employees of the city. For the past couple of years conditions have been unsatisfactory for the men owing to the traffic having considerably decreased chiefly owing to the period of "hard times" and financial depression. The men most seriously affected were the conductors, engineers, firemen, and brakemen on the freight trains and who were paid according to the runs they made. About a year ago many of these men found it difficult to keep the wolf from the door often only being able to earn eight or ten dollars a month. They kept at the work however, always hoping that the better times would not be long in coming. It took longer than they thought for the period of depression to pass over, and an appreciable change was not noticed until this season. Just at present the railways report very satisfactory traffic, and not only are the regular employees kept busy and often working overtime, but quite a number of new men have been taken on. The older employees are getting all they are able to do, and all summer have been drawing good fat cheques at the end of each month. The result is that the railway men are once again enjoying the comforts of life and the trades people are also benefitting by the increased purchases being made.

SUNDAY CONCERT.

By 57th Band in Victoria Park—Mr. Mellroy Will Sing Next Friday Night.

Mr. W. Mellroy has consented to sing the "Holy City," at the concert in Victoria Park next Friday night. This is the last Friday night in August, and probably the last of the summer open air concerts. Mr. Mellroy's solo is given by special request and there will undoubtedly be a very large crowd in the park to hear him.

It has been suggested to The Times on several occasions that the 57th Band be asked to give one or more Sunday afternoon concerts in Victoria Park before the season closes. The band has a large number of very fine sacred selections and they would render an excellent program, and one which would be thoroughly enjoyed and greatly appreciated. In fact the amount of good to be accomplished by hearing good music and sacred music on Sunday is hard to estimate. It is safe to say, however that if sacred concerts were given by the band every Sunday afternoon the moral standing of the city would be raised considerably. The proposed concert would be given at 4 o'clock after Sunday school was dismissed. It is hoped that nothing will crop up to prevent it taking place.

Heaviness at Pit of the Stomach

A Feeling od Uneasiness Before and After Meals is Quickly Cured With Nerviline.

Nearly everyone gets an occasional attack of indigestion and knows just what that heavy feeling means in the stomach. "I was subject to stomach derangements and my health was seriously hampered on this account. After meals I belched gas, had a weighty sensation in my stomach and over my left side. The first relief I got was from Nerviline— I used it three times a day and was cured. I continue to use Nerviline occasionally, and find it is a wonderful aid to the stomach and digestive organs."

NERVILINA RESTORES WEAK STOMACHS

The above letter comes from Mrs. P. R. Stetson, wife of an important merchant in Brockton, and still further proof of the exceptional power of Nerviline is furnished by A. E. Rossman, the well-known upholsterer of Chester, who writes: "Let everyone with a bad stomach use 'Nerviline,' and I am sure there will be few sufferers left. I used to have cramps, rumbling noises, gas on my stomach and severe fits of indigestion. Nerviline was the only remedy that gave me relief, and I found it so entirely satisfactory that I would like to have my letter of recommendation published broadcast in order that others may profit by my experience."

COMMISSIONER OF INDUSTRIES.

A departure on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway Company is the appointment of a commissioner of industries. An official circular to station agents reads:

"A commissioner of industries has been appointed in order that the duties performed by the various division officers of promoting the commercial welfare of the territory served by the Grand Trunk Railway system may be supplemented and strengthened by an official who will give the work his undivided attention. It is the purpose of the company to employ every legitimate means to promote the agricultural, industrial and mercantile interests, and particularly to develop to the fullest extent possible the natural resources of the territory contiguous to its rails. The great advance contemplated by persons interested in manufacturing, jobbing and other commercial pursuits makes it desirable that complete and reliable information regarding the advantage of your city be furnished to those considering the establishment of new enterprises, or of branch plants. Particulars are also desired for use in negotiations with persons seeking information as to opportunities for successful operation of retail stores handling commodities not traded in as to openings for traders in butter eggs and general produce; for buyers of live stock, for fruit growers, for truck gardeners, for the preparation of lumber, coali lime, brick, stone or sand yards, or other enterprises that may be needed at your station....It is suggested that you arrange for a special joint meeting of the officers of your municipality, the business fraternity and yourself, for the purpose of thoroughly discussing this subject and submitting the most reliable information obtainable, thus aiding the company in the special effort it is making for the advancement of your district."

The railway company seems to be desirous of doing for some municipalities what they should do for themselves, and to be making an effort to cover what other municipalities are making to accomplish by means of publicity departments. The creation of the new office, however, reflects credit on the enterprise of the company, and manifests a disposition on its part to aid in the commercial development of places which it touches and also of the country generally.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

GAMBLING AND IGNORANCE.

The Italian government system of lotteries has one good feature. That is, that the government publishes the truth about it. The balance sheets are not hidden, but given out for all men to see.

Last year the people invested over $16,000,000 in the purchase of tickets in the various state lotteries. The government kept a little more than half of this for its profit and for the expense of administration. The winning ticket-buyers get back a little less than half.

From this comes a very interesting result.

In the most illiterate parts of gambling by the inhabitants is much greater than in the better educated parts. In Como, for example, where 17 per cent of the inhabitants are illiterate, the amount spent on lottery tickets averages 20 cents per inhabitant per year. In Naples, where 54 per cent are illiterate, the amount is $2.80 an inhabitant, fourteen times as much.

If the gamblers in state lotteries in Italy get back only half the money they pay, one can easily imagine what percentage the gamblers in privately conducted systems such as we have in this country get back. The betters on horse races would open their eyes if they knew the truth. In one of the "clay-out" games which had great vogue in Chicago, as in the rest of the country, not so many years ago, the odds were such that if ten men with $10 each sat in the game for a hundred turns of the card every one of them would be "broke" at the end, even if the game were on the square. Horse-race gambling is even worse.

Italy is fortunate in having figures to prove that gambling in professional games is a defect of the illiterate. Translate illiterateness into ignorance, fatuity and stupidity, and the same thing could doubtless be said of our American gamblers, though unfortunately we do not have the statistics to prove it.

AVIATION IN THE PAST.

The possibilities of aviation in war time are now being made the subject of much discussion and occasioning some little alarm. As a matter of fact, aerial navigation has been employed more or less in every war between civilized peoples, or where one of the parties claimed to be civilized for forty years or more. Our friends in France were those who, from the earliest thoughts of traversing the air, gave more serious attention to the subject than men of any other nation.

In the Franco-Prussian war the balloon played an important part so far as France was concerned. Its use was principally limited to that which to this day is about all that a balloon or air ship of any kind would be expected to provide, viz., means of observation. The French balloon corps did good work in scouting, and had many exciting adventures. There was then far more uncertainty when a party—generally two—went up where they would come down, or how.

The Germans did not use balloons so frequently. They had not made so much of a specialty of aviation as their French opponents, and had no specially trained corps. They met the French balloonists with a special long-barreled gun to shoot the floating gas bags with and the dangers of aviation were materially increased where a French scouting party got becalmed in upper atmosphere over a German camp, or adverse breezes blew them into the sphere of influence of the long guns. Submarine work has its moments of peril; but only those who "aviated" in the unpleasantness of 1870 fully realized what floating through the air over a hostile army meant.

When circumstances led to the siege of Paris, French ingenuity and daring enabled the besieged at least to keep in touch with the outside world. Balloons carrying condensed mails were sent out from Paris by night, trusting to the winds, and landed where they could, whence the mail was forwarded. Many people will remember the tough tissue paper letters post-marked "Par Balon Monte' which came out of Paris and crossed the Atlantic during the troublous times.

Now all armies have a balloon corps, usually connected with their engineers. Some years ago, an officer of the Royal Engineers in Halifax availed himself of the opportunity while stationed in a part of the world where all were British, to carry on some interesting experiments in the use of captive balloons. His idea was to have one very much smaller than the regular service balloon was attached a camera, the shutter of which was worked by an electric connection with the ground, the wire being carried up with the detaining cord. When the balloon, too small to afford a good mark for sharp shooters, had drifted over the enemy's position, the operator pressed the button and the balloon and camera did the rest. By this method it was hoped to save the expense of a large balloon and render it unnecessary to send an aeronaut up with it. The worst that could happen would be the occasional loss of a small balloon and camera.

The fact that the balloon broke away one day and was never seen again closed the immediate experiments, the officer being obliged to advertise in the press for the possibility of recovering the property. He never did, but the attempt called attention to the experiments, which were then abandoned at that station. Still, in some form, practically all countries have their aerial observation corps. The difference in future will be more on the look out for eyes from above, and the aerial navigators will clearly be able more effectively to handle their flying machines.

400 FOOT TUNNEL—140 FOOT SHAFT

Up to the present time, the Turquoise Copper Co., has been practically a close corporation; an initial offering of 100,000 shares has just been made at 25 cents, par value $1.00, full paid and non-assessable. Proceeds will be used to further continue the development work already begun.

We have options on 50,000 shares of this stock and advise immediate purchase at 25 cents per share. It is the intention of The Board of Directors to list the stock on the New York Curb and it should sell at $1.00 per share by the first of the year.

9,000 Shares 7 Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 a Share) Offered at Par with 40 Per Cent Immediate Bonus of Common Stock We Reserve the Right to Withdraw Offer Without Notice and to Return any Subscription Received Too Late. Previous Offerings Were Immediately Oversubscribed.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than teardown; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sun shine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognised or unrecognised, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

Story of Long Journey with Mad Indian

HOW CHAKASON WAS BROUGHT FROM MOOSE FACTORY TO THE ASYLUM—MAN A GIANT AND HAD TO BE DRUGGED BEFORE HE WAS MASTERED.

North Bay, Aug. 21.—A group of men stepped off from the T. and N. O. Railway train at North Bay, and their strange appearance at once attracted great attention. The party comprised five white men, three Indians and an Indian captive bound with ropes and chains and clad in a leathern strait-jacket.

Weird yells and terrifying war whoops emanated from the captive, who was a stalwart and muscular fullblooded Cree Indian from the far north regions about Hudson Bay. The presence of the unique party marked the final stages of a trip unparalleled in the history of the world The Indian department at Ottawa had received word that a crazy Indian, dangerous in the extreme, and of great strength, was a captive at the Hudson Bay post at Moose Factory, on the shores of James Bay, and were requested to deal with the case.

Accordingly, Dominion Detective Giroux of Ottawa was deputed to proceed to the far north and bring the mad Indian accepted the hazardous mission, which entailed a journey of over 1000 miles, principally by canoe routes thru the wilderness, and with Dr. Drunet of Ottawa proceeded to Missanable, on the C. P.R. Here an expedition was outfitted, and with George McLeod, Hudson Bay Co., interpreter; J. P. Miller, C. P. R. policeman; Ed. Minard and three Indians, left in canoe on July 17 for the 500 miles paddle to Moose Factory, traversing 32 portages, some of which were over three miles in length over rough country.

Moose Factory was reached on July 28, a remarkably quick trip when the character of the country is considered and the many difficulties of travel. No more welcome party ever arrived at the post, but the sight of their objective and the thought of the long journey back to civilization with such a passenger, was not particularly pleasing.

CHAINED TO AN ANCHOR.

Chained to a huge anchor in an open field, was John Chakason, all Cree and more devil in appearance than human. Dirty and unkempt, with hair 18 inches long, Chakason tugged at his chains and made meanitations in the Indian language as the greatest of all spirits, the one and only Manitou, which he believed himself to be, while the Indians at the post shivering in superstitious terror and kept at a safe distance from the evil spirit which they believed Chakason to be.

The mad Cree was always noted for his violent temper and queer ways, but was always controlled by his squaw until her death one year ago, when he speedily drifted into insanity and made life miserable for every human being within miles of him. A giant in stature, weighing 258 pounds, and of strength almost unbounded. Chakason soon terrorized the Indians in his vicinity, who finally determined to capture him at any cost. The scene was 500 miles north of Moose Factory, and after many attempts and much tracking Chakason was lassoed and bound.

HIS STRENGTH WAS MARVELOUS

His Sampson-like strength snapped bond after bond, and it was with great difficulty he was finally, strapped to a dog sled and the trip started to Moose Factory, and, travelling night and day, the captive was turned over to the Hudson Bay Co. He was given his liberty, but after partially wrecking several buildings and being almost killed in pulling one down on top of him, he was chained up like a wild beast.

Detective Giroux, and his party started to bring the madman out after an attempt to clean him up was made, which included cutting his hair off. The first three days after leaving the post Chakason was very vicious, and drugs had to be administered to him to make him sleep and it was a constant fight for control. He would tear his clothes to tatters, uproot trees and made bad medecine all thru the piece. It finally dawned upon Chakason that he had met his masters, and thereafter he was less trouble, but vigilance never relaxed for a moment, knowing his giant strength, and remembering the stories of the Indians of the mad Cree's bloodthirstiness, he being reputed a murderer many times, altho the natives would not go into details, so great was their fear of his supernatural powers.

ON THE LONG VOYAGE.

Ten days in all were consumed in the canoe voyage between Moose Factory and Abitibi Crossing on the Grand Trunk Pacific construction. Here a handcar was requisitioned for the trip to Cochrane. Chakason had heard much about the white man's railway, and when he saw the handcar in operation he expressed his disappointment in vigorous terms to the Indians of the party. This he revised on arrival at Cochrane, whence the passenger train of the Ontario Government railway was boarded for the south. At North Bay a halt was made for a night, as the party were tired out with their long vigil, so Chakason was placed in a cell, where he "conjured" all night long and kept everyone awake for blocks around with his hideous yells. The next morning the party broke up, the Missanable contingent returning to their homes, while Detective Giroux and Dr. Dunnet proceeded to Hamilton Asylum with Chakason.

The trip out will never be forgotten by the white men who participated as Chakason was constantly on the alert to make trouble, despite the fact that his arms were pinioned most of the time by the improvised strait-jacket, while a coil of rope about his waist was handy in case he started to run, then his legs were fastened in chains. Notwithstanding all this precaution the mad Cree's great strength made it imperative that he never be left alone for a moment. Each night he was chained to a good sized tree, and once succeeded in uprooting the tree. When he was particularly ugly at night drugs were administered to him; and after a time he would drop off in slumber. He became fond of the "dope," and was very anxious to take it for its soothing effect.

WILL NOT LIVE LONG.

Chakason leaves five children, who are being cared for by the Hudson Bay Co., until arrangements can be made for their bringing up. Chakason altho a giant in strength now, will not live long in confinement, which soon tells on the sentest Indian. He has an enormous appetite, and on the trip out would eat from six to eleven pounds of meat per day, drink immense quantities of tea, and smoke and chew all the tobacco he could get. Tobacco juice he swallowed with out the slightest effect upon his system.

Canadians will Soon Get Money

Montreal, Aug. 23.—Immediate settlement of the claims of a large number of Canadian farmers against the United States Government for refund of overpaid duties on hay shipped to the United States between 1866 and 1882, is expected as the result of a letter recently sent to the claimants and their heirs from the office of the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs at Ottawa.

Further indication of a speedy adjustment of the claims which have been in litigation for years is afforded by the statement that Mr. Consaul, of the legal firm of Moyers and Consaul, Washington representatives for the claimants, will be in Montreal on Wednesday, August 25, to confer with the claimants on the details of settlement. He will spend the day at the Windsor Hotel, where a meeting of as many of the claimants as can attend, will be held at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The satisfactory settlement of the old claims will mean the refunding of a large amount of money to various residents of Montreal and other towns residents of Montreal and other towns throughout the Dominion, who are the heirs of the farmers who paid the heavy duties on hay demanded from 1866 to 1882. The letter from the office of the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs follows:

"In the course of negotiations between His Majesty's Ambassador and the United States authorities with a view to the liquidation of the claims for refund of overpaid duties on hay shipped to the United States from Canada in the years from 1866 to 1882, a possibility has become apparent of obtaining from Congress an appropriation to pay such claims "en bloc", if an accurate statement giving the exact amount of each claim could be supplied.

"I have, therefore, to request that you will supply me for the information of the ambassador with a statement, as accurate as may be, of the amount of your claim for such overpaid duties, being careful, however, not to overestimate it, as Mr. Bryce points out that a simkle instance of exaggeration in such claims may destroy the chance of obtaining the desired settlement.

"I am further to state that Messrs Moyers and Consaul have been acting as the legal representatives at Washington of most of the claimants and Mr. Bryce thinks it possible that if they were instructed to represent the interests of all the claimants the conduct of the cases would be greatly facilitated."

Prisoners is Reformed By Ethics of Morals

Seattle, Aug. 22.—Governor Albert W. Gilchrist of Florida was the most notable speaker at the opening session today of the American Prison Association, his subject being "Prison Reform in the South."

Warden F. O. Hallstrom of the North Dakota penitentiary spoke on "The Duty of Prison Managements."

"If a man be convicted of crime and serve a term in prison, and no steps are taken to effect his reform or cure, a greater crime of the individual," said Mr. Hallstrom. "Any prison management that forgets the moral ethics, justice and humanity cannot justify its right to existence" continued the speaker. "The prison that is managed and dominated by the spirit of revenge is simply a barnacle that society must remove in order to facilate human progress.

"When the inmate's character is uplifted the duty of the prison management has been in that measure discharged; the shackles of crime have been removed from the mind of the inmate, and there has been added to society a useful member. If the man discharged goes forth with bitter hatred and vengeance in his heart against society, then both are to be pitied, for the storm will surely break and some innocent person will be made the victim.

"Look well to the moral development, sow the seeds of love and justice, promote industry and thrift: lay stress on honesty and honor, discourage everything that makes for evil teach and practice tact and patience enforce strict discipline, but make no inhuman and unnatural rules. Preach and practice temperance

"Give us more schools, more churches, more charity and less barley corn and revenge, and there will be less need for jails, reformatories and penitentiaries."

The report of the special committee on the parole of life prisoners was read by the chairman, T. D. Wells of Hartford, Conn. The discussion was opened by A. W. Butler, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Charities.

"If a life prisoner has worn the badge of bondage long enough to satisfy the reasonable demands of justice and to exhaust the deterrent effects of punishment, and if he is safe to be at large, he can be put to better use in the world than to be kept within grim walls until the undertaker is called to rattle his bones over the stones," said Chairman Wells of the committee on parole of life prisoners in a report to the convention.

"The wisdom of extending the parole system to life convicts who have been convicted of no previous crime involving moral turpitude and whose record behind locks and bars has been clean and not tainted, is predicated on the fact that a man who is responsive to decent influences is worth more to the state and to himself out of prison than in prison."

Millions for Railway Building in the West

Winnipeg, August 23.—1909.—Reports of the crop, gathered at first-hand by experienced inspectors of crop conditions, continue to be encouraging. There is a general condition throughout the West of increased acreage and rain enough to carry the crops through. Reports of damage by hail are found to have been wholly local, and usually exaggerated as to extent and severity by the first reports sent out. As far as the experts' estimates have been collected thus far, it would appear that—after all due allowance has been made for a late spring and some damage by hail—there will be fully more than average crop of wheat in bushels per acre, and a very much larger total than last year, due to increased acreage. Oats are reported to be generally a shorter crop than last year. Cutting of barley is general wherever this grain was planted, and what cutting has been begun in all of the earlier districts. Unless there is a heavy frost within the next week or ten days, the crop will be quite safe from that danger, much of it having already passed the danger point.

MILLIONS FOR RAILWAY BUILDING.

President William Mackenzie, of the Canadian Northern system, was in Winnipeg this week. Speaking of the plans of the Canadian Northern in the West, President Mackenzie said:

"Six millions of ten million dollars I secured in England will be spent in the West. Surveying work on the Yellowhead Pass route is going on satisfactorily, and I shall be surprised if our line into Vancouver is not completed inside of four years. Fifty miles of the gap now open between Sellwood and Port Arthur will be closed this year. I found Canada very much in the public eye and mind of Great Britain. Not only do the news papers and other publications pay a great deal of attention to Canada, but financiers and investors are especially interested in any enterprise to which the name of Canada is attached."

LORD STRATHCONA COMING

There is great interest here in the convention of the British Association to be opened in Winnipeg on the 25th and in the proposed visit of Lord Strathcona to this city. There is a very strong friendship subsisting between Lord Strathcona and the people of Winnipeg, and the visit of the aged peer will be given a royal welcome in his old home.

The meeting of the British Association will be attended with keen interest. This is the first time that this distinguished body has met in the West, and it is expected that the occasion will prove to be no less interesting to the scientists who come here than to the people of the West. At this season of the year the country is alive with birds and animals, and the prairies are ablaze with the colors of countless varieties of wild flowers. These and the geological formation of Western Canada cannot fail to be of very great interest to men of scientific training. It is expected that fifteen hundred persons from outside places will attend the British Association convention, four hundred of whom will come from Great Britain.

GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO WINNIPEG.

A feature of the week's happenings was the visit of Governor Johnson of Minnesota, to Winnipeg. Governor Johnson and his party were entertained by the city, and at a very pleasant luncheon held at the Country Club the governor spoke with marked enthusiam of the country he had passed through on his way from the Coast. He spoke approvingly of the International Exposition to be held in Winnipeg in 1912, and promised his personal support to the project. Governor Johnson pleased all who heard him by his straightforward, earnest manner and friendly speech.

Governor Hughes, of New York, passed through Winnipeg on Saturday, but declined an invitation to stay over a few hours and see the city.

MANY INQUIRIES RECEIVED

At a meeting of the city's information bureau, held this week, the report of the secretary showed that 389 inquiries were received by the bureau in June, 82 of them being investment inquiries, 49 business inquiries and 58 from persons interested in manufacturing.

Two record prices for real estate were made this week. One of these was a price of $1,500 a foot for Portage Avenue property well out the Avenue, and the other was a price of $130 a frontage foot for residential property on Wellington Crescent. These are the highest prices ever reached in their respective localities, although Portage Avenue fontage near Main Street has sold for $3,000 a foot.

Lower Taxes

MUNICIPAL FORESTS MAY HELP TO SECURE THEM.

Forests owned and managed by municipalities or communities are no uncommon thing in Europe. Of late interest in this aspect of forestry is on the increase on this continent. An evidence of this fact was given by a meeting lately held in Cobourg, Ont., and attended by representative men of the counties of Northumberland and Durham.

The municipal forests of Europe frequently make a material reduction in the taxes of the municipality—in fact, sometimes wipe the taxes out altogether by the revenue derived from these forests.

The object of the meeting referred to was to consider the matter of the united counties purchasing and reforesting a tract of land within their borders. This tract is some 15,000 acres in extent and forms the watershed between the streams flowing into Lake Ontario directly and those running into the Trent river. The soil is almost pure sand. A fine crop of pine originally covered the area, and after it was taken off the land was for some years farmed with fair success. But the fertility of the soil soon failed, farmers are left on the ridges, has steadily diminished, and today many farms have been deserted and acres of "blow" sand have been formed in the land from which is in some cases drifting on, and covering up, good soil on adjoining farms. The streams throughout the area, too, are torrents in spring-time, but in late summer and autumn their beds are almost dry—the usual result of cutting away the forests at the head-quarters of streams.

Though almost useless for farming now, the land will grow fine timber. Originally it was covered with a fine growth of pine, and large stumps still remain to show the size the timber attained. Fine young timber may be seen at various places in the area. At one place in Durham county, moreover, a plantation of young white pine was mace some four years ago and this has developed into a thrifty young crop of timber.

The land can, it is thought be bought at an average price of five dollars per acre. If the land is bought at this figure and planted with pine at a cost for plants and planting, of ten dollars per acre, the cost per acre of the planted area would, at the end of sixty years amount to about a hundred and sixty five dollars ($165). The figure given for plants and planting is a liberal one, and the final cost given (is the $165) would include adequate charges for management and protection, as well as an allowance for taxes at 17 mills on the dollar. (Money is assumed to be worth three and a half per cent. per annum.)

The pine timber standing on the acre of ground would be worth, even at prices now prevailing, six hundred dollars. In other words, not only would the investment repay the interest at three and a half per cent per annum, but in addition it would yield an amount equivalent to a yearly payment of about two and a quarter throughout the sixty years. Thus the yearly revenue would to almost half the amount paid, in the first instance for the land.

Considerable work in the planting up of such land has been done in France and Germany, and much interest was shown at the meeting in the address of Dr. B. E. Fernow, dean of the faculty of forestry of the University of Toronto, who gave some interesting figures showing the profitable results that had been obtained. Other speakers at the meeting were Messrs. Thos. Southworth and Jas. Lawler, president and secretary, respectively, of the Canadian Forestry Association, E. J. Zavitz, Forester to the Ontario Dept of Agriculture, and others. The meeting passed resolutions favoring the reforestation of the lands in question and recommending that the council of the counties try to secure the co-operation of the provincial government. The matter will be further discussed at aseries of meetings to be held during the autumn, to conclude with a meeting of representatives of the counties in December next.

In other parts of Ontario are found conditions very much the same as those in the district above referred to, and similar action in the direction of creating municipal forest reserves could be taken with advantage to these districts. In other parts of Canada there are large areas of waste land which could be similarly turned to account. The city of Prince Albert, Sask., for example, has opposite it, on the other side of the Saskatchewan River, a large area of sandy land suitable for growing trees upon; and it would be to the interest of the city to acquire this and maintain and manage the forest, which would ultimately yield a considerable profit.

In the state of Pennsylvania, it may be noted, the legislature, at its session, passed bill empowering municipalities to acquire land for the purpose of forming such reserved municipal forest reserves.

Forestry Topics

TO BE DISCUSSED BY BIG MEETING AT REGINA ON SEPT. 3rd AND 4th.

Tree planting and tree growing on the prairies will be one of the chief topics for discussion at the special meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association in Regina, Sask., on Sept. 31st and on 4th next. Other topics which will have a prominent place on the program which is being prepared will be the management of the forest reserves and the question of their use as game preserves.

This will be the first time that a meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association has been held in the prairie provinces. It will be conducted under the auspices of the City Council of Regina and the Association decided to hold its meeting in Saskatchewan a capital.

The railways have promised a single fare rate to delegates for the round trip, and on the second day of the meeting an excursion will be held to Indian Head to inspect the Dominion Government's forest nursery and plantations there.

Programmes and further information in regard to the meeting may be obtained from the secretary of the Association, Mr. Jas. Lawler, 11 Queen's Park, Toronto, Ont.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Fitzgerald, Ga., Aug. 24.— Henry Taylor, a negro ex-convict, charged with assaulting Mrs. Josh M. Vickers, on Tuesday, and then murdering her and her infant, was yesterday afternoon taken from the custody of the sheriff of Wilcox county and lynched.

Mrs. Vickers and her eight-months' old baby were left at their home at Lumpkin's Ferry Tuesday afternoon, and that night when the husband and father returned from his work both the wife and baby were missing. Thursday afternoon the bodies were found in a small pond near the Vickers' home. The woman had been assaulted and then choked to death, while the baby's skull had been crushed.

Henry Taylor had told of seeing Mrs. Vickers with her baby go in the direction of the pond where the bodies were found. Suspicion was directed toward him upon finding the bodies, but he had disappeared. Early yesterday Taylor was arrested in Bemhill County, near Lumpkin's Ferry. He was taken in charge by the sheriff, who started with him for Fitzgerald. Enraged citizens followed the sheriff and finally came upon him, when quick work was made of the negro. After being strung up to a tree, Taylor's body was filled with bullets.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

Replica of H. Hudson's Half Moon

New York, Aug. 24.—The replica af Henry Hudson's Half Moon is now floating quietly in the waters of the New York navy yard, having been successfully floated from th Grant floating crane, the Hercules. The Half Moon is now being prepared to play the stellar role in the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

It had taken two floating cranes several hours to load the Half Moon on the Soestdyk at Rotterdam. But the Hercules, the capacity, of which is 125 tons, lifted the little craft free of the deck with ease and lowered her gently into the water.

The Half Moon's cradle, which weighed seventeen tons, was lowered into the water with the little craft intact. The hoisting apparatus supported the Half Moon in the water until Six tons of ballast had been stowed in her lower hold. She was then moored fast beside the Soestdyk, and the crew of the latter worked all day putting thirty more tons of pig iron ballast into her.

COUNTESS BRINGS CHILD BACK.

Russian Government Assisted in Obtaining Daughter Kidnapped by Her Daughter.

New York, August, 23.—The marital woes of the young Countess Gizycki, formerly Miss Eleanor Patterson, of Chicago, which have been engaging the attention of the people of two continents, took a new turn when she returned on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse with her three year-old daughter, Countess Felicia.

The fact that powerful influence had been brought to bear upon the Russian Government to compel countess and her daughter of especial interest.

And when, at the moment of her landing from the liner, it was intimated by some on the ship that the sad faced young Countess, whose stormy married life ended in Vienna it is said, with a knock down blow from her husband, might still be reconciled to him, the interest grew in this curious romance which began in St. Petersburg when the Count in 1902 met this daughter of a Chicago millionaire and began to pay her ardent court.

But the Countess would say nothing about her future save that she would return to live in Vienna in six months. Whether this means that she will be reconciled to the Count is a question she would not answer.

Nor would she go over the history that the cables have told piecemental since her brilliant marriage in the Washington home of her parents in 1904, following a round of visits to friends made with the Count announcing their engagement, unknown to her parents.

Mr. J. Medill McCormick, her cousin, who conducted the negotiations which ended in gaining possession of the child, was almost as reticent as the Countess, but denied the story that any money had been paid as a ransom for the little Countess.

"Not one cent was paid," said Mr. McCormick emphatically, "not one cent. It is true that influence was brought to bear upon the Russian Government to have the child restorated to its motherf That is all I care to say."

"Why is the Countess to return to Vienna? Will there be a reconciliation?" he was asked.

RUSSIAN GIRL'S PLUCK.

Natalie Dronikowa Sold Her Tresses to get Money to Enter United States.

New York, Aug. 24.—The pluck shown by Natalie Dronikowa, a young Russian immigrant won her the admiration of the government officials at Ellis Island yesterday. Four weeks ago Miss Dronikowa, a teacher and graduate of the University of Moscow, reached this port on the Estonia.

When examined at Ellis Island she showed letters of introduction to people in Chicago, and said she was going there to learn English and to teach. She was in perfect health, of spotless character, but she did not have the $25 which is required of immigrants. The officials would not let her stay, and she was deported.

Yesterday the Birma brought her into port again, and when she passed before the examiners she showed them $45. Then she stopped before the physicians. They remembered her fine face and splendid figure, but there was something different. The lustrous, coal-black tresses, that on the former occasion had hung in great curls to her waist, were gone. The girl had sold them to get the money which would prove the "open sesame" at Ellis Island.

Don't waste your money buying plasters when you can get a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment for twenty-five cents. A piece of flannel dampened with this liniment is superior to any plaster for lame back, pains in the side and chest, and much cheaper. 14

English Faith in Canada Rapidly Growing

Montreal, Aug. 24.—Growing confidence in both the economic and political future of Canada on the part of England was the key note of an interview given by Lord Strathcona before leaving Montreal for the West in his private car on Sunday evening. The fact that Canada is entirely capable of regulating her own government and in so doing is constantly improving her economic conditions is generally recognized in England, and the fact is being acted upon, said Lord Strathcona.

One evidence of this act is in connection with the matter of the Imperial naval defence, declared the High Commissioner. According to his statement, England has perfect confidence that Canada will settle the matter in the best way, either by cash contribution or by the construction and equipment of a new navy. Perfectly confidence that Canada would do her part in the matter and do it well is felt in England.

In the same vein Lord Strathcona said that economic conditions had improved so greatly during the last few years in Canada that English capitalists were now not only willing but anxious to find investments here. Much money, he predicted, would be brought from England within the next few years for the greater development of Canada's varied resources. On definite details in connection with such investments the High Commissioner was diplomatically noncommittal, refusing to discuss any subject bearing on party politics.

The development of Canada has been almost beyond belief, declares the High Commissioner. He first came to this country about seventy years ago, and though ninety years old now, retains a vivid impression of the early days. He expects to visit Toronto, Winnipeg, and possibly even further west, and will, of possible, return to England about the middle of September.

TO TRY AGAIN.

Wellman Will Have Another Airship Constructed.

Camp Wellman, Danes Island, Spitzbergen, Aug. 24, via Christiania.—To the general relief of the members of the polar expedition, Walter Wellman, although shaken by his misfortune, announced today that he was more determined than ever not to abandon his plan, but had to wrest all the difficulties standing in the way of reaching the north pole by airship. Mr. Wellman plans to build a new ship longer and narrower than that which met with disaster, and of higher speed. Other improvements will be made, profiting by experience. Workmen this morning started enlarging the airship house and making all ready for another campaign.

All the members of the crew of the airship have asked to go with Mr. Wellman on his next voyage.

Don't think even a penny—until health returns. And I mean just exactly that.

I am the one physician who says to the sick, "I will, out of my own pocket, pay for your medicine if it fails to bring you help."

And for 35 years Dr. Shoop's medicines have been used and recommended in every city and hamlet in America. They are positively standard in every community—and everywhere.

Then why pay the cash, and at your risk, for other unwarranted and uncertain medicines? Thousands upon thousands have in the past successfully used Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

When the liver, the Heart or Nerves fail, or the Kidneys cause backache, it may be well to help Dr. Shoop's Restorative with these home tests to health again. But best of all, they positively take no money risk whatever.

They know that when health fails to return Dr. Shoop will himself gladly pay the druggist for that test. And for that test a full 30 day treatment is freely granted.

But write me first for an order.

This will save delay and disappointment.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test for Dr. Shoop's Restorative—for I have appointed as honest and responsible druggist in almost every community everywhere, to whom any one may come, no pay," medicines to the sick.

Tell me also which book you need.

The books below will surely open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. Besides you are perfectly free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the books below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is surely worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for to-morrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 13, Racine, Wis.

SAYS THIS MEDICINE HAS MYSTIC POWERS.

Will Assist Anyone in Weak, Pale, Nervous Condition to Robust Hearty Health.

It's in the spring that health gives out—that folks begin to feel draggy, weary, restless,—hate to eat, look pale, feel discouraged.

If you've reached this state read what J. W. Jarvell, well known in Merrimawn, has to say about the medicine that cured him. "Last winter I caught a heavy cold that settled in my back. My kidneys and liver were affected and my health ailed. By spring I was in bad shape—couldn't sleep like I used to—felt tired in the morning—ate very little—was terribly depressed, late and anxious looking. Twinges of rheumatism, frequent neuralgia attacks over the temples, made matters worse. The doctor prescribed three times, but didn't help. Then I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills—They possess mystic powers surely, for I gained and improved day by day and now am a perfect health again. I will praise and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills till I die."

The ingredients in Dr. Hamilton's Pills are pure and wholesome—come right from the storehouse of Nature to the form of veletable juices and extracts,—consequently this gentle invigorating laxative tonic and blood purifier is safe for old and young alike. We assure you of enormous benefit from Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which revitalize delicate glands, search out the seat of hidden disease, flood the body with vigor and health that has caused thousands of broken-down, despairing men and women to join in a mighty song of praise for the beneficient aid that comes from this king of all tonics. Get Dr. Hamilton's Pills today. 25c, 25c. box today. At all dealers.

EXCURSION TO HASTINGS.

The Piccolo Band held a most successful excursion to Hastings yesterday. The steamer Otonabee left the Wolfe street wharf at 8 o'clock, with a good crowd on board. The sail down the river and through Rice Lake to Hastings was most pleasant and was greatly enjoyed by everyone. The trip back was equally enjoyable.

Painanywhere stopped in 20 minutes sure with one of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. The formula is on the 25-cent box. Ask your doctor or Druggist about this formula! Stops womanly pains, headache pains anywhere. Write Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis., for free trial, to prove value of his headache, or Pink Pain Tablets. Sold by all dealers.

VEGETABLES

When you want nice fresh vegetables we can supply you. Our goods arrive twice daily from the gardens. Call us up [illegible] Phone No. 7. A. A. Sim, 249 George Street, successor to Kennedy.

Half Holidays.

The stores of the city that have been observing the Thursday half holiday during July and August will discontinue the half holiday from now on till next season, commencing next Thursday. When the agreement was made about the weekly holiday it was decided to keep the stores closed on Thursday July and August with the exception of the first Thursday in July and last Thursday.

Don't drug the stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. It is the weak nerves that are crying out for help. Vitalize these weak inside controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly good health will come to you again. Test it and see. Sold by all dealers.

Making Improvements.

The granolithic walks are being constructed at the Normal School, and will probably be finished before the opening of the institution in September. A number of men are also engaged in grading the grounds in preparation for laying the sod for the lawn next year. When all this work is completed and the sidewalk built on Benson street, whether on the inside of the trees or not, a big improvement will be noticeable.

Flying Ants.

A novel spectacle was noticeable on the lawn of Mr. D. H. Moore on Brock street, early yesterday morning, the grass being literally covered with a swarm of flying ants. The insects seemed to take special interest in Mr. Moore's lawn, as they could not be seen on any of the others. There were thousands of insects which were about the size of the large black ant. At noon the visitors had all departed for parts unknown.

Rural Mail Delivery.

The first rural mail delivery in the County of Peterborough was commenced yesterday, the people along the Communication Road, and in the Township of Enniscore, along the main road being the first to have their mail brought to their homes. Mr. Pat. Sullivan, driver of the Enniscore stage, will be the postman on this route until October, when Mr. P. J. Scollard will have charge of it. The rural delivery will no doubt be greatly appreciated by the farmers. Most of them have put boxes on their gates and in these the mail will be left.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop" Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Fell Down a Well.

While playing in a yard on Chambers street yesterday afternoon, shortly after dinner, little Marguerite Watson, the 9-year-old daughter of Mr. John N. Watson, 425 Chambers street, fell down a well and sustained painful injuries about the head. The young girl was playing with a number of other children around a well, which was twenty-five feet in depth, and the little girl fell headlong into it. The other children ran to give the alarm and it was not long before a couple of men came and by means of arope pulled the girl out. She was badly cut about the head two stitches being required to bind the wound. Dr. Young was called and attended the injured child.

To Lake Simcoe.

Last Wednesday morning Mr. and Mrs. Brownscombe left their cottage Stony Lake, for a trip up the canal to Lake Simcoe. In writing to a friend Mrs. Brownscombe said that they were enjoying their trip very much, and it was not at all tiresome travelling through the canal as the scenery is beautiful with mountains of stone on either side. They camped at Kirkfield over night and next day visited Beaverton and crossed Lake Simcoe to Orillia, and were eye witnesses to the big fire which occurred there. They expect to reach home towards the end of the week. The Anderson party are enjoying the same trip.

VOL. XXXII NO. 199 PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, THURSDAY AUGUST 26, 1909 PRICE TWO CENTS

Copies of Thirty Year Franchise Agreement for Each Councillor

Manufacturers' Committee was Instructed to Have Copies of Agreement Prepared and Sent to Each Alderman

The Manufacturers' Committee was instructed by the council to reconsider the Peterborough Light & Power Company's application for a thirty-year franchise; to prepare an agreement satisfactory to the company and the committee and to submit it to the council for approval. The committee was also instructed to have copies of the agreement prepared and sendto each alderman so he may study the document and have an idea of what he is to talk about when he gets to the council meeting.

It is time some such move was made so that the disorderly sessions such as the Committee of the Whole on Monday night, will be discontinued. Most of the aldermen had not the least idea of what the Peterborough Light & Power Company's application meant. Some of them did not want to know. The result was everyone was talking at once and each was trying to explain it to the other

Some time ago the terms of the agreement prepared by the Manufacturers' Committee and the Light & Power Company, were published in these columns along with the minutesof the different meetings. This was done as much for the benefit of the aldermen as anyone else. It is evident,however, that the aldermen paid no attention to it, or else it was so long since thelast council meeting that they had forgotten. It would mean a great difference to the city and to the men themselves if they paid more attention to municipal matters and looked into facts a little closer. A whole lot of time would be saved and business would not be blocked from month to month.

Mayoralty Candidates May Cause the Council Some Inconvenience

It is understood that two or three of the aldermen are shaping up for the mayoralty contest next January. Who they are is not yet for publication, but they are among the six who were elected for a two-year term. Only half of their term will have been put in on January 1st next, and there is no provision in the special act for the election of their successors. This may cause some inconvenience when election time comes.

A year or more ago the city got a special act passed by the legislature, granting the city the privilege of having half the council elected for two years and half for one year. There are many favorable arguments to the plans, but the framere of the act took no heed tothe possibility of one or more of the two-year men wishing to resign to run for the mayoralty. There is no clause in the act providing for the election of successors.

The general Municipal Act provides for the election of successors to aldermen who resign, but they are all one-year men. The question is will that apply to Peterborough's case? If it does the next question is, who will enter an election to finish out one year, when at the same time and with just thesame amount of trouble he may enter the general list and take a chance of being elected for two years. It is doubtful if any man,will consent to run to serve an unexpired term, and especially a man of ability would hardly consider it.

A large portion of the population was always opposed to the two-year term and they would like to see the system changed to one year ,again. The council has the right to make the change if it desires to do so.

At the same time there is a demand for a return to the ward system, and in all probability a petition will be presented to the council this fall asking that the voice of the ratepayers be heard on this question. There are a great many strong arguments in favor of the ward system and if a petition with a goodly number of ratepayers' signatures attached to it is sent to the council,that body can hardly be bold enough to again refuse to submit the question to a vote of the people.

Brock Street Rink to be Used for Roller Skating

For some time past negotiations have been in progress between parties from Toronto, and the owners of Brock street rink, looking to the opening up of a new roller skating rink in that building. The deal was completed yesterday, and the rink will be open for business early in September. The new proprietors will start at once to put down a magnificebt wood floor 172x70 feet. covering the entire floor spare of this spacious building and making one of the largest, if not the largest proprietors have purchased 600 pairs of ball-bearing roller skates of the latestdesign and will spare no expense in catering to the public, and a better or more convenient place for such an amusement could not be found in the city.

Roller skating is one of the most healthful and vigorating of pastimes and a large patronage for the new institution is assured.

The rink will be in operation from the time of opening up to the beginning of the ice skating and will reopen again about the first of April.

The flooring of the Brock street rink will make it suitable for the holding of public meetings, although it is understood, it is the intention of the management to give the building over almost exclusively to roller skating. The city is to be congratulated upon its new acquisition to its places of amusement.

THREE REASONS.

Each With Two Legs and Ten Fingers.

A Boston woman who is a fond mother writes an amusing article about her experience feeding her boys Among other things she says: "Three chubby, rosy-cheeked boys, Bob, Jack and Dick, aged 6, 4 and 2 years respectively, are three of odd reasons for using and recommending the food, Grape-Nuts, for these youngsters have been fed on Grape-Nuts since infancy, and often between meals when other childhich would have been given candy.

"I gave a package of Grape-Nuts to a neighbor whose 3 year old child was a weakened little thing, ill half was a the time. The little tot ate the Grape Nuts and cream greedily abd the mother continued the good work and it was not long before a truly wonderful change manifested itself in the child's face and body. The results were remarkable, even for Grape-Nuts.

"Both husband and I use Grape-Nuts every day and keep strong and well and have three of the finest, healthiest boys you can find in a day's march."

Many mothers instead of destroying the children's stomachs with candy and cake give the youngsters a handful of Grape-Nuts when they are begging for something in the way of sweets. The result is soon shown in greatly increased health, strength and mental activity.

"There's a Reason."

TO OWN ITS MINES.

The C.P.R. to Purchase Coal Mines East.

Montreal, Aug. 26.—Owing to the unsettled condition of affairs at Springhill Mines, N.S., where the C.P.R. have been receiving their supply of coal for years past, for the Atlantic division, the railway is at present on the look out for a coal property of its own in that district.

Mr. H. P. Timmerman, Industrial Commissioner of the C. P. R., is in Fredericton inspecting the Grand Lake coal district. Before leaving questioned regarding the probable outcome of his visit, Mr. Timmerman replied that "the C.P.R. was always ready to take advantage of any good method of obtaining its supplies at a saving,"

Considerable importance is attached to Mr. Timmerman's present visit to New Brunswick, in view of the fact that the management of the Cumberland Coal and Railway Co. have threatened to close down the Springhill mine altogether.

Before returning Mr. Timmerman will visit Restigouche County and look into the International Railway now under construction by Contractor Thomas Malcolm.

THE WEATHER.

Indignation Meeting of Board of Works in Ald. Gillespie's Office

Aldermen Up in Arms Against Chairman of Board of Works who Started Benson St. Walk Inside the Tree Line without Consulting the Committee

War! War! There's war to a finish now, and the chairman of the Board of Works, Alc. Phelan, is in all kind of hot water. Practically everymember of the Board of Works is up in arms and their indignation last night knew no bounds. Some of the other members of the council are also severe in their criticism of Ald. Phelan's actions.

That Benson street sidewalk is the cause of it all. The chairman of the Board of Works, quietly and unobserved, moved the sidewalk gang and plant from Kirk street away up to the north boundary of the city yesterday morning and started to and started to work on the Benson street walk. A big gang was employed and 600 feet of the walk is laid with about a block of cement completed. The walk is being laid on the inside of the tree line. This was done without consulting one member of the Board of Works and not one of them knew it until last night when Mr. Robert Kidd went home to supper and saw what was being done.

Mr. Kidd got hold of Dr. Pentland, and the two got busy hunting up,the aldermen, the mayor and the chairman of the Board of Works. Each alderman and especially the members of the Board of Works went up in the air when they heard of it.

Some of the expressions used were "It's a high-handed piece of imposition."—Ald. Turner.

"He ignores everyone and everything—Ald. Morgan.

"He had no right to do that without calling or consulting his committee."—Ald. Gillespie.

"We,ll stop the work. The mayor can stop it. If not they will have an injunction issued."— Ald. McIntyre.

"I was greatly surprised when I heard it. There were lots of other works to do. For instance, Charlotte street."—Ald. Duncan.

Many other expressions of indignation were floating through the air. Ald. McIntyre told Ald. Phelan that he had no business going ahead and ignoring his committee.

Finally about 9 o'clock the mayor and Ald.Phelan were called to Ald. Gillespie's office for the purpose of settling the trouble. Ald. Turner went out to hunt up one or two other members. During his absence Ald. McIntyre scolded the chairman of the Board of Works, and that gentleman left and went up street, saying,"Nothing can be done tonight. A meeting cannot be held here." He was followed by the mayor.

About 9.30 the mayor and chairman were brought back and at the informal talk were present with them Aldermen Gillespie, Turner, Duncan, McIntyre, Metheral, Morgan Duffus and Buller.

The understanding at the last Board of Works meeting ,when the Benson street walk was discussed was that the work was to stand until the Ontario Government's engineer came here. The board was to meet with him and decide on where the walk was to go. The engineer has been here and gone and the Board of Works was not notified. No meeting was held.

Now Ald. Phelan goes ahead on his own initiative and builds the walk in face of the petition from the residents on the street asking for it outside, and in face of the understanding with the committee.

In giving his explanation Ald. Phelan said he was following the principle of the Board of Works for the past two years, viz., to build all walks withing the tree line. He said the mayor had received a letter from the government's engineer asking for the walk inside. The peincipal of the school wanted it inside and he wanted it built before the school was opened. Most of the people, he said, wanted it inside. He thought the quietest and best way was to go ahead and build it without saying anything. He couldn't see what kick there was. It "made him sick."

Why didn't you call up the members of your committee. We nearly all have phones?. You knew the petition was in. You knew the understanding with the committee. There was lots of other work to do.

These were some of thequestions thrownat the chairman.

"You're going too far," said Ald. Morgan. "You ignore everybody and lay walks just when and where it suits you. You're not running this town yet.j'

"My kick is that the committee was not consulted. I'm open for conviction as to where the walks should go. But I want to be consulted," said Ald. Gillespie.

"Will you stop the work?" asked Ald. Turner, "until the council meet in the morning and settle the thing?

"No," said Ald. Phelan, "I can't see any reason for stopping the work. Even the people who signed the petition for the walk outside are now tickled to death that it is going inside."

There was a lot of exchanges of views and Ald. Phelan left for home. Then the aldermen got after the mayor and wanted him to stop the work claiming that he had authority to do so.

"I'll not go back on the chairman," said the mayor. "If he wants tostop all right, I'll not order him to stop."

A petitionwas signed by a majority of the members of the council for a meeting of the council to be called this morning at 9 o'clock.The mayor is therefore compelled to call the meeting, the result of which is hard to foretell. One thing, however is certain, if there is a quorium, it will be one of the warmest meetings of the whole year.

The aldermen, one by one, left Ald. Gillespie's office and went home to get some sleep before this morning's session.

SLEEP-WALKING FEAT

MANY STARTLING FEATS OF SOMNAMBULISTS.

Narrow Escapes Frequent—Deeds of Heroism and Recklessness Often Performed by Victims of Phenomena.

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Times was when a person in a condition of somnambulism was believed to be possessed of a devil. Modern science has dispelled this idea; still, its manifestation is so out of the ordinary as to call up feelings of astonishment, and even awe, in the minds of both the ignorant and those accustomed to scientific investigation. Public attention was recently called to the freaks of somnambulism in the adventure of Miss Katherine Sculler, aged 28 years, who walked in her sleep while visiting the home of Mrs. George Wakefield, in Yonkers, N. Y. With closed eyes and arms hanging simply by her side, she left her bed on the third floor of the house. one night recently, and made her way to the window. Those in the street below saw her step out on the sill, and pause briefly on the stone coping a foot wide. It seemed to the awe-stricken spectators of her movements that she momentarily must plunge downward three stories to death on the stone pavement. Then she was seen to move slowly and with perfect poise along the narrow ledge.

A policeman who was attracted to the place by the crowd which had gathered to watch her eurious performances, dashed into the house and found an open window,which brought him within arm's length of Miss Sculler. He waited until he could make sure in the effort and seized her by the wrist. Instantly she woke. For a few moments she stood motionless, surveying the scene below from her dizzy height. Swiftly the situation forced itself upon her and left her in a paralysis of terror. The policeman tried to draw her gently toward the window, but it was impossible. Miss Sculler swayed and would have fallen, when her free hand came in contact with the guy wire leading to an electric sign.

She kept herself from falling by clutching the wire. Someone in the crowd had sent in an alarm of fire and a truck came quickly. While the men in the crowd shouted to Miss Sculler to keep up her courage, a ladder was raised and she was carried to the street.

In Miss Sculler's case her adventure was a manifestation of natural somnambulism, induced by a nervous temperament, and when she was awake she had no recollection that she had had a dream which induced her to leave her bed.

An instance is related of a young clergyman not far from St. Louis who was so completely possessed by his work, that waking or sleeping,he was always at it. He literally wrote many of his sermons in his sleep,and they were well composed and correctly written, although his stimulus often would run out long before he

SOUVENIR OF LONDON.

Chief Howard Sent Copies to all of the Aldermen.

An exceptionally handsome souvenir of London, Ont., the Forest City, has been received by each member of the council. They were sent by Fire Chief Howard, who has been visiting at his old home. The book is a beautiful specimen of the printer's art. It contains cuts of manufacturing establishments, parks, residences, water views, civic and public buildings, etc.,and it would give at once the impression that London is a large and beautiful city. The book also includes much valuable information about Londonand is just what Peterborough wants to get out.

NEW PERIODICAL.

The Canadian Laundryman Makes Its Appearance from The Times.

Peterborough is fast becoming the center for newspapers and periodicals, the latest addition being The Canadian Laundryman, published at The Times office. It is a magazine which devotes its whole attention to laundry and its kindred trades and is the only one of its kind in Canada, and should attractconsiderable attention, and have a large circulation and following. The initial number has just been issued and consists of 32 pages and is, we think, a credit to the local printing fraternity. The cover is particularly attractive, being in two and three colors and of a handsome design. Already a large number of advertisements appear within its pages and its financial success is assured.

KILLED FOUR PEOPLE

TERRIBLE DEED OF A BOY OF 20 YEARS.

Scarcely Out of His Teens He is Sentenced to Death.

Aberdeen, S. D., Aug. 25.—One of the most notable murder trials that has ever taken place in this state has just terminated by the death penalty being invoked.

The quadruple crime, which Victor is said to have confessed, was committed on the night of July 2 last. The victims were John W. Christie, his wife, his daughter Mildred, and Michael Ronayne, a farm-hand. The scene of the tragedy was the Christie Farm, near the town of Rudolph. Victor, the alleged murderer, was employed on a neighboring farm.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the diabolical crime. Christie was agent for an elevator company, driving to and from the farm in the grain season. He was known to have considerable money in the house at times.

Christie was evidently the first victim of the tragedy. He had been milking a cow when the murderer appeared from behind and felled him with a blow from a hammer. Death probably was instantaneous. The Ronayne boy, who was working in a stall next to Christie, was killed by a blow through the skull with the hammer, a huller wound through the side, and another through the arm.

The shots which completed the work of the hammer in extinguishing the boy's life evicently attracted the attention of Mrs. Christie, who hurried to the back porch to investigate and met her death. Two bullets were fired at her, one striking her in the abdomen, the other passing through her heart, causing instant death.

The shots which killed the mother aroused the daughter, who was still in bed. Springing up she hastened to the door of her room when the murderer entered. He held with one hand and fired a bullet through her brain with the other. The murderer then ransacked every room of the house, hastily emptying the drawers upon the floor in order to examine the contents. Four purses were tipped to pieces.

Within twenty-four hours after the murder young Victor was arrested at Northville, about twenty miles from the scene of the tragedy. A watch belonging to one of the members of the Christie family is said to have been found on his person.

Victor's attorneys bent every effort to inducee the State's attorney to consent to a life sentence in consideration of Victor pleading guilty. When the offer was refused, with the statement that nothing but a death sentence would be satisfactory to the State, in view of the heinousness of the crime, it was decided to have Victor plead not guilty, and trust him to the mercies of a jury.

Awful Tale of Suffering by Castaways on Pacific Reef

Captain Drowned Before His Wife's Eyes—Woman Drowned Children Fearing Cannibalism

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 25.—Because no wreck has occurred n the vicinity for years the British Government some time ago ceased leaving supplies for shipwrecked mariners at desolate Middleton Island,in the South Seas, and because supplies were not found there as they had been led by the sailing directions to expect, the crew of the Norwegian barque Errol (formerly the Carisbroke Castle)experienced all the agonies of approaching starvation during the awful two weeks in which they had no morsel of food nor drop of water. Several of the seamen went insane, and others, including Captain Anderson, perished in their endeavors to make and float a seaworthy craft. Mrs. Anderson, the master's wife, sacrificed her four children, and committed suicide, when, after the death of the husband and father, she heard the seamen discussing a project to resort to cannibalism.

Big Fish Upset Boat and a Famous Swimmer

Camp Temagami, Aug. 24.—Mr. Wm. Henry, the world-famous swimmer and founder of the Royal Life-Saving Society, who is now touring Canada in the interests of the Society had a peculiar experience while fishing in Lake Temavami on Satday morning.

Mr. Henry, accompanied by Mr. Arnold Morphy, of Upper Canada College, the president of the Ontario branch of the Royal Life-Saving Society, left Cochrane Camp, where Mr. Henry is a guest of Mr. Cochrane, to fish for lake trout. After landing three beauties, they hooked onto a monster. "The fish," as Mr. Morphy expressed it, "pulled like a horse"—pulled so well, indeed, that their boat was upset and they were left floundering half a mile from shore. With no help near, there was nothing for it but to puttheir theories in practice and to swim for land. An accident such as this might easily have resulted in a tragedy to persons less accomplished, but was regarded as a joke by the experts, who after removing their clothing, towed the row boat to shore

LEATHER UP.

Boots and Shoes and Rubbers Will Advance in Price This Fall.

The attention of the public is drawn to the fact that this fall foot wear of all kinds will be advanced consicerably in price. In conversation with a local shoe dealer The Times was informed that the whole sale houses and manufacturers are notifying their customers that the old price lists are no good. That leather is twice as high this fall as it was last year andthat it will advance still further.

Raw rubber has also advanced in price and rubber goods will be at least 10 per cent. higher this fall.

This is a serious matter for a great many people and they will do well to get boots and shoes and rubbers instead of waiting for the advance in price in the winter when money is scarce and badly needed.

Wedding Bells

ROGER—ROPER.

A marriage which is of particular interest to Peterboro' people was solemnized yesterday afternoon in Hamilton, when Miss Margaret C. Roper, daughter of the late J. H. Roper, became the bride of his Honor Judge G. M. Roger of Peterborough and junior judge of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's aunt, at 27 Herkimer street, Hamilton,at 3.30 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Ketchen of Hamilton, formerly of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough, officiated at the wedding. Judge and Mrs. Roger will reside in Cobourg, to which place they will be followed by the best wishes of a host of friends throughout the Province.

THE CANADIAN NAVY.

Where Will Canada Get Her Warships is Now Being Asked.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 24.—In connection with the reported scheme for a Canadian Navy, the question is being asked as to where the ships will be built. An outlay of many millions will be necessary if the proposal is to be carried out on the line indicated, and shipbuilding concerns in the country are already making enquiries here concerning it.

As far as can be learned, no definite decision on that point has been reached and may not be until such time as the principle of any naval policy is ratified by Parliament. It is thought, however by Parliament. It is thought, however, that the larger cruisers will be built in the old country, but if at all possible, the others will be constructed in Canadian ship yards.

ROCKEFELLER MAKES LARGE SUM BY STOCKS.

Two Years' Increase in Value of His Standard Oil Holdings Did It.

New York, Aug. 25.—John D. Rockefeller is in no danger of becoming poor, no matter how much money and property he gives away, so long as he retains his Standard Oil stock, of which he owns $25,000,000,par value, say the New York Tribune. It sold at 712 yesterday, the highest price which it has reached since the panic of 1907. The price of the stock has been advancing steadily for a long time, and has risen 322 points from the low price iof 390, at which it sold on Nov. 4, 1907.

This rise of 322 points represents an increase in Mr. Rockerfeller's fortune in less than twoyears of $79,756,824, all of which has come about without any fresh investment of money or special efforts on the part of Mr. Rockefeller or the men who care for his money.

The Standard Oil Company pays dividends of 40 per cent. a year, and since 1882, when the company was formed, has paid to its stockholders nearly $600,000,000 in dividends of which John D. Rockefeller has received about one-quarter. The company's earnings did not fall off in the year of depression following the panic, and there has been accumulated a surplus of about $275,000,000, so that Mr. Rockerfeller would have a hard time to keep from growing richer as time goes on.

The second largest holder of Standard Oil stock is the Harkness estate, with 80,000 shares. The gain on the stock in less than two years has been about $25,000,000, and the Pratts, of Brooklyn, who are the third largest holders, with about 60,000 shares, are nearly $20,000,000 richer than they were two years ago so far as their oil stock is concerned.

With a gain of $322 a share, it is easy to figure how much the larger shareholders of the company have been enriched in the last two years. These holders, aside from Mr. Rockefeller and the Harkness and Pratt estates the: Oliver H. Payne, 40,000 shares; H. M. Flagler, 30,000; O. B. Jennings, estate, 17,000; H. H. Rogar's estate, 15,000; Benjamin Brewster estate, 10,000; Charles Lockhart, 8500; L. C. Ledyard, 8000; Payne Whitney, 8000; W. H. Tilford estate 6000; W. C. Whitney estate, 6000; John D. Archbald, 6000; W. G. Worden, 5858; University of Chicago, 5000; Daniel O'Day estate, 2665; Samuel Andrews estate, 1650; H. C. Folger, 2145; H. H. Rogers, Jr., 1000, and Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, 1000.

Sunday Sale of Cigars In Hotels and Restaurants is Legal

Toronto, Aug. 25.—Magistrate Denison clearly intimated in the police court this morning that hotel-keepers or restaurant-keepers may sell cigars to anyone on Sunday without fear of conviction.

The hotel-keepers or restaurant-keepers must have cigar licenses, of course.

"In view of the magistrate's decision I will not seek to procure one of Northumberland and Durham. The victions against hotelkeepers or restaurant keepers who sell cigars on Sunday," said Staff-Inspector Stephen, when interviewed to the future policy of the police.

"That means that I can walk into any hotel or restaurant which has a regular cigar license, and buy a cigar on Sunday without danger of the seller being prosecuted?"

"Yes," replied Inspector Stephen. This decision means that a cigar is not a drug nor a food but just a cigar.

Horse Distemper

Prince Edward Farmer Solemnly Declares Nerviline is a Specific.

"After fifty years' experience in raising horses I can safely testify that no remedy gives such good results for an all-round stable liniment as Nerviline." Thus opens the very earnest letter of J. J. Evanston, who lives near Wellington, P. A. "I had a very valuable horse that took distemper a month ago, and was afraid I was going to lose him. His throat swelled and hard lumps developed. His nostrils ran and he had a terrible cough. I tried different remedies, but was unable to relieve my horse of his pain and suffering till I started to use Nerviline. I mixed a bottle of Nerviline and sweet oil and rubbed the mixture on the throat and chest three times a day and you would scarcely believe the way that horse picked up. Nerviline cured him. I also have used Nerviline for colic in horses and cows, and earnestly recommend it to every man that is raising stock."

NERVILINE CURES QUICKLY

For strains, sprains, swellings, colic, distemper, coughs and colds, no liniment will prove so efficacious in the stable as "Nerviline"—it's good for man or beast, for internal or external use. Wherever there is pain, Nerviline will cure it. Refuse substitutes. Large bottles 25 c., five for $1.00, at all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co'y, Kingston, Ont. 9

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26, 1909.

CANADA AND THE BRITISH MARKET.

Canada's present trade with the Mother Country, notwithstanding the fact that we secure only a small share of the British market.

In the twelve months ending May of this year, Britain imported 20,000,000 cwt. of barley—none of which was supplied by Canada, but half was bought in Russia.

Britain imported 14,000,000 cwt. of oats—Canada supplying only 18,000, as against Russia's 4,500,000.

Britain bought 86,000,000, the United States 13,000,000, and Aregentina 27,000,000.

Of wheat flour, Britain bought 11,000,000 cwt. Canada supplied 1,771,000, and the United States 7,750,000.

Of cured fish, Britain required 1,000,000 cwt. Canada sent 170,000; Norway 185,000, Portugal 132,000 and the United States 206,000.

The British people imported 4,000,000 cwt. of butter, but only 5,000 from Canada, while 1,850,000 came from Denmark, 650,000 from Russia, 40,000 from Germany, and about 600,000 from Australia.

Canada leads in cheese, supplying Britain with 1,526,800 cwt., or two-thirds of the whole requirement.

British imports of bacon are 5,000,000 cwt., of which 890,000 go from Denmark, and a little more than that from the United States.

The figures of Britain's requirements are instructive, and as well full of importance regarding the future of the Dominion. There is hardly any limit to the capacity of the Old Land for absorbing the products of Canada, and even without preferential duties we are certain of favored treatment in the Mother Land.

GATEWAY CITY OF CANADA.

Canada's growth is following along lines made familiar in the development of her neighbor on the south remarks the New York World. Her great trans-continental railway pioneered the way and march of population is following. Her newest enterprise, the Grand Trunk Pacific, is well on the way towards completion. Its through line is practically finished between Winnipeg and Edmonton. The traffic audit office has been transferred from Montreal to Winnipeg, and the Canadian star of empire now halts above that fast-growing city of the Dominion, the Chicago of the Canadian Northwest.

Winnipeg is ambitious with the daring of youth and energy. When the Grand Trunk Pacific finishes its line to Prince Rupert, Winnipeg will be still more in a position to suggest an analogy with Chicago. It is planning its future with intelligence and a reasonable assurance of success. While capitalists look for profitable investment, scientists are not lost sight of in Winnipeg's plans. On Wednesday, June 23, the British Association for the advancement of science met in Winnipeg; incidentally it marked Canada's forty-third year as a nation.

Canadians call Winnipeg the Gateway City of the Northwest, and the title is appropriate. It looks west ward beyond the borders of Manitoba to the prairies of Saskatchewan and Alberta, where millions of fertile acres are awaiting the coming husbandman. In the prosperity of that region Winnipeg will naturally share.

GAS POWER FOR NAVIGATION.

In view of the possibility that large ships may some day be propelled by gas power, an experiment now in progress on the Rhine is worthy of note.

A boat which is employed to tow bigger vessels up and down that river has been provided with two internal combustion engines, each of 500 horse power.

They are operated by means of gas manufactured from brown coal, or lignite, and that material is supplied in the form of briquettes, made by adding some glutinous substance like tar to the pulverized coal and moulding it in blocks of a convenient size.

According to a correspondent of The London Times, the briquettes are delivered on the boat for nine English shillings (about $2.25) a ton.

It is estimated that the cost of briquettes enough to derive a boat of 800 horsepower would be slightly more than 50 cents an hour.

Lignite is inferior in heating qualities to bituminount coal and anthracite, and does not command a ready sale in those parts of the world where it is abundant.

The use of it on the Rhine, however, seems to point to a new sphere of usefulness, for, apparently, no difficulty has been experienced in purifying the gas made from it so that the cylinders of the engine will not clog.

In this respect it is superior to bituminous coal, which still presents embarrassments to those who would to use it for the manufacture of "producer" gas.

Obviously, if it is serviceable in the development of power on the water, it is equally well suited to the work on land. Hence the trial now being given to it on the Rhine deserves watching.

One of the most important advantages which would attend the general use of gas power in navigation is that it would leave the air uncontaminated by smoke.

The towboat which has begun running on the Rhine is provided with a funnel to carry off the waste gases from the engine, but not a particle of smoke is emitted.

A PERFECT DREAM CITY.

London was yesterday a city of gold and green and white. Golden sunshine in the streets and parks, green foliage on every tree upon which the sun shone down, white buildings newly built or newly painted, all clear outlines under a sky of Oriental blue. What dream-city could be more perfect than London on such a day!

Truly it was an unforgettable day—a day on which it is good to be alive, very good to be young when the spring calls to the blood and when perfume steals into the senses; good even to be old and to sun oneself on the memory of other spring days as golden as this.

The London season is beginning. Good words to those who have the leisure and means to play the game, the merry game of the social whirligig, good even to those who are merely lookers-on.

Yesterday the fun had begun. The King was in town, the court was in the capital the servants of society had pulled up the window blinds of town houses and the sun was shining.

So the streets were very full of life at its best and brightest. Down Bond street and Piccadilly—the highways of the lucky ones—there was an endless tide of carriages, and the sun gleamed upon brightly polished panellings, flashed fire from the brass head lamps and metal work of magnificent motor cars, and glistened on the smooth flanks of good horses, which went dashing by as proudly as though there were no such thing as petrol.

Women were in the carriages and walking on the shady side, and one man sighed because he could not wear salmon pink, or Madonna blue, or walk in lilac beauty like these ladies who were the flowers of the London streets. Flowers, literally because all their hats were in full blossom, brought out by this brilliant sunshine, and from the top of an omnibus one looked down upon moving bouquets of roses and daisies and forget-me-nots, as though all the flowers in Kensington Gardens had been plucked as the garlands of England's fair women.

Yet the men did their poor best, yesterday, to do credit to the divine day. Old Bucks had put on white waistcoats, and young bloods in new silk hats—bright and beautiful things—had put yellow gloves upon their hands. The Green Park was a paradise, into which had slunk many poor devils, against whom the gates of this paradise were not closed. These Weary Willies had come out of the slums, for spring called to them also, and they lay, in lazy happiness and seedy clothes, like corpses on the emerald greensward, which was a carpet worthy of Kings.

BIG APPLE CROP.

Extra Ships Placed on Nova Scotia Route to Handle It.

Halifax, August 25.—Last year 510,668 barrels of apples were exported from Halifax, chiefly to London, Liverpool and Glasgow.

This year it is expected that the apple shipments from Halifax will be almost 600,000 barrels. Advices from the Annapolis Valley indicate a good yield of first quality fruit, the only kind exported.

So great has the apple trade become that even the splendid fleet of steamers used in the trade last year has become too small to handle the freight. For this reason several additional steamers are being placed on the trans-Atlantic service by the Furness line.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $60,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $10,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,600 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.

This additional capital will be used to increase the circulation and advertising patronage of THE CIRCLE Magazine and to develop the profitable book publishing enterprises of the Company. No magazine in the world possesses more of the real elements of large business profit and immense usefulness to society than does THE CIRCLE. The magazine itself shows tangible evidence, month by month, of the truth of these statements.

We trust you will join with us—that you will write quickly and reserve five, ten, twenty, fifty or more shares of the Preferred Stock, and so have a part in THE CIRCLE work and THE CIRCLE success. Write at once, if possible, filling out one of the blank forms below.

A FIGHT WITH AN EEL.

Terrific struggle in Aquarium At Detroit.—Three Men With Poles and Nets Fought Slimy and Poisonous Monster in Attempt to Force it Into Tank

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24. — The Aquarium on Belle Isle was the scene of a thrilling life-and-death struggle early this morning between Geraldine, a huge Moray eel, which had escaped from its temporary quarters in the fish commission's car, and three attendants at the aquarium, who attempted to force the seven-foot monster into the tank which had been made ready for it.

Shortly after 2 a.m., it was discovered that Geraldine had succeeded in breaking through the heavy netting which had been used to keep her in the tank, and was loose in the car. The attendants immediately decided to remove her to the aquarium tank, but they did not then realize what a dangerous job was ahead of them.

With its immense head raised high in the air, the great fish resembled nothing so much as a huge boa constrictor. To touch the eel, which is highly poisonous in every part of its slimy body, meant sure death. So the men fought the battle with longpoles to which heavy nets were attached.

It was a desperate battle, and the men knew it. Finally after over half an hour's hard work Geraldine's head was "hooded" with a net and she was pushed and pulled until the immense body fell at last, with a loud splash into its tank, where it will probably remain.

The Moray eel is noted for its pugnaciousness and voraciousness, particularly those coming from the coral reefs of Bermuda. Its greatest defensive weapon is its natural poison.

GIFT TO PRESERVE EDDY HOME.

E. A. Kimball's Will Provides Honor for Christina Science Founder.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Provision to keep "Pleasant View," the home of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the founder of Christian Science, at Concord N. H., in perpetual repair is made in the will of the late Edward A. Kimball, which was filed in the Probate Court yesterday.

A clause in the will states that the copyright, interest and title to the works of Mrs. Eddy, which Kimball purchased, shall go to John Carroll Lathrop of New York provided that the beneficiary will agree that the profits be used to create a trust fund to preserve the Eddy homestead. Among the works enumerated to which Mr. Kimball claimed title was "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures."

Wallace D. Kimball, a son, and Edna Kimball, a daughter, receive $1,000 each by the will and the widow, Mrs. Katherine Kimball, the remainder of the estate, excepting the Eddy works.

PROFESSIONAL DEATH VERIFIER

In Every Coroner's District Will Believe Haunting Fear of Those Afraid of Burial Alive.

London, Aug. 24.—The appointment of a professional verifier of deaths in every coroner's district to remove the haunting fear of being buried alive experienced by many nervous and aged people was one of the interesting suggestions made by Dr. Walter Hadwen in his evidence before the Departmental Committee appointed by the Home Secretary to inquire into the law relating to coroner's inquests.

The establishment of waiting mortuaries where the professional verifier would watch for positive proof on death was another of Dr. Hadwen's propositions. These would be pleasing places, with ornaments and flowers, like those in Munich and Berlin. The evidence he had collected went to show that there was no definite, undeniable proof of death apart from incipient putrefaction. There were instances, Dr. Hadwen told the Committee, of persons who had come to life after they had been placed in the waiting mortuaries.

Curious cases of death counterfeits were narrated by Dr. Hadwen from his own experience. During the Gloucester smallpox epidemic of 1896 a child believed to be dead of confluent smallpox was removed from hospital to the mortuary. Next day a gardener passing by the window of the mortuary heard the cries of the child. The little one was carried back to the ward and recovered!

August time tells on the nerves. But that spiritless, no ambition feeling can be easily and quickly altered by taking what is known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Sheop's Restorative. Within 48 hours after beginning to use the Restorative, improvement will be noticed. Of course full health will not immediately return. The gain, however, will surely follow. And best of all, you will realize and feel your strength returning. Outside influences depress first the "inside nerves" then the stomach, Heart, and Kidneys will usually fail. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Sheop's Restorative, and see how quickly health will be yours again. Sold by all dealers.

UPPER CLASSES OF FRANCE AND RACE SUICIDE PROBLEM

Bertillon Takes Blame From Working People Just Published.

Paris, France, August 23.—Figures compiled by the well known scientist Jacques Bertillon, just published, have entirely upset the oft-repeated statement of optimists on the depopulation question in France to the effect that the rate of increase in the upper classes is quite normal, the decrease being due to the unfavorable economic conditions affecting the lower classes, who are unable to raise large or even modest families.

Mr. Bertillon's figures have been collected during a period of ten years. They show that the average workingman's family consists of "three and one-half children" for Paris and three for the provinces, while taking that part of the population of Paris composed of artists, writers, comptoirs, musicians, professors and persons in easy circumstances devoted to intellectual pursuits, it is discovered that for every 445 men are just 576 children.

If, says Mr. Bertillon, all France imitated the upper classes then before thirty years the population would be reduced one-half. He goes on to say that the secret of the depopulation of the country has thus been at least discovered and that it is not due to race suicide among the lower classes, so-called, nor to the severe conditions of life bearing hardest upon them. It is, he says, due to the self-exterminating conduct of upper classes who, like the kind elsewhere, are ready to preach on this subject, but only for the benefit of other people.

Going further into the details of the matter Mr. Bertillon finds that men of letters, and particularly those in university circles are the worst cases. In the College of France there are 127 children among 138 professors, or not even one per marriage. The artists, including the free classes of literature, show up somewhat better with "a little more than one child per house-hold." Thus the statistician proves that reform must begin with the upper classes instead of with the lower. The rate of mortality is higher among the children of the latter, yet even so at the age of 21 the working class is represented by more children than are the brain workers.

M. Bertillon's report will be presented to the Parliamentary committee on the depopulation at the next session.

COALMEN ARE HERE

Hold Meeting to Discuss Coal Matters Today.

Lindsay, Aug. 24.—A meeting of coal dealers of this district with Mr. Heman, president of the Ontario Coal Assoc tario Coal Association, Mr. Webster, secretary of the same organization, and Mr. Bolton of Buffalo, traveler for the Lehigh Valley Coal Co. The meeting was for the purpose of discussing ways and means of buying coal cheaper, besides other matters of constant interest to coal dealers such as the securing of sufficient freight cars and such like.

It has been thought that if the coal dealers would work mutually, coal could be purchased in large quantities at a cheaper price from the United States companies. The feasibility of this was discussed.

Among those present were: E. Lytle, Oakwood; J. W. Coad, Kirk-W. Grant, Woodville, and coal dealers from Peterborough, Lakefield and many other towns in this vicinity.

BIGAMY CASE.

Woman, Alleging Cruelty, Deserts Her Husband and Marries Again.

Orangeville, Aug. 24.—A bigamy charge before Police Magistrate Pattullo developed some unusual and pathetic features. The accused parties were John Scott, a young Englishman, about 22, and Jane Hazen, about 45. Mrs. Hazen, who is the wife of Christopher Hazen, of Brooton Station, left her husband last December and took a house here wit her two children, a boy, Ernest, aged five, and a girl, Ethel, aged 13. The latter is deaf and cannot talk plainly. Some three weeks not talk plainly. Some three weeks after the woman's departure Scott followed, and as she was destitute, he boarded with her, and has since provided for her and the family, as he was employed in a local factory.

On the 12th of July last the pair went to Brampton and were married at St. Paul's parsonage by Rev. Mr. Chantler. Hazen, who gave his evidence before the magistrate last week, swore he was married at Brussels to his wife, then Jane Billings, 21 years ago, and they had lived happily until Scott appeared on scene. Five children had been born to them, one of whom had died.

Today Mrs. Hazen told a different story. She had ten children, six of whom had died, she alleged, through not being sufficient nourished and the refusal of her husband to provide medical care. Charges of cruelty and neglect were made by the woman. There was no proof of the fact that Scott knew of the previous marriage, and his action in providing for the woman and her children had at least some elements of humanity.

It was decided to allow Mrs. Hazen out on suspended sentence, as she appears to have been more sinned against than sinning in the opinion of the magistrate. The case against Scott will be dealt with later.

American Company Boring at Peterboro Struck Dry Well

The Lindsay Post has been informed that Mr. Dettmas of Waynesburg, Penn., who has been boring for oil and gas in Peterborough, has not been very successful in his operations.

CITY'S FINANCES

Council and Board of Education need more Economy.

Up to the first of August, 1909, the City Council had expended $85,-209.90 of the appropriations or about $19,000 over half. Of this amount the Board of Education has expended $43,000, while their appropriation was $66,000, leaving a balance with which to carry on the work of the schools until January 1st, of only $12,000. The Health Department has already exceeded its appropriation of $1450, by $504.55. The market appropriation has been exceeded by $112.91. The overdraft in the bank on July 31st, 1909, was $32,493.77. It will thus be seen that even greater economy will have to be practiced in the future than in the past in order to make the accounts balances on Dec. 31st next. The laborers have all received duplicate copies of the financial statement for July and they know just where they are at. They know the amount of their uncontrollable expenses, and the other expenditures will have to be cut accordingly as no overdrafts are suggested by the people this year. The Board of Education people also take heed now lest they overstep the mark also.

ALFONSO LOSES POPULARITY.

Queen Victoria, Too, Not in Favor With Populace.

Madrid, Aug. 23.—Empress Eugenie has sent King Alfonso a check for $2,000 for the families of the soldiers of the reserve who have been sent to Melilla, and the Infanta Isabel, the king's aunt, has given a like sum. The king remains here, but is seen very little.

One of the police heads, who is sometimes detailed to guard the king and whose declarations can be relied on, says that the Barcelona and anarchist elements took advantage of the opportunity to pillage, destory and commit excesses of all kinds.

A plan had been laid in Barcelona, with ramifications in every province in Spain, for a general rising on a certain date and the immediate proclaiming of a republic throughout the country. Had this been carried into effect the monarchy certainly would have gone by the board.

The government is afraid that the Barcelona anarchists will take their revenge for the severe punishment meted out. The police have secret information that the control council of anarchists has decreed the death of the king. Premier Maura and Interior Minister La Cierva.

The king has lost in a very great measure the popularity he had, and Queen Victoria has absolutely no hold whatever on the people. Her aloofness, pride and indifference have had a disastrous effect.

THE CANADIAN NAVY.

Where Will Canada Get Her Warships Is Now Being Asked.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 24.—In connection with the reported scheme for a Canadian Navy, the question is being asked as to where the ships will be built. An outlay of many millions will be necessary if the proposal is to be carried out on the line indicated, and shipbuilding concerns in the country are already making enquiries here concerning it.

As far as can be learned, no definite decision on that point has been reached and may not be until such time as the principle of any naval policy is ratified by Parliament. It is thought, however by Parliament. It is thought, however, that the larger cruisers will be built in the old country, but if at all possible, the others will be constructed in Canadian ship yards.

VALUABLE RINGS LOST.

Montreal, Aug. 25.—There is an extraordinary mystery at the Windsor Hotel today regarding the loss by Mrs. Klein, of Chicago, of some very valuable diamonds. A reward of $50 has been offered for the recovery of these valuable rings, a beautiful solitare diamond, an opal and pearl ring, and another opal ring the form of a Maltese cross. It appears that Mrs. Klein went into the ladies' lavatory and removed her rings. When she had completed her toilet she left them on one of the wash stands. When she noticed her loss a few minutes later the rings had disappeared. A search was instituted, the hotel detectives were informed of the loss and everything is being done to promote the speedy recovery of the jewels.

It is understood that Mr. and Mrs. Klein would be willing to give a much higher reward than that offered. The jewels are supposed to be worth abbout $1,000.

The detectives are not sure whether to blame a guest or an employee for taking the rings.

City jewellery and pawnbrokers have been notified.

A DEPENDABLE RESOURCE.

The old stocking fund is a real hero whenever financial trouble threatens. The splendid reserves of the nation's banks are rightly heralded as indicating the great financial sounceas of the country's heart of commerce. The large and growing deposits of the savings banks are cited with pride as being proof of millions of the people. The wide distribution of stocks among great numbers of men and women is acclaimed as evidence that an inspiring confidence abices in the management and integrity of the corporations, and this confidence is but seldom misplaced. But there is another source of national financial strength which is lawerful resource for good in times of stress and emergency—the old stocking fund.

This fund, which disgorges its hoard of accumulated coins and bills—small, large, new, old, silver, gold, even nickels and pennies—is a sturdy part of the foundation upon which is built the dam that stays the flood of disaster and ruin.

This reliable old stocking fund may be in stockings, chests, chimneys, shoes, beds, closets, or whatever be the place to hide the savings, but it confides in the dark days to the call it forth.

In the aggregate this hidden money was a mighty instrument, says the Washington Post, in restoring confidence in the dark days of 1907, panic, when it furnished the cash purchase of securities thrown overboard. Thousands of the folk who lay by for a rainy day or to avail themselves of the opportunity to invest in attractive bargains then came forward with their little piles to absorb in small lots at low prices the securities and properties of the hard-pressed speculator, the embarrassed manipulator or the man who had to have money instead of investments. It was then that the dear old stocking fund was at its best and made its power felt in the land. Yes, and now then that the dear old stocking is called to put on a better and sound basis the finances of the world.

Nations realized to the full in the days of the huge German indemnity what it was to have an old stocking fund, and every nation at some time or other has troubles that draw on the old stocking financiers for first aid to the injured. It is a great and ever dependable resource.

MAD SON IN AUTO DASH.

Wife of Attorney Receives Children in Sensational Manner.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—News that Mrs. [illegible] Wiemers of Highland Park had filed suit for separate maintenance became public yesterday.

The suit was sufficient to stir the suburb, because the Wiemers are prominent there and Mrs. Wiemers' charges were sensational, but when it drove in a borrowed automobile later in the day to the home of her husband in Lake Bluff, used her elder son, Herbert, as a decoy to lure her younger son, Jack, from his father and sped back home with both, High land Park's excitement was intense.

W. F. Wiemers, defendant in the divorce proceedings, is a lawyer and well known in Chicago. The couple separated June 1, when Mr. Wiemer took the two boys, who are 14 and 9 years old, with him to his summer home in Lake Bluff. The mother did not know where they had gone until Herbert stole away from his father, hastened to his mother, and told her that Jack, too, was homesick and wanted her to come and get him.

Mrs. Wiemers told a friend who had an automobile and he accompanied her to Lake Bluff with Herbert. Near the house Herbert alighted. He went to his father's home and whispered to Jack that their mother was waiting. The little fellow hastened with him to the appointed place and alert, to make trouble, despite the fact in a moment was clasped in his mother's arms.

Then they speeded back to High land Park and last night were together there.

Mrs. Wiemers charges in her bill that her husband is an habitual drunkard and extremely and repeatedly cruel. She asks custody of the children, as well as separate maintenance. The master in chencery at Waukegan has issued an injunction which restrains Mr. Weimers from seeking to regain the custody of the children as well as from disposing of any of the property. Service was had on him and to prevent an attempt on his part to regain the children, a deputy sheriff was sent to guard the home of Mrs. Weimers.

"Possession is nine points of the law, so I think I have almost all there is of the law on my side," Mrs Wiemers said last night. "We have been married twenty years and I think that is about long enough for any two persons who are not entirely congenial to live together.

"Mr. Wiemers is a lawyer, but he has not had any clients in three years, and I have had to support both him and the children. His summer home in Lake Bluff is my property. I deeded it to him as trustee to hold for the children. One of the reasons that he and I are not congenial is that I do all and he does nothing to support his family."

Going West.

Messrs. Wilfrid Patterson and Victor Jones will leave on Friday for Edmonton, Alta., where Mr. Patterson intend opening a first-class barber shop. Both young men are well known in the city and popular among a large number of people who join in wishing them every success.

MOUNT JULIAN.

Successful Picnic Last Week Under Auspices of Eden and Holy Trinity Churches.

A very successful and enjoyable picnic was held by Eden and Holy Trinity churches on the 12th of August, in a beautiful maple grove about three-quarters of a mile from Mt. Julian.

An excellent dinner and tea was served by the ladies and appreciated by all, while the ice cream, fruit, candy and lemonade stands were well patronized.

Games and swings were provided for the children, while the young people tripped the light fantastic to the music of the violin ably performed by Mr. Joel Northy.

The Apsley Lodge, Loyal True Blues, No. 74, numbering about 35 members, attended in a body, and after holding a business meeting marched to the music of drum and flute to Mt. Julian and back, after which they favored us with several finenselections.

The W. M., Mr. Wellington McLean deserves credit for his management of the lodge, and the members of it join with him in his efforts to make the Apsley lodge one of the best in the county.

Wewere pleased to have with us besides the ministers of the district, Mr. Garbutt and Mr. Lord, a large number from Apsley, the Rev. A. Hart of St. Mary's parish, Dovercourt road, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. Hull, Mr. and Mrs. J. Reid, Mrs. J. Moore, from Stoney Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bell of Cedar Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart from Mt. Julian, Mr. H. Moore and Mr. J.M. McCracken from Dummer, and several ladies from Viamede.

The entire proceeds amounted to one hundred and twenty-two dollars, and were equally divided after paying expenses, between the two churches.

The footprints of Dyspepsia have been directly traced to the Stomach nerves. When these "inside nerves" fail, indigestion and stomach distress must surely result. For this druggists everywhere are supplying a prescription known as Dr. Shoop" Restorative. First, these tiny inside Stomach, Heart and Kidneys nerves fail. Then gas belching, Heart Palpitation, or failing Kidneys follow. Don't drug the Stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. Strengthen these failing nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative. It is the nerves, not the organs that are calling for help. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment you will realize the gain. A test will tell. Sold by all dealers.

Going Out West.

It will be "all aboard" for the West on Friday of this week. On that day an excursion will be run over the C.P.R. to the Canadian West, and the Peterborough contingent will be a large one. The special train will start at Sharbot Lake and will go right through to Winnipeg. It will leave Peterborough at 1.30 o'clock, and a C.P.R. official stated yesterday that it was expected that one hundred and fifty would board the train here for the trip to the West. Many of those who are going are from the country or around the city. Towards the end of the week the harvesting in this locality will be pretty well over, and many of the young men are going to the western provinces to assist in the threshing operations there.

Don't drug the stomach, or stimulate the Heart or Kidneys. That is wrong. It is the weak nerves that are crying out for help. Vitalize these weak inside controlling nerves with Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and see how quickly good health will come to you again. Test it and see. Sold by all dealers.

A HARASSING QUESTION.

What Is the Business Woman to Wear in Hot Weather?

The question of midsummer wearing apparel for the business woman is not an easy one.

In the first place, she wants to be cool in summer, but in any case she must be neat. And if she is neat she will at least look cool, a thing that she would not do were she ever so thinly clad in apparel that was other than neat.

As it grows warmer it is a great temptation for the business woman, especially if she is rather new in the field, to resort to some of the cool, dainty frocks that suggest themselves for July and August wear. But if she has been a business woman long enough to understand the situation she knows that frills and furbelows have no place for her. She also knows that they are not essential to feminine charm and that even in the hottest weather perfect tailoring and immaculate cleanliness will do as much toward making her look and even feel cool as sash ribbons and lacy garnitures.

But just what is the business woman to wear in hot weather?

Must she stick to the cloth skirt and white waist of fall and winter? Not necessarily. There are days when she doesn't want to think of a cloth skirt. In this case if she still wishes to retain the two piece suit arrangement it would pay her to have a coat and skirt of linen or cotton poplin in tan or blue.

But this is not wholly satisfactory, as it necessitates the purchase of a coat which is not entirely suitable for wear with other garments, and the coat must be pressed often to keep it in trim. Besides this, the skirt will require more frequent laundering than the coat, and even with the best material this is sure to make a difference in the appearance of the two garments.

This season affords a peculiarly fortunate solution to the dress problem of the business girl in the smart one piece tailored dress. It is, if strictly tailored, entirely proper for wear on the street without a coat, while the shirt waist and skirt seem to suggest the presence of a coat like the skirt. Then, too, the plainly made one piece dress is perfectly suitable for business wear and can be carried out in almost any material. Even a gingham in shepherd's check of black and white has a smart tailored look, though the more common materials are cotton poplin, racket cloth, rep or linen. The last, however, is only suitable for the woman with an unlimited amount of money for laundry and pressing.

The final advantage of the one piece dress is that it is quickly adjusted, no tiresome fussing with belt, collar and cuff links, but on and fastened up in a minute.

To add to this a skirt of some lightweight material, such as mohair or lightweight suiting, will provide an alternate costume for wear with shirt waists.

It takes a little courage, to be sure, but the wise business girl has learned that even in hot weather she must not yield to the temptation of wearing those soft, rumply feminine looking things. And, too, if she is wise and has a position of any responsibility or importance she will go just a little easy on this "Dutch neck" craze and will not despise the starched collar altogether.

BATHING HINTS.

A little good toilet water or cologne poured into a bath is delightful in its effects.

When you feel exhausted after bathing hunt for the cause. The water may be too hot or too cold. You may be staying in it too long or bathing when too tired. A cup of hot milk is a great pick-me-up after a hot bath.

Don't rush immediately into the cold air after a hot bath, both for the sake of your skin and to prevent colds. Dashing with water as cold as you can stand it will make an early outdoor trip safe after the pores are opened by the hot water.

If we cannot copy the old time women, with their aromatic baths, there are many things which can be used in the water to soften it and make it more refreshing. Among these is a lemon cut in slices and placed in the bath ten minutes before using. A little borax will also soften the water, or a bag about five inches square filled with half bran and half oatmeal.

Excels Mere Man as Linguist.

Ernestine Gregory has won the honor of being the first woman to pass the examination in oriental languages in the University of Berlin. She is a writer on a Berlin newspaper, and a professorship in one of the German universities has been offered her. She is looked upon as one of the first linguists in Europe. She passed in oriental languages with high honors. Three months ago she stood first in an examination in the university in Russian language and literature. She also is proficient in French, English and Spanish.

Nails Must Not Glitter.

A glittering polish on the nails is no longer approved by Mme. Grundy, who requires at the moment a gloss acquired in a most natural and simple manner. Nails to be pretty should always be pink and bright, a condition obtained by rubbing them vigorously against the side of the hand. It has been discovered that the warmth and moisture of the flesh makes an ideal polisher, while the brisk rubbing gives the desired pink glow.

"Sausages Grown Here."

One of the natural curiosities of South Msahonaland is a "German-sausage-tree." It bears deep-crimson flowers, 2 inches long, in blazing bunches of twelve; but when the tree fruits into fat, substantial, sausage-like pods, there remain no leaves, and it looks like a sausage larder indeed. These beans are 20 inches long, and 12 inches in girth, and are beloved of the native tribe of Shangaans and baboons. But the tribe of the Karenga are a very superior people, and would never deign to eat them. There can be no reason for this, as, at least, no one can accuse these "sausages" of being connected in any way with dogs or cats!

KIPLING SEES DISASTER.

Predicts Trouble as a Result of Present Social Tendencies.

National disaster from present-day tendencies of the National Government is prophesied in a long poem by Rudyard Kipling, which the Morning Post prints.

Describing the citizens of an imaginary state, "The City of Brass," he tells how they started to "decree a new earth at a birth without labor or sorrow."

Their administrative ideas are thus described:

They said: "Who has hate in the soul?
Who has envied his neighbor?
Let him arise and control both that man and his labor."
They said: "Who is eaten by sloth?
Whose unthrift has destroyed him?
He shall levy a tribute from all because none have employed him."
They say: "Who has toiled? Who hath striven and gathered possession?
Let him be spoiled; he hath given full proof of transgression."

They razed their ramparts to convert them into pleasure grounds, encouraged rebellion in their colonies, flung away the Imperial possessions their forefathers gained, scouted faith and endeavor, and derided the idea of restraint.

Nemesis comes when they are steeped in self-satisfaction in the form of a hostile host, and the poem concludes:

The eaters of other men's bread, the exempted from hardship,
For the hate they had taught through the State brought the State no defender,
And it passed from the roll of the nations in headlong surrender."

A Fading Art.

The art of carving is disappearing among the Maoris of New Zealand. There is no demand for war canoes now, except from world's fairs and Paris expositions. In the olden days, the chief's house, the storehouse, and the posts of the village stockade were ornamented with carved figures. But the rainy climate of the country and other causes have been fatal to these monuments. One must go to the museums to see specimens of this fading art.

The "haka" is the war dance or call to arms of old Maoriland. Stripped to the waist, the men arrange themselves in two files and begin to chant in a low tone, a woman giving them the time. They turn right and left, stamping and waving their arms, till they work themselves up to a prodigious pitch of fury expressed by rolling eyeballs and deafening roars. Standing to one side, the woman "leader" urges them on to the climax. They give one thundering stamp, and thrust out their tongues as far as they can. This was the supreme act of defiance to the foe. In the olden days it was no light matter to attend a "haka." Then each warrior brandished a heavy greenstone club, and once heated to the pointed of battle frenzy, would hardly cool down, even at a play "haka," without clubbing somebody just to keep his hand in practice.

His Lucky Donkey.

The costermonger's love for his donkey was demonstrated recently at the People's Palace, Mile End road, London. Nearly 200 donkeys, carefully groomed, with their owners standing by them in their Sunday best, were exhibited under the auspices of Our Dumb Friends' League.

Many of the costermongers declared that they would not part with their little animals for untold gold. "Here's the foundation of all my little fortune," said William Witt, an East End coal dealer, as he stroked his sturdy prize winner, Lazy Lightning. "Five years ago I was dead broke; I borrowed 30 shillings to buy my little pal here"—patting the donkey again.

"First my donkey carried coal from street to street on a barrow; but gradually my trade grew. Now I've got three little shops, and a farm out in the country. But it was the donkey that turned my luck and put me on the right road. Out at the farm there's a nice green field, with shady trees in it. As soon as this show's over that's where my donkey's going, to end his days just doing nothing but enjoy the green grass—and rest."

Many prizes were awarded to the best-groomed donkeys. A challenge cup and a set of harness, given by the Queen, were won by Jenny, a smart little donkey that pulls the barrow of a wood and coke hawker.

Cinematograph in Central Africa.

There seems to be no limit to the ramifications of modern inventions. No sooner does anything establish itself in the favor of the public than it bobs up serenely everywhere. Who would have thought, for instance, that the cinematograph, popular and entertaining as it is, would have appealed to the wild and woolly native of Central Africa? Yet a letter from the office of Superintendent of Buildings at Zoomba, Nyassaland, assures me that this is so. The venture is successful, too. Mr. Hackett, of Frome Somerset, is the intrepid pioneer, and the letter I have received states that "his exhibition has attracted the natives by the thousand." They call Mr. Hackett the "witch doctor," and he is still proceeding into the interior, "with a convoy of 40 Kaffirs to carry provisions, outfit, etc. —London Answers.

Historic House for Sale.

Smallfield Place, Burstow, England, which is associated with the life history of Anne Boleyn, is to be sold by auction by Messrs. Knight, Frank & Hutley. The house is considered to be the most perfect example of domestic architecture in Surrey. Smallfield was given by Lord Burghurst to John de Burstow as an acknowledgment for assistance received from him when thrown from his horse in the French war in the reign of Edward III. The "priests' hole" is still there, and the house is in a wonderful state of preservation.

Looking For Jobs.

No less than 2,500 applications were received for thirteen vacancies under the Surrey (Eng.) County Council the other day.

Staterooms and Portholes.

An experienced traveler warns the uninitiated against paying from $5 to $50 extra for an outside stateroom on ocean liners. The inside rooms she has found to be perfectly comfortable and perfectly ventilated, and the portholes in the outside ones she considers a doubtful advantage. "They are kept locked," she says, "most of the time unless the weather is very pleasant, and even in calm weather they sometimes ship a deluge of salt water. Dirty water, too, swept from a deck above by the cleaners, may pour into a porthole of a room below, and the noise from the deck is annoying." Why, then should one pay extra for a porthole?"

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

British Force Goes Into Wilds of Northern Nigeria.

Details of the expedition lately concluded by the southern Nigerian Government, by which some 5,000 square miles of hitherto unknown and unadministered country in the north and on the borders of Northern Nigeria have been brought under effective control, have been received by Reuter's Agency.

These operations, which were carried out among tribes who for the most part had never previously seen a white man, proved entirely successful, and were so managed that there was practically no serious fighting. They began early in November last, and only concluded in the middle of April.

The British force consisted of 700 men of the southern Nigeria Regiment, under the command of Colonel Trenchard, who had with him thirty officers, six Maxims and 700 carriers.

The Yala people, in whose country the columns remained for a month, gave a good deal of trouble. When their villages were entered they were found to be deserted, the women and live stock having been removed. The men meanwhile had formed bush camps in the open yam fields, where they could see the approach of the British, and had also hidden in the branches of trees scouts, whose duty it was to fire signal guns.

The people then took to their heels and encamped elsewhere, but fired on the column when they were in what they regarded as a tight corner. This tribe, like most of those encountered, was armed with flint locks and carried poisoned arrows, but, fortunately, the country was fairly open and the aim not very accurate.

After some weeks of this kind of thing the Yala came in, but declined to give up their arms.

In places the natives, hearing of the approach of a large force, dug pits and planted stakes to prevent their progress. What little hostility there was occurred during the earlier part of the operations in the Okpoto country and among the northern Ibo tribes.

Colonel Trenchard's force started in two columns—one from the Niger and one from the Cross River—with instructions to make for an unknown spot marked X, the two afterward joining at Ikem, where the first base camp was formed. From this base small columns were sent out in various directions, each being responsible for a definite district, which was to be mapped, and where the officers' duty was to get into touch with the natives and to show them how to make good roads.

In each case the commanding officer of the column summoned the local chief and explained the Government terms, emphasizing the fact that all human sacrifices must stop, that good roads must be made, and that a British commissioner would be appointed, who would settle all disputes.

On these occasions there were impressive gatherings of thousands of natives in many cases cannibals, and for the most part naked, or practically so. They did not show undue delight at the advent of the British, and, as a rule, silently listened to the recital of the Government terms, and then slowly dispersed.

The various columns report that they found far less human sacrifice and juju rites in the hitherto unknown north than among the tribes of the delta, and, on the whole, the people were of a better physical type. Several juju places were seen, and a big centre was destroyed. It was impossible to discover the nature of the juju rites practiced, but in the vicinity of one big juju house discovered in a bush clearing there was found a good deal of blood—whether human or not was not ascertained.

Australian Woman Becomes Hindu.

A remarkable ceremony took place at Lucknow, India when Miss Thomson, a pretty young Australian woman, who is to be married to a Bengali barrister, formally renounced Christianity and embraced Hinduism as practiced by the Ayra Samajists.

The ceremony took place in the courtyard of the rajah of Vizianagram's residence, and was watched by a large crowd of natives.

Miss Thomson wore native costume, with a pale blue "sari," bespangled with gold, and heavy gold bangles on her arms. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which lasted more than an hour, she almost fainted.

The convert's reception by the Ayra Samajists was the customary "purification" by fire and water. Miss Thomson answered the questions of the Hindu priest in a low voice, ceremonially washed her hands and head and poured a spoonful of oil on a sandal-wood fire. She then received a Hindu name.

Too Many Novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in an address read for her at the opening of a free library at Kendal, said that people who read nothing else but novels never properly appreciated them. Novels were the jam of literature, and all properly conducted persons should begin their meal with bread and butter. Writers of novels wanted readers to be a little hungry for them—not to bring to them a mind full of the debris of a thousand plots—and be proof against their little arts. In the interests of her own craft, she urged all who might use the new library to venture out on the broad seas of literature, to be hardy and courageous, full of curiosity and sympathy, and ready to take trouble with a tough subject and a long book.

The Lost Repeater.

When monsieur—the first monsieur at the court of Louis XIV.—discovered at his levee that his watch had been stolen, presumably by one of his valets, he finished dressing hastily and, addressing them all, said: "Gentlemen, the watch strikes. Let us separate as quickly as we can." What a tact and finish were here!

The spirit of monsieur was admirably caught by the French gentleman of the time who, attacked by robbers at five o'clock in the afternoon, simply observed, "Sirs, you have opened very early to-day."—Cornhill Magazine.

IF SICK--WHY PAY

Unless Health First Returns.

Here is what should and can be done!

Now you would not willingly pay for food that was worthless—would you?

Then why pay for medicine until that medicine first proves to you its actual worth?

Positively knowing what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do for the sick, I say to all "don't pay unless health first returns". And I back my Restorative with a signed and sealed 30 day "No help, No pay" contract.

I positively pledge to the sick everywhere that "Dr. Shoop's Restorative is absolutely free if it fails". Let others do the same or else pass these prescriptions by.

If you need more strength, more vitality, more vigor or more vim, use my Restorative a few days and note the immediate improvement.

When the Stomach, Heart, or Kidneys go wrong, then test Dr. Shoop's Restorative. I do not claim the Stomach nor stimulate the Heart or Kidneys, for that is wrong. Years ago I conceived my present scientific idea in medicine. The books believe will best tell you how I am succeeding.

These books also tell of a "key hidden in the nerves," no larger than a silken thread. They tell how that nerve, until it fails, actually gives to the Heart its power. Its tone. Its never-ceasing action or impulse.

These books will open up new and helpful ideas to those who are not well. They tell how the Stomach, and Kidneys each have their "inside" or power nerves. They tell how the Restorative was especially made to reach and revitalize these weak or failing inside nerves. All of these things tell why I am able to say, "It is free if it fails".

This is why I say "take no chance on a medicine whose maker dare not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer".

So write me today for the order.

I have appointed honest and responsible druggists in nearly every community to focus my medicines to the sick.

But write me first for the order.

All druggists sell Dr. Shoop's Restorative, but all are not authorized to give the 30 day test.

So drop me a line please—and thus save disappointment and delays. Tell me also which book you need.

A postal will do.

Besides, you are free to consult me as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost.

Perhaps a word or two from me will close up some personal matter. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal advice plan. My best effort is saved worth your simple request. So write now while you have it fresh in mind, for tomorrow never comes. Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis.

Plums and Peaches Cheap.

"Plums and peaches will be cheaper and more plentiful this year," said a prominent fruit merchant. The present situation is very encouraging from the consumer's standpoint and the outlook points to an abundance of the small fruits that are now coming in. Early peaches have arrived and are selling at from 25 to 65 cents a basket. They are are not as fine a preserving peach as those which will soon be received, but they are of fair quality. Plums are plentiful and at present may be purchased for as good a price as will be offered this season. The grocers and fruiters are asking from 35 to 50 cents a basket. It is a little early for gage and they are coming in and promise to be cheap. Consumers know by experience whether a policy of delay is a good method for buying fruit, but the salesmen state that if the housekeepers follow their advice they will not go far astray. A grocery or fruit store that has won the confidence of the people will continue to deal with them in a straightforward manner, and it may be taken for granted that if the proprietor states that the time is advantageous for buying fruit no mistake will be made by following his advice. The fruit season is now coming to its own and there will undoubtedly be a big business carried on while it lasts in Peterborough.

Peterborough is to have another business college. It will open on the 7th of September, and the principal and proprietor will be Mr. A. P. Gibbon of Woodstock. He has been in the city for the past few days looking over the field and has come to the conclusion that there is a good opening here for an institution of the kind he will establish. Mr. Gibbon who is an auditor and accountant, has had an extensive experience in business college teaching, being the proprietor of the Woodstock Busines College. He is also an alderman of the city of Woodstock. He has been fortunate in securing an excellent location for his college here, fuller particulars of which will be given when Mr. Gibbon returns to Peterborough, the first of next week. The teaching staff for the new institution will be brought from Woodstock.

Sleep-Walking Feats

finished and he would wake in the morning to find only a fragment on his desk.

A friend of his, who relates the clergyman's adventures in somnambulism, frequently occupied the same room with him. While apparently sleeping quietly the young minister would get up with all the precision of arising for the day, go to his desk get out paper and pen and go to work on a sermon. When he had finished a page he would read it alond—if one can apply the term to an action done without the aid of sight. When a word or a phrase displeased him he wrote the necessary corrections with great exactness.

Two young men, fellow clerks in a wholesale establishment on Washington avenue, in St. Louis, roomed together in a house in West Belle place. One of them was a somnambulist since early boyhood, and had warned his friend not to be alarmed if he sometimes walked in his sleep, as he had never been known to do anything extraordinary.

For some time his somnambulistic antics amused his friend, even if it occasiodally disturbed his rest. But one night the whole house was disturbed by the manifestation of a deed of heroism on the part of the young sleep-walker.

It was in the middle of winter. The somnambulist evidently imagined that he was walking along the levee when he saw a child fall into the river. The severity of the weather did not prevent him from desiring to save the child, and he threw himself on the bed in a posture of swimming, went through all the motions and when wellnigh fatigued by his exertions and the chilling water he felt a bundle or bedclothes. These he took to be the body of the child, and clutching them with one hand he swam furiously with the other to regain the bank of the imaginary river.

Finally he deposited the bundle of clothes on a place which he evidently determined to be dry land, and rose shivering and with chattering teeth as though he had emerged from icy water.

He told the "bystanders"—only his roommate was present—that he was frozen, and his blood was turned to ice and that he would die of cold. He demanded a drink of whisky in order to restore his vitality. His friend had none and substituted a glass of water, which the somnambulist detected instantly. He grew angry and peremptorily demanded the whisky, meanwhile apparently suffering terribly from the cold.

By this time other members of the house-hold were aroused and one was found who had whisky, and a glass of it was handed the life-saver. He gulped the fiery fluid down without a grimace and remarked that he felt much better. But he did not awake, and, returning to bed, slept soundly for the rest of the night.

One of the most remarkable phenomenal of somnambulism is the fact that darkness, which is an obstacle to sight when the victim is awake, is no impediment at all when in a state of sleep-walking. A curious instance of this is related about a sleep-walker who would arise, light a lamp and make an examination of his house to see that all the doors and windows were locked.

BOTTLE AS LAMP

When a bottle was substituted for the lamp he went about his occupation in the dark with the same sureness as he did with the lighted lamp, and would then put out the imaginary light by blowing down the neck of the bottle and retire to bed to sleep soundly.

A gentleman in St. Louis tells his friends of the performances of his wife, who is a somnambulist, who acts as though she saw in rooms perfectly dark when she has a fit of sleep-walking.

On one occasion she went into a dark closet and, opening a trunk, began to inspect its contenants. She had packed it before retiring a few hours previous preparatory to going away on a visit the next day. Evidently she was worried with the belief that the clothes had not been perfectly sorted before packing, although this had been done.

Muttering and with impatience, she lifted the clothes out of the trunk by the armful and cast them in a heap on the floor. Then she proceeded to classify them, putting the stockings together, arranging the handkerchiefs in neat piles, and so on with all the garments, without making one mistake and without the possibility of being assisted by sufficient light for ordinary eyesight.

Out in the country recently occurred a case of somnambuliam that was due entirely to nervous reflex. Carpenters had been at work for two days reshingling the house. The daughter of the owner, who is of a nervous temperament, had been annoyed by the constant tapping of their hammers on the roof and had fervently expressed the wish that they would finish their business and be gone.

The second night after the work of shingling began the girl's father heard the bang shining brightly and when he went outside and looked up at the roof he saw his daughter sitting in a perilous position, nailing shingles with feverish haste.

Evidently she was in a hurry to have the work done, and the idea had so possessed her in her waking hours that it became manifest to her in her subconscious mind and induced her to arise in her sleep and continue the work.

Her father climbed the ladder to her side and gently led her to the ground and to bed, without waking her, and in the morning she had no recollection whatever of her adventure.

BEAUTY OF ASHBURNHAM.

The former "Scotch Village" and later on "Ashburnham," is the old part of the present municipality of Peterborough. In "those days" the village of Peterborough (see Scott's Plains) was in touch with Cobourg, Port Hope not being reached by water was visited by the back country on foot only. Times were always expected to improve on the opening of navigation—down the river Otona bee. The beautiful house and ground of Mr. Lundy have retained their place name, "Verulam House," the name of the residence of Rev. Mr. Dunsford, situated there long ago, who in all probability brought it down from Verulam, Sturgeon Lake, to which he had come "out" from England. The lake is in full view of the greater part of the village and from the heights on the north-east side known as Armour's hill, the view is splendid. But it is in the prettiness of the many villas that consists. They are numerous and shapely with trim, well-kept lawns and an abundance of flowers. The former village is a clean, prosperous and beautiful quarter of the city of Peterborough, to which it has become reconciled after a long period of coyness and disdain. The streets and walks are in keeping with the general trimness of the "suburb." Some day, no doubt, the artistic St. Joseph's Hospital building will be surrounded by more ambitiously kept grounds. At the present the needs of the sick and poor are necessarily the only consideration.

St. Luke's is finely situated and is dear to the hearts of the many Anglicans in that quarter. Possibly St. Mark's will some day occupy a site more in keeping with its importance, but takes all in all, Ashburnham is a lovely part of the city. The loss of the great willows on the west side of the old Rogers homestead, it is hoped, will be made up by their regrowth before long. The flowing stream in the shadow of the big willows was formerly one of the beauty spots of the village.

Miss Margaret Heffernan has returned home after an enjoyable holiday at South Beach and Clear Lake.

Canada will Build Her Own Warships

A Shipyard will be Built for This Purpose—Will Borrow Two Cruisers from Great Britain

(Special to The Times.)

London, Aug. 26.—The Canadian Associated Press learns on good authority that two high-class cruisers are to be loaned to Canada by Great Britain, one for the Pacific and the other for the Atlantic. These ships will require refitting and some alterations which can be made on this side at the expense of Canada. Officers for the vessels will also have to be loaned to Canada and paid by her.

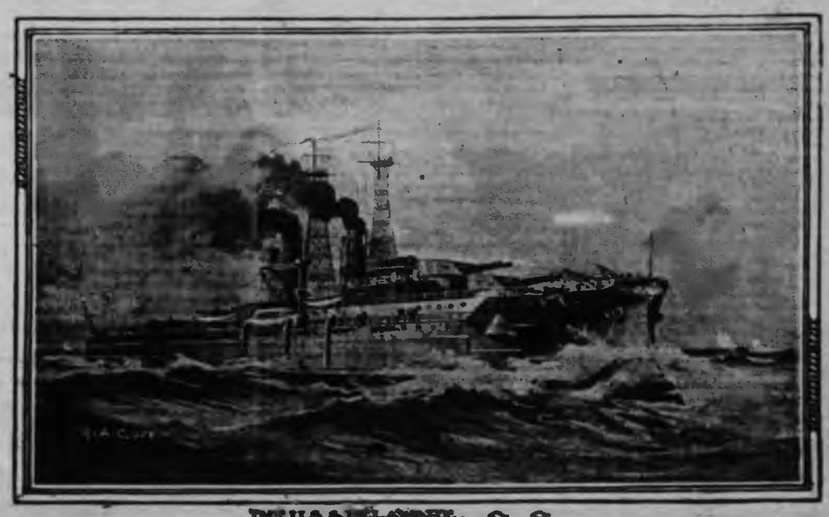
When Canada starts to build warships, which it is understood will be of the British type they will be built in Canada. A representative of a leading shipbuilding firm will shortly proceed to the Dominion to select a site for a shipyard.

Regarding a site for a shipyard on the Pacific, a prominent naval expert, when asked his opinion by a Canadian official, replied that Vancouver was more suitable than Esquimalt, thought it might be necessary to have a dock at the latter place.

The Canadian Associated Press further understands that the idea of having submarines in the St. Lawrence and on the Pacific coast has been suggested. The suggestion has been received with some favor.

London, Aug. 26.—Today Premier Asquith stated in the House of Commons that it had been arranged at the Imperial Defence Conference to so organize the military forces of the Crown as to preserve complete autonomy for each Dominion, while allowing of assistance in the defence of the Empire by coming into one homogeneous Imperial army. Replying to a member, Mr. Asquith said the resolutions of the conference had been submitted to the various governments before they were binding. The South African delegates did not feel in a position to submit the problems for naval or military defence, or approve any proposal arrived at by the Conference until the Union of South Africa had been accomplished.

The United States Building Warships



THE DELAWARE.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 26.—In dry dock at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, with all of her big guns mounted and equipment partly installed, the 20,000 ton battle ship, the Delaware, the first American Dreadnought, is being prepared for her preliminary trials.

The construction of this giant fighting machine, at present the most formidable afloat in American waters, promises to establish a new world's record for building ships of heavy tonnage. To say the least the American record is being beaten, as on August 1, the date of the last report to the Navy Department, the Delaware was 91.8 per cent. completed.

The contract for the ship was signed August 6, 1907, the keel laid November 11 of the same year, the launching occurred February 6, 1909, and today the Delaware is almost in condition to be turned over to government.

The Election Protest in West Peterboro'

Mr. Burnham's Refusal to be Examined Results in Application to Postpone Trial

A Notice was served this morning that a Motion would be made on behalf of the Hon. J. R. Stratton before the Hon. Mr. Justice McMahon and the Hon. Mr. Justice Magee, the Judges appointed for the trial of the Petition in the West Peterborough Protest at Osgoode Hall, Toronto on Thursday the 2nd day of September next for an Order that the trial of the Petition and Cross Petition be postponed until such time and place as the Judges shall deem proper under the circumstances upon the following among other grounds.

That Mr. J. H. Burnham refused to answer certain questions that were asked him on his examination on the 30th of June last and that he also failed to produce on such examination certain books, papers, vouchers and receipts showing the expenditure of other moneys and such examination was adjourned to the 6th day of July to enable Mr. Burnham to produce his cheques and papers.

That Mr. Burnham refused to submit to examination and produce his documents and papers on the 6th of July last on the ground that he claimed that July and August were legal holidays and that he was not bound to do so notwithstanding that it was expressly pointed out that it would prejudice Mr. Stratton in his preparation for the trial of the Petition on the 7th of September.

A Motion was thereupon immediately made on behalf of Mr. Stratton to compel Mr. Burnham to attend upon his examination, answer the questions and produce his books and documents and this Motion was returnable at Osgoode Hall, on the 12th of July, last.

Upon the hearing of this Motion Mr. Burnham's Solicitors applied for an adjournment thereof until the 20th of July last and Mr. Stratton's solicitors opposed such adjournment on the grounds that if he could not get Mr. Burnham examined it would prejudice a fair trial of the action Journed.

Upon the hearing of the adjourned Motion Mr. Burnham's solicitors again applied for a further adjournment until the 23rd of July last which application was opposed by Mr. Stratton's solicitors. The further adjournment was granted.

Again upon the hearing of the adjourned Motion on the 23rd of July last Mr. Burnham's solicitors again applied for a further enlargement until July 26th last which adjournment was again opposed by Mr. Stratton's solicitors upon the ground that if the trial were to take place on the 7th of September these constant enlargements would prejudice a fair trial of the action and that the granting of these requests would result in the adjournment of the trial.

Finally the Motion was heard on the 20th of July, argument took place before the Hon. Mr. Justice Magee and he reserved Judgment and has not yet delivered judgment.

On or about the 6th of July last a Notice of Motion was made returnable on the 13th of July at Osgoode Hall on behalf of Mr. Stratton to compel Mr. Burnham to furnish better particulars of the time and place when and where he alleges that the violations of the Election Act took place and to give the names of the parties that he charges so that they would be in a position to meet them at the trial and would have an opportunity to subpoena their witnesses to answer the charges and that the particulars furnished by Mr. Burnham were vague and indefinite and if better particulars could not be given they should be struck out altogether.

That upon the hearing of this Motion for better particulars on the 23th of July Mr. Burnham's solicitors applied for an adjournment thereof oo the 20th of July and Mr. Stratton's solicitors opposed the adjournment upon the ground that if it were granted that he would not have time to investigate the charges before the date fixed for the trial of the Petition on the 7th of September. The enlargement at Mr. Burnham's request was granted.

That upon the hearing of this adjourned Motion for better particulars on the 20th of July, Mr. Burnham's solicitors, again applied for a further enlargement until the 23rd which adjournment was again opposed by Mr. Stratton's solicitors.

Finally the Motion for better particulars was heard at Osgoode Hall before the Hon. Mr. Justice Magee on the 23rd of July and Judgment was reserved and Judgment has not yet been delivered.

That every adjournment of these two Motions has been made at the request of Mr. Burnham and his Solicitors and have been vigorously opposed by Mr. Stratton and his solicitors and hence Mr. Stratton says that under the circumstances and in view of the number of charges that are made against him and others in the indefinite particulars furnished it is impossible to prepare for the trial of the Petition on the 7th of September without having a full and complete examination of Mr. Burnham as he is entitled to under the election Act so as to ascertain the grounds upon which Mr. Burnham makes his charges and to ascertain the names of parties he charges at the time and place when and where the alleged offences were committed.

Flies Farther and Faster than Any Other Aeroplane

(Special to The Times.)

Betheny Aviation Field, Rheims, Aug. 26.—In his second attempt made this afternoon, Hubert Latham, the French aviator, who twice fell into the English channel, broke the world's record for time and distance. He used a monoplane.

Betheny Aviation Field, Rheims, Aug. 26.—The fifth day of aviation week was ushered in with ideal weather conditions. The light airs and overcast sky brought the flyers out early and before noon no less than a dozen machines, like huge gulls, were circling above the plain.

The program today includes the continuation of the trials for the Grand Prix de la Champagne, the endurance test, the lap event, the speed event, a race between dirigible balloons, and a landing competition for spherical balloons.

Latham, in a beautiful monoplane, was the first aviator to get away. He announced his intention to make genuine effort to beat Paulham's great record for the endurance test,

Norwood Inquest was Resumed and Result of Postmortem Heard

Norwood, Aug. 26.—The inquest into the death of Thomas Willough. by and his daughter Stella, was resumed here today at one o'clock before Coroner Grey, when the balance of the evidence was taken. The first witness was Mrs. Ruttan of Dummer who told the story of her visit to the Willoughby home on the day of the tragedy. After she saw what had happened she went to Mr. Mitchell's and gave the alarm and then on towards Norwood, meeting several people on the road to whom she told the story. She also sent for the doctor. There was nothing new in her testimony.

Gordon B aas of Dummer, was called. He told of meeting Mrs. Ruttan and Mrs. Willoughby and going into the house and saw Willoughby and the little girl lying in the parlor apparently dead. He said Mrs. Willoughby asked what had happened and the little girl said, "Papa has shot Stella."

Clarence Sampson, brother of Mrs Willoughby, told of Willoughby having complained of ill-health, and his sister told him that Dr. Ford had treated him for heart trouble.

The next witness was Dr. Sutton. He said he and Dr. Pettigrew had performed a post-mortem on the bodies of father and daughter. The girl's death was caused by her heart being ruptured. The upper lobe of the left lung was torn and the fourth rib was fractured The heart was ruptured by some projectile and torn to piece. No shot was found in the girl's body. The wound might have been caused by gun shot at close range, probably about 30 inches.

The stomach, liver, gall and bladder of Willoughby was sent to Toronto for analysis.

While there was no evidence submitted to this effect it is understood that there were no traces of poison in the stomach, although the doctors who performed the post-mortem only made a superficial examination of this organ and nothing definite will be known until the Provincial analysists report is furnished.

Dr. Ford said that Willoughby had come to him for treatment. He had been suffering from chronic indigestion and had no organic ailment of the heart. Willoughby's heart trouble, the doctor judged, would probably be caused by mental worry and depression.

This concluded the evidence and the inquest was adjourned until Tuesday, Sept. 7th, at 1 o'clock in Norwood's Council Chamber.

Plunged a Knife Into Her Husband's Breast

After Husband's Futile Attempt to Shoot Her With a Revolver— Mad With Jealousy.

New York, Adg. 26.—Mad with jealousy, Lagi Crisanti, fifty years old, living on the top story of a five-story tenement house at No. 171 Avenue A., seized a revolver, levelled it at his wife, Augusta, 45 years old, and told her that he was about to kill her.

As he did so their son Alfred, 18 years old, sprang upon him, and knocked the weapon from his hand, and at the same moment Mrs. Crisantf caught up a knife and plunged it into her husband's breast. The blade penetrated the heart and he fell dead, while the son, who had saved her life, caught her in his arms and three other little children cowered screaming in a corner of the room.

Merchants Not Satisfied.

several of the merchants of the city who have been closing their places of business on Thursday afternoon, that there should be a better spirit shown by the other members of the Retail Merchants' Association.

There is only a comparatively small number of stores close for the half holiday during the months of July and August, and to a visitor to the city it must be quite apparent that there is a lack of harmony existing among the merchants. Still it is only a matter for those interested in to settle themselves, and probably next year different arrangements will be made.

All Peace and Harmony During the Chief's Absence.

During the absence of Chief Howard to the convention at Grand Rapids the firemen under acting Chief Grange did remarkably well. Everything was peace and harmony, and everyone tried to make things as pleasant and agreeable as possible. Not a single complaint was made. The chief was greatly pleased upon his return to get such a good report and the men are to be commended.

OBITUARY

Yesterday morning at Nicholls hospital, Mrs. Edward Green of 326 Water street, passed away after being confined in the hospital for the past four weeks, but previous to this she had been ailing for the past six weeks. The late Mrs. Green, who was 88 years of age, had not been enjoying the best of health for the past twelve years, having at that time slipped on an icy part of the sidewalk, breaking her hip, thereby crippling her. The deceased's maiden name was Mary Ann Mitchell, she being a daughter of the late Capt. Thos. Mitchell of the township of Emily, who had charge of a company in the rebellion of 1837. On September 30th, 1858, she was married to Mr. Edward Green by the Rev. Mr. Roger of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and both celebrated their golden wedding last year. For over 46 years Mrs. Green lived with her husband at the late residence, Water street, and was the last representative of a large family of sisters and brothers. She was one of the oldest members of George street Methodist church, always being a faithful attendant, and was also for some years a member of the Ladies' Aid Society. Besides her husband, one son, Mr. W. F. Green, is left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery. The family request that no flowers be sent.

The Largest Grape Crop Ever Grown

(Special to The Times.)

Grimsby, Aug. 26.—Growers seem pretty well satisfied that the grape crop as far as the district from Jordan to Winona goes, will be the largest and cleanest ever. There is now not the slightest evidences of insect pests or rot over this central area. Perhaps a little more moisture might be beneficial to the size of the fruit, as the hot weather is maturing it fast.

The acreage will also be slightly larger than former seasons, as many young vineyards are now for the first time coming into bearing; in fact, nearly half of the clay lands below the mountain is being steadily utilized for grapes. If weather prospects turn out as the companies and growers expect, there will be no dearth of a market for Niagara district grapes, no matter how extensive the planting.

Heavy shipments west to Winnipeg and farther will be made for the first time next month.

Competition with British Columbia fruit in western markets has been a drawback, but it is now felt that the latter's products can be safely sent out in quantities with a large and sure profit.

Crystal is Safe

The Provincial inspector of the moving picture houses was in the city yesterday, and visited the Crystal theater. He was pleased with everything, which he found strictly in accordance with the requirements of the new act governing moving picture shows. He commended Mr. Edwards very highly upon the condition of his premises.

The Council Decided to Build Benson Ave. Walk Inside the Tree Line

Benson street sidewalk will be constructed on the inside of the tree line as it was started, unless the residents on that thoroughfare apply for an injunction. The council decided yesterday morning by a tie vote to place the walk on the inside. The mayor sided with Ald. Phelan, and the matter was settled so far as the council was concerned.

As was predicted by The Times yesterday morning the meeting was a decidedly warm one.

Three of the aldermen stated that they believed the walk should go inside and they voted that way.

A special meeting of the council was called at 10 o'clock as a result of Tuesday night's meeting, and Ald Duffus was the only one absent who was at Ald. Gillespie's office the night before. Shortly after ten o'clock his Worship Mayor Rush took the chair and called the meeting to order. Those present were, Aldermen Phelan, Turner, McIntyre, Gillespie, Buller, Duncan, Morgan and Metheral. In the back benches were all the residents of Benson Ave., except two ladies and one man, who found it impossible to get down. A few spectators were also present.

Ald. Phelan was first asked by the mayor to explain his position. This the chairman of the Board of Works did. He went over briefly, the circumstances which led up to the laying of the Benson street walk. He said the engineer, Mr. Hay, recommended the inside of the tree line, the Board of Works had originally decided upon the inside of the tree line, the Government engineer and architect, who were here in connection with the Normal school decided that the inside was the best. The chairman said that he was only acting in the best interests of the people and that he was doing the best he could.

The walks around the school, the driveway to the school and the school property, had all been laid out according to Mr. Hay's levels, and for the inside of the tree line. The chairman said he had no personal interest in where that walk or any other walk in the city should go. All that he wanted to do was what was best for the city.

He did not consider that it was fair to the engineer, to the chairman of the Board of Works, or to the committee to allow a couple of interested individuals to come down and corral the Board of Works and even the whole council. It was unfair and very poor encouragement for a man who spent as much time as he did to the city's interests to be treated as he has been treated in this matter, and especially when he was doing the very best he could.

Ald. Turner said his understanding was that the Board of Works was to interview the Government engineer when he came here and that the residents on Benson street were to be notified to be at the meeting and discuss the question together. The engineer has been here and no meeting was called. It made no difference personally to him where the walk went, but he thought that the people who were paying 60 per cent. of the cost should be considered and if it made no great difference their wishes should be considered. As a member of the Board of Works he also wished to be considered in matters of this kind. He presented the arguments of the ratepayers who had agreed to overcome all the obstacles the engineer said were in the way and he could not see why the walk should not go on the outside. Every ratepayer on the street is of one opinion. They are not biased, however, and would consent to the walk going inside if they could be SOUND DOCTRINE.

Premier Morris, of Newfoundland, pronouncing that the Imperial Defence conference has been a wonderful success, adds:

"It would be regarded by the historian as the most effective step taken in our day to preserve the peace of the world."

Exactly, says our esteemed contemporary, the Ottawa Journal. Make the British empire a power which can not be assailed with success, and have a great guarantee of the world's peace. The empire itself will not assail any other power unjustly. No one part, not even England, could drag the other parts into an unjust war.

On the other hand, break up the empire, and what will be the case? A Canada independent and weak (unless she builds up a bigger naval and military force than she would need to do as part of the empire) tempting to the aggression of the United States and the temper of Japan; an Australia independent and weak (unless, like Canada, going into big defence expense), subject to Oriental attack; a South Africa independent and weak, with German possessions bordering upon it, tempting German encroachment; a weakened Britain, with possessions all over the world, inviting friction with nations which had come to surpass Great Britain in power. Two consequences would be sure. First, a far greater likelihood of wars in the world than at present. Secondly, a far greater development of "militarism" owing to the determination the various separated English-speaking states of the world would at once show each in the endeavor to develop a military and naval force than any part of the present British empire will need to provide if proceeding in union with the rest of the empire.

FAILURES OF WOMEN IN BUSINESS.

The London Board of Trade has issued a report showing that in 1907 444 women in business became bankrupts. Of these 208 were married, 154 were widows, and 82 were spinsters. As the number of women in business is not stated, there is no information as to the proportion of successes to failures.

The bankrupts were engaged in business as follows: Dressmaking and millinery, 49; grocers, 37; drapers and haberdashers, 34; lodging-house keepers, 22; publicans and hotelkeepers, 21; confectioners, 20; tobacconists, 14; butchers, 12; stationers, 11 boot and shoe dealers, 10.

Following the publication of the report a successful modiste of May-fair was asked, "Why do dressmakers fail?" She replied: "Too little capital, too long credit and lack of hereditary business instinct." She criticised the effort of beginners with small capital to locate in fashionable districts where rents are high. Failure to deliver completed gowns at the time promised was also said to be a cause of bankrupt.

On the other hand, the head of a firm of accountants ascribed the failures to the feminine way of counting on immediate profits, without making allowance for the long period required to build up a business.

ELECTRICAL POWER IN CANADA.

A report issued by the Department of the Interior at Ottawa shows the present development of electrical energy from water power in the several Provinces and the amount available for development works now under way. FOREST RANGER'S STORY.

Wholesale Pillaging of Timber By Leblanc Woodcutters.

Quebec, August 26.—Yesterday afternoon's sitting of the Prevost-Kelly commission brought out some of the most startling evidence yet adduced of the wholesale pillaging of forest lands in Bonaventure. Mr. Lajoie, forest ranger, who was sworn at the morning sitting continued his testimony and was kept on the witness stand by Mr. Prevost all afternoon. Describing his visit of inspection to the upper part of the county he said that the so-called settlers that he had seen there were nothing but a lot of woodcutters for Mr. Leblanc.

In his 24 years' experience as a forest ranger and explorer, he had never seen better limits than those so pillaged, said Lajoie. On both sides of the Bonaventure River as far as the 13th range Leblanc had the best of the timber. He knew by the logs that he saw in his drive. He was no longer in the employ of Mr. Robitaille, who was an adversary of Mr. Kelly. For some time he worked for Edwards & McLean, but resigned his office in 1907. Asked his reason for resigning he said, that he was afraid for his life. He was asked his reasons for this fear, and said it was a long story. He had been threatened often and once had been badly scalded by Leblanc's men while counting logs for the Government at his mill. The men opened the steam exhaust pipe on him as he was passing by, the volume of steam striking him on the back of the neck, knocking him down and almost killing him.

A. R. Kelly laughed at the telling of this story, and Mr. Prevost declared that he did not think it was much of a laughing matter. This was before the sale of the Robitaille limits to Edwards and McLean. He said that Leblanc's woodcutters moved from lot to lot as they exhausted the timber. This was before the election of Mr. Kelly to the Legislature in 1904. Mr. Maguire was then Crown Lands agent. Witness complained that Maguire paid more attention to his practice as a physician than to his duties as Crown Lands agent. He was succeeded by Mr. Blanchet, who was followed by Mr. Dorais. They were no better agents than Mr. Maguire. He notified Mr. Kelly on several occasions of the plundering of timber from the Government lots. He was still employed was still employed by the Government. Asked if he inspected lots alone, he said that he frequently went with other inspectors and made joint reports. Several lumber merchants operating in Bonaventure had cut wood below the legal dimensions He testified that he had met Mr. Jessup, the stepson of Mr. Leblanc, who in 1906 was employed conveying provisions and supplies to a lumber camp of 30 men who were working for Alex. Babin and Gosselin Leblanc, the latter being a brother of Mr. L. R. Leblanc. The timber they were employed in cutting belonged to Mrs. Jessup, who was a young man and a bachelor and had purchased his lot from Mr. Dorais at the sale in Mr. Kelly's office. The commission then adjourned.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Halls Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh is a constitutional disease, requiring a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WANT BIG INSURANCE.

Pittsburg, Aug. 27.—The Pressed Steel Car Company is the market for $4,000,000 insurance, and the men who look after business of that character are doing their best to provide the corporation with the required protection. When the policies are issued they will probably be over the names of no less than 200 companies and it will be the largest insurance deal Pittsburg has known in many years, if, indeed, it does not break the record. The matter has been under consideration for some time, it is understood, and the company has placed the matter in the hands of a competent agency in this city.

Another Search to Be Made for the Gold.

Adams and several others, who have at some previous time searched for the wealth of Captain Kidd that is supposed to be buried on Oak Island, in Mahone Bay, have gone to Chester and will start operations next week. They say they are going after the treasure from an engineering standpoint and have the treasure inside of two weeks, and say: "If we cannot get it in a month it will be no use, there is no treasure there."

TURQUOISE COPPER

NOT A PROSPECT

400 FOOT TUNNEL—140 FOOT SHAFT

Mines located near Valardena, Durango, Mexico, only six miles by wagon road and three miles straight line from the property of the Guggenheims upon which they have recently erected a $2,000,000 smelter. Sample assays have averaged from $84 to $102 per ton.

Up to the present time, the Turquoise Copper Co., has been practically a close corporation; an initial offering of 100,000 shares has just been made at 25 cents, par value $1.00, full paid and non-assessable. Proceeds will be used to further continue the development work already begun.

We have options on 50,000 shares of this stock and advise immediate purchase at 25 cents per share. It is the intention of The Board of Directors to list the stock on the New York Curb and it should sell at $1.00 per share by the first of the year.

Write now for prospectus and Mining Engineer's report.

LEACH & CO., INC.
STOCK BROKERS—MANCHESTER, N.H.

$90,000---7 Per Cent.

9,000 Shares 7 Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock ($10 a Share) Offered at Par with 40 Per Cent Immediate Bonus of Common Stock We Reserve the Right to Withdraw Offer Without Notice and to Return any Subscription Received Too Late. Previous Offerings Were Immediately Oversubscribed.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND BANK OFFICERS, LAWYERS, PHYSICIANS, MINISTERS, BUSINESS MEN AND OTHERS HAVE BECOME STOCKHOLDERS IN THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY WITHIN THE PAST FEW MONTHS.

Presidents and Cashiers of Banks, Presidents and other officers of Insurance Companies and of prominent business concerns who are thoroughly qualified to pass upon the soundness of such a proposition have comended the investment and have put their own money into it.

Many leading Physicians, Ministers and Educators in all the big cities of the United States and several in Europe have very highly endorsed THE CIRCLE MAGAZINE and THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY, and have been glad to become part owners in the enterprise.

These men, and a good many splendid women, also, have known THE CIRCLE for several years and have watched it grow better and stronger constantly. They know what a sterling good property it is; they know that it is founded on a plan that ought to success, and they know that it is held always true to that plan; they know from personal experience that its business methods are good, careful, and conservative, yet aggressive and successful; they are convinced, therefore, that there is a large and very profitable career ahead of THE CIRCLE PUBLISHING COMPANY. For these reasons they have been glad of a chance to get some of its stock.

Twice we offered by letter, without any blow of trumpets, Five Thousand Shares of our Cumulative Seven Per Cent, Preferred Stock for subscription. Each time the Five Thousand Shares were promptly over-subscribed before we could finish sending out the letters to the selected list. There are only Twenty Thousand Shares of Preferred Stock in all, therefore more than half was taken up at once, and we have not offered the balance until now.

For a short time we are going to give the same opportunity to those who did not receive our letters: but as the amount is necessarily limited, prompt action will be required.

HERE IS THE PLAN: The Capital Stock of The Circle Publishing Company is $500,000, of which $200,000 is Preferred Stock with 7 per cent. Cumulative dividend, and $300,000 is Common Stock upon which all dividends over and above the 7 per cent. on the Preferred Stock will be paid. Measured by the opportunities for rapid development of the business and by the known earnings of other great magazine and book publishing properties, the dividends on the Common Stock should soon exceed the fixed dividend on the Preferred Stock, and our Plan gives you some of both kinds.

The following extract from an article in a recent number of Leslie's Weekly is to the point:

"HOW A FEW DOLLARS MADE A FORTUNE"

"Among the most interesting commercial facts in this country are the astonishing fortunes which are being made by magazine publishers.

"Every year more than the immense sum of about $80,000,000 is spent in buying advertising space and in buying copies of periodicals. A large portion of this huge amount of money becomes profits for magazine owners.

"The great popular monthly publications have risen to wealth and prominence so quickly that only $100 invested in Munsey's a few years ago is now worth between $36,000 and $12,000, and is earning dividends at the rate of $1,000 a year.

"McClure's Magazine made a profit for its stockholders of 1,000 per cent. in about ten years. The total annual income of The Ladies' Home Journal and The Saturday Evening Post, both of which are owned by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, is not far from $6,000,000. The Cosmopolitan, Everybody's, The Outlook, and others, are immensely profitable.

"Unfortunately, however, magazine readers have rarely had an opportunity to share in these splendid earnings. Nearly all the magazines are in each case owned by a few individuals, who receive all the enormous income.

"A chance to secure an interest in one of the great popular magazines, on a basis that insures absolute safety and gives a liberal share of all the profits of the business, is an opportunity that attracts the immediate attention of the shrewdest investors."

OUR OFFER IS THIS: The par value of all shares is $10. They are full paid and non-assessable. The taxes on the stock are paid in full. Nine thousand shares of the Cumulative 7 per cent Preferred Stock are offered now at ten dollars a share, par. Every subscriber for five shares of Preferred Stock will be given a bonus of one share of Common Stock and will be made also a life subscriber for THE CIRCLE Magazine without additional payment. A subscriber for any multiple of five shares will be given a corresponding number of shares of Common Stock, as bonus, and will be allowed to present a life subscription for THE CIRCLE as a gift to some relative or friend for each five shares of Preferred Stock subscribed. Additional shares of Common Stock may be substituted in lieu of life subscriptions as bonus, or vice-versa. Thus, ten shares of Preferred Stock will entitle the subscriber to two shares of Common Stock and two life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or four shares of Common Stock. One hundred shares of Preferred Stock will carry with them a bonus of twenty shares of Common Stock and twenty life subscriptions for THE CIRCLE, or forty shares of Common Stock.

If you can not afford to take five or more shares, you may subscribe for three shares, and with such a subscription we will give you either the life subscription for THE CIRCLE or a bonus of one share of Common Stock, as you prefer.

We must say now, however, that this offer with its bonus is conditioned upon your prompt acceptance, and we reserve the right to withdraw or modify the offer without further notice.

YOU NEED NOT SEND ALL THE MONEY NOW IF NOT CONVENIENT TO DO SO, but write at once, saying how many of the 9,000 shares you will take and how soon you will be ready to pay for them. Ten per cent. of the amount of your subscription should be sent at the time of making the reservation. If more convenient to you the total amount may be divided into several instalments. Please use one of the Application Forms below, or a copy of the same.

Just an earnest word or two: You ought to know something about the "Plan" and aim of THE CIRCLE. We are all deeply in earnest about this matter. Every one of the men and women who now control the editorial and the business policy of the magazine is pledged to the carrying onward to its highest possible success the work of making a great, high-class, popular magazine of world-wide circulation which shall portray and encourage the good in individual, social, business, and political life, rather than the evil; which shall stand for peace rather than war; which shall search out beauty rather than ugliness; which shall build up rather than tear down; which shall constantly plan and labor, and co-operate with those who are planning and laboring, to make this world a better and happier place to live in, both for the poor and the wealthy, for the unlearned and the learned, for the weak and for the strong.

This is not mere rainbow painting. It is a real and definite program, based upon strong convictions and practical plans. We know that there are many splendid men and women who are in sympathy with this program and want to see it carried out. They know, as we know, that there is a positive cure in sunshine and fresh air. The poisonous, ill-smelling places often can be purified and made beautiful just by letting in the sunlight and the sweet winds of heaven. No man can remain a pessimist who will open his eyes and his heart to the good and the beautiful around him. All he need do is to give it just a fair share of his attention. It will surely sweeten his blood, cheer and lift up his heart, lighten his step, brighten the glance of his eyes, and inspire him in his work. There is plenty of evil to fight, and it calls for strenuous and constant effort, but the man who sees nothing but the evil will never be able to overcome much of it. You who will help to support and boldly develop and broaden the work of THE CIRCLE Magazine, until its influence is felt in countless American homes, satisfying the great need, recognized or unrecognized, of American life—you who will help to accomplish this will come closer to the hearts of multitudes of people and do more universal and lasting good than can be done in any restricted field. No single instrument within the grasp of any group of men can be so effective as this great, clean, purposeful magazine in bringing to pass that "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," for which the world has been waiting for so many centuries.

This is a business enterprise. We want to make money for ourselves and for our stockholders, and we shall do so; but this business enterprise—this sound, common-sense, money-making enterprise is inspired with an ideal; this corporation has a soul.

Men of long and successful experience in the magazine and book publishing business and in financial affairs make up the Board of Officers and Directors of The Circle Publishing Company.
